OTTAWA, April 12—A list of decorations and medals conferred upon members of the Canadian expeditionary force up to March 17, together with the names of those "mentioned in despatches" was presented to Parliament to-day. The length of the list testifies to the gallantry which the Canadians have shown, and to the high value placed by the Imperial Government upon other services not performed at the front.

Five Canadians have been awarded the most coveted decoration in the British army, the Victoria Cross. They are Major R. D. McCuaig, 13th Battalion; Capt. F. A. C. Scrimzer, 4th; Lieut. F. W. Campbell, 1st. Lance-Corporal F. Fisher, 13th; and Color-Sergeant F. W. Hall, 8th.

Sir Douglas Haig Praises Canadians

"Gallant Fighting of the Canadians in Neighbourhood of St. Eloi inflicted Heavy Losses on the Enemy During the Last Week

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

LONDON, April 12.—"It has now been established that the gallant fighting of the Canadians in this neighbourhood (St. Eloi) inflicted heavy losses on the enemy during the last week."

The foregoing sentence is contained in the official despatch received to-night from Sir Douglas Haig at British headquarters in France.

Although the casualties resulting from the attacks on the craters is not yet known, every preparation is being made on this side for the reception of a large number of Canadian wounded, who are expected to arrive shortly at Folkestone and other Canadian hospitals.

Activity on British Lines.

The British official report also records three unsuccessful attacks by the Germans near Ypres. The enemy in the first of these gained a foothold in the British trenches, but was quickly driven out. The report continues:

"Last night we made a small, successful raid on enemy trenches near Richebourg L'Avoue. About ten Germans were killed.

"The enemy last evening made three successive attacks west of the Pilkelm-Ypres road. He first gained a footing in our trenches, but was quickly driven out. Other attacks were repulsed, the Germans leaving about 25 dead in front of our trenches and three prisoners in our hands. We bombarded enemy trenches in this area to-day.

"There was considerable artillery activity to-day north-west of Wytschaete and some shelling about Souchez, Carnency and Calonne. Behind St. Eloi there has been heavy hostile shelling, but little shelling on the front lines and craters."

THE 93RD BAND HAS SUCCESSFUL LAKEFIELD VISIT

Played on Street in Afternoon and at Most Enjoyable Concert in the Evening—A Splendid Programme Was Given

SPLENDID ADRESSES

The visit of the band of the 93rd battalion to Lakefield yesterday was a great success and apparently thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated by the citizens of that patriotic village whose sons have responded so readily to the call for men. The band arrived on the noon train and in the afternoon played a number of lively selections on the street. The school children were given a half holiday and it was a gala day generally. Lt.-Col Johnston, and Lieut. de Puyjalon accompanied the band.

Last night the band assisted by Co. Sergt. Major Hartshorn, Pte. W. Farr and Master Percy Luther gave a very enjoyable concert in the Town Hall which was crowded to the doors. Standing room was at a premium and the band, soloists and speakers were given a flattering reception.

Mr. Geo. B. Hilliard of Lakefield both of whose sons are in the Canadian Expeditionary Force made an ideal chairman. In his introductory address he paid high tribute to the 93rd battalion which he had said had won a very splendid reputation for good behaviour and discipline. He was sure that they were an uncommonly fine body of men who were made of the right stuff. Lakefield had done splendidly but there were still a few men left who could go to the front and he hoped they would come forward quickly and join their comrades.

The programme was a most enjoyable one. The band was in fine fettle and under the direction of bandmaster Hughes contributed such splendid numbers as "Raymond" the selection from "William Tell" and "Les Cloches de St. Malo" in most effective fashion. Their playing delighted the large audience who were warm in their expressions of praise.

The cornet duet by bandmaster Paxton and Walon was brilliantly played, while bandsmen W. Loader and H. Loader scored heavily in their concertina duet. The solos by Co. Sergt. Major Hartshorn and Pte. Farr were splendidly sung and in each case encores were demanded. The little recruiting sergeant, Master Percy Luther made his usual big hit with his recitations and was warmly praised by the chairman.

The addresses while necessarily brief were a feature of the evening. Splendid patriotic addresses were made by Rev. Mr. Barrett, Rev. Father Meagher and Rev. Mr. Slimon, three Lakefield clergymen who briefly but emphatically pointed out the need of the hour and the justice of the cause. Rev. Father Meagher who comes from Tipperary, Ireland said that in Canada we have a country well worth fighting for.

Lt.-Col. Johnston who was received with cheers informed the audience that Lakefield might be proud of her sons in the 93rd battalion. There was not a single black mark to the discredit of any Lakefield member of the battalion. The conduct of the battalion as a whole had been splendid. Col. Johnston remarked that he did not claim any special credit for that. It was due to the men themselves and to the training in the home from which they came.

Adjutant McElhiney said that sometimes people had thought that where a body of soldiers was stationed in a city or town, the morals of that particular place would suffer. He was able to say that Peterborough was as clean and pure now as if the 93rd battalion had not been there. He said a very high tribute to the good conduct of the battalion and assured the wives and mothers present that they

Bon-fires Are Prohibited

Authorities Will Take Action Against Persons Who Persist in Starting Bonfires

The prevalence of bonfires throughout the city has caused the Fire Department considerable concern and trouble. Persons imbued with the spirit of the season are prone to cremate the rubbish that is collected from the back-yard. It is contrary to the by-law to start a bonfire within one hundred feet of any building, and in future it is the intention of the authorities to see that this regulation is enforced. In the words of one official, there is no excuse for burning the refuse, now that a system of garbage collection has been instituted.

Adjourned Meeting Of The Playgrounds Association

A meeting of the Playgrounds Association will be held in the Council Chamber on Monday evening at eight o'clock to receive the report of the Nominating committee and to appoint committees.

All interested in this movement for the welfare of the children of our city are urgently requested to be present that there be no delay in the season's work. Annie E. Mowat, Convener of Nominating committee.

THE PARK STREET PROBLEM.

On this page is an article dealing generally with the difficulties encountered in the construction of the outfall sewer on Park street. These have been overcome in some ways, and these difficulties had no reflex action in themselves. But the work involves another problem, that of bringing Park street to a usable condition. The completion of the service will leave the street in an impassable and impossible condition, and that will be a problem for the city to wrestle with, which cannot be delayed, without adversely affecting a big industry's interests directly and, indirectly, the interests of the city generally. Peterborough is no mean city, the seventh largest city in the Dominion, and we have a reputation, for at least surface decency, to gain if not to live up to. We are an industrial city, and our prosperity and growth depend upon industrial development —additions to our industries. It is well to offer inducements to manufacturers to locate here, but it is more important in the sense of honour, as well as interest, to look well after those we have induced to locate here.

The De Laval Company is one of our chief industries and a valuable asset in our industrial balance sheet. It does a large business and has large quantities of freight to move inward and outward. For months it has been indicted in this regard through sewer work obstruction to traffic; and things will not much better after this work is completed unless drastic treatment be given Park street, which will, as left by sewer operations, be absolutely impassable till it is metalled in some form and made fit for heavy traffic. At present the barricade of earth opposite the King Edward school grounds is in the way of street treatment. Frost may delay putting this mound into the trench; but it seems that a little more rapid progress could be made. To expedite matters the surface of thawed earth could be more rapidly removed, and this would expose the frozen under layers to more rapid thawing. Now is the time, as now is the need, to have this matter more energetically dealt with. Labour is more plentiful now before the general spring activity opens, and it seems this circumstance should be taken advantage of.

Though sewer operations may delay putting Park street in this vicinity into general usable condition, something emergent might be done. At present it is said to be impossible to move heavy loads from the Company's yards to even the comparative better road on Princess street. If a cross section of Park street from the company's yard gates to Princess street were at once dealt with, levelled and metalled immediate relief, if not full relief, would be given. The present absolute embargo upon freight movements by the De Laval Works would at least be partly raised. This cross section of road on Park street would help and not be a temporary work either. It could be made to fit in with the future treatment of Park street, that will have to be given after the sewer work is completed. If the Works Department of the city would take on the spirit of military activity that builds long stretches of roads to carry traffic vehicles of mountainous weight in a day and builds bridges in a night, the traffic conditions on Park street could be quickly improved.

THE OUTFALL SEWER.

Peterborough has on its hands a fairly large, "white elephant," in the form of the outfall sewer. This is not said in disparagement of the necessity and usefulness of the completed work, but relates to the immense difficulties of construction. There could not probably be found in any city in Canada a more obstinate, embarrassing and exasperating site for the construction of such a work than Park street, throughout its length, so far as sewer work has been done. Quicksand all the way, and water some of the way, have combined to make the work difficult. Quicksand not only makes excavation difficult—necessitating steel sheet piling for the lower parts of the trench sides and wood above— hard and slow to place and hard and slow to take out. Then the quicksand unstable as water, and more so, makes the work of preparing a proper bed for the sewer pipe a most arduous and expensive matter. The pipe laying is the critical part of the work, and upon its practical perfection and stability depend the value for the large amount of money the difficulty of the work has involved. Few persons have or can form any idea of the hard and complicated problem of preparing an artificial foundation upon the quivering quicksand for, say, three foot sewer pipes—a foundation that must be rigid and permanent.

The work has been carried on all winter under the embarrassing conditions that severe weather imposes. Complicated arrangements had to be made for thawing out a stretch of frozen surface for next day's digging—a grill work of perforated pipes fifteen or twenty feet long and the width of the trench, covered with boards, and over these layers of canvass, had steam passed through them during the night to soften the frost-hardened soil. This is an indication of only one phase of the immense difficulties encountered, and it is no wonder that John Thimbeck, the foreman, couldn't sleep o' nights; no wonder that he would jump from a brief sleep with the cry—get out lads, she's coomin' in."

But the work went on and has been renewed this spring. The excavation and pipe laying have reached Romaine street and it looks as if the Grand Trunk track would be soon crossed on the way north to Rink street.

Meanwhile Park street, from the railway track south to near Princess street, is practically impassable, except to a sparrow. The Engineering Department sign— "No Thoroughfare," half hid behind heaps of earth seems a useless irony. We don't know what a mine crater such as they manufacture in the war zone is like, but this stretch of Park street seems to resemble what we think a mine crater would be like. Alongside the King Edward school grounds a huge earthwork of sand thrown out of the trench in the winter, and caught in the grip of the frost and fixed there till a thaw comes, alongside a gaping trench seven or eight feet wide, irregularly filled, suggests what we might think the upheaval caused by an exploded mine would be like. And the little earth slides on the edges of the trench repeat in miniature the chromic earth shifts of the Panama Canal.

The little mountain range of earth on Park street opposite part of the De Laval buildings is not only no ornament, but a serious embarrassment, which it is hoped will soon be removed. Removal is slow, for the trench at this point can only be filled as fast as the frost is released from the huge bank of earth.

After the sewer laying work is completed, Park street south will present a new problem. It has been ripped up mercilessly and the trench filling has been done under great difficulties. The matter of tamping was out of the question and the uneven surface of the street left, subject to subsidence, will require a good deal of engineering skill and a good deal of expensive work before the street is put into good shape. And there should be as little delay as may be. We owe it to one of our largest and most important industries, to make things as easy as possible. The street should be put in good shape as soon as possible, so that the movement of supplies in, and the movement of goods out, shall not be made difficult or impossible any longer than possible. The outfall sewer is an expensive necessity, largely forced upon us by the Provincial Board of Health. It may be for our own good ultimately; but in the meantime it is a great nuisance and obstruction to traffic and a heartbreak for those having responsibility in connection with its construction.

PADDING THE ESTIMATES—WHY?

Although the Government have been given ample opportunity to explain the mystery as to why the estimates presented by the Minister of Finance were padded to the extent of between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000, they have so far failed to do so. It was Mr. J. J. Hughes, of Prince Edward Island, who brought the matter up in the Budget discussion. He said:

He (the Minister of Finance) is asking for $135,000,000 on Consolidated Fund Account. He has made the statement that he did not intend to expend between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 of that money. . . . I do not know whether this is constitutional or not. It seems to me to be trifling with Parliament. The fact is that the Minister of Finance has lost control of his colleagues at the head of the large spending departments, if he ever had control, and he is obliged to come to Parliament and say that the Government intend to expend between $23,000,000 and $30,000,000 less than the Estimates, in order to protect himself from his colleagues. . . . Another reason that suggests itself is that when preparing these estimates the Government expected to have an election this year and they deliberately padded the estimates in order to deceive the public. If that is the case we have a degree of political obliquity which is a discredit to the Dominion.

Might we ask once more, what was the Government's reason for including in the estimates twenty or thirty million dollars which they did not "intend" to expend?—Montreal Herald.

A CONFERENCE MOMENTOUS.

The conference which was recently held at Paris by the allied nations was undoubtedly the greatest international gathering in the history of the world, while the issues to be determined were of a more momentous character than any international conference which has yet been held has had to consider.

The nations represented were the British Empire with its population of 425,000,000; the Russian Empire, 171,000,000; France, 40,000,000; Italy, 35,000,000; Japan, 53,000,000, Belgium, 7,500,000; Serbia, 4,5000,000; Portugal, 6,000,000. Thus 742,000,000 people, one-half the population of the earth, were represented by their chief political and military heads. One would like to have a dictagraph report of the proceedings. Some things we have been told. We know, for example, that these powers have decided that Germany shall never again be permitted to concentrate her strength against any one of them, and we know also that the alliance is to be kept up after the war in order to secure favoured nation treatment in trade matters between the powers represented. We also know that there has been a renewed pledge that not one of the powers will make a separate peace with Germany, but that all shall hang together until victory is achieved. There are, however, some things we do not know. We are not told, for example, if any recriminations were indulged in because of lack of co-operation between the allied powers at important stages of the war so far as it has gone, and we are not told if any reproaches were cast on Italy for failing to cooperate in the Balkan business, or to declare war against Germany. Nor do we know just what part Japan took in the deliberations. We are left to suppose that everything was harmonious, and this was probably the case. At least, the camaraderie which has thus far existed between the allied powers is certainly one of the wonders of the age, and augurs much for the future peace of the world. So long as the present alliance can be maintained it will be in a position to keep the Teutonic powers in check, and to make the mad dream of Duetschland uber Allef so impossible of realization that even the Prussian junkers will be willing to accept The Hague tribunal, rather than the sword, as the arbitrator in all international disputes.—Brantford Expositor.

BAGDAD EXPECTS SIEGE.

Civilian Inhabitants Have Been Ordered to Leave.

LONDON, April 11.—Mohammedan civilians have been ordered by the Turkish War Office to leave Bagdad, says a despatch from Zurich. Turkish and German army officers have begun to prepare the city to withstand a siege.

GERMANY'S OFFICIAL ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF A FAILING FIGHT

Mr. Asquith has exposed the boastfulness and insincerity of the Imperial German Chancellor's latest peace speech. There is another phase, however, that the re-reading of it impresses on the mind—that fact that, despite its arrogance, it is tinged with melancholy and ill-concealed anxiety. What a change has come over the spirit of the Teutonic dream of world-wide conquest! Only a few weeks ago the German domination of Poland was taken for granted. To-day, according to von Bethmann-Hollweg: "Neither Germany nor Austria-Hungary intended to touch the Polish question, but the fate of battles brought them in contact with them." The fate of battles will also bring them out of it. A few months ago Germany actually annexed Belgium. To-day von Bethmann Howwweg says: "After the war there must be a new Belgium. A few months ago the Huns were eating fire and brimstone and breathing slaughter and extermination of the whole British Empire. To-day the Chancellor says: "If our adversaries want to continue the slaughter of human beings and the devastation of Europe, theirs will be the guilt, and we shall have to stand it as men. Their advarsaries do not want to continue the slaughter of human beings or the devastation of Europe; but they will continue the slaughter of Germans, and by carrying the devastation into Germany give the Huns a taste of their own medicine, until they make up their minds to take their licking like gentlemen.

"Our enemies wish to destroy united, free Germany," said the Chancellor. What a pitiful joke! Germany has not been free for a hundred years and her enemies simply want to defend themselves against German oppression, bullying and robbery. "Of all the nations in the war," says von Bethmann-Hollweg, "only Germany has been threatened by her enemies and by their responsible spokesmen with annihilation, with partition of her realm, with destruction of her essential political and economic forces, no matter whether they call them Prussianism of militarism or barbarism." Does not that suggest to the gentle novice that Germany alone is regarded as the outcast among the nations, and that there must be a reason for the universal condemnation? What about Belgium? Did not Germany threaten Belgium with annihilation—and try to carry the threat into execution?

A few months ago the Germans were threatening the annihilation of the British Empire and the wresting from Britannia of the sovereignty of the seas. To-day, on this most interesting subject the Imperial German Chancellor must significantly says—nothing. The whole apologetic oration is obviously an attempt to let the German Government and the Hohenzollerns down "easy." It is the official recognition of a lost cause, qualified by characteristic German bluster. "We fight for our existence and for our future. For Germany and not for space in a foreign country are Germany's sons bleeding and dying on the battlefield." What a change from the spirit which dictated the annexation of Belgium, and acquisition of "a place in the sun", the expulsion of Britain from Egypt and India, and "the freedom of the seas" under the German flag! The Chancellor has learned some thing from the logis of events, but his education is not yet complete.—Montreal Heraldy

HARDWARE PRICES

SHOT TO PIECES

We beg to announce to the people of Peterborough and surrounding country that we have purchased the

$25,000 Stock of The Morgan Hardware Co., Limited

AT A LOW RATE ON THE DOLLAR, and further that it is our intention to turn this stock into money within the next thirty days. This stock is made up entirely of BRAND NEW GOODS, and you may count on buying FIRST-QUALITY HARDWARE at about

HALF THE USUAL PRICE

Mis-management and over-buying made it necessary for the Morgan people to sell out at a tremendous sacrifice for money talks with a very loud voice these days, and like every other fellow with the Spot Cash we were able to obtain a great bargain. Their loss is your gain, and the wise buyer will take advantage of this sale and buy his hardware requirements for a year to come.

We will open our doors on Saturday morning, April 15th, at Seven o'clock, and it will pay you to be up early and on the job.

To all Storekeepers handling Hardware and to contractors purchasing in wholesale quantities we might say that you, too, cannot afford to overlook this opportunity, for we are in a position to fill your orders at much lower prices than can be obtained from the largest wholesale houses, and it needs but a trial order to convince you of this fact.

We enumerate here only a few of the lines that we offer and may say that these are merely samples of the startling values that will prevail throughout the entire sale—for we intend to sell the entire stock off, and if you do not get your share of the bargains that are being offered, you have only yourself to blame.

Remember, this is a GENUINE SALE. We are strangers to Peterborough, but elsewhere our name stands for straightforward business methods and we are not foolish enough to spend our good money in fake advertising, for that kind of business never spelled success for anybody.

DON'T MISS THE BARGAINS for you never have had and probably never will have a chance like this again. Watch the newspapers for we will have more to say to you later.

It will give you a better looking job and at less cost than any other paint you can use, either ready-mixed or hand made.

S. W. P. colors are clear and bright; and they retain their original shade for the longest time.

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

Annual Report Published Shows a Bewildering Maze of Figures—Where Students Come From—Outsiders as Well as Ontario's Students —Peterboro's Representation

Ontario's education is costly, but if not extravagant, is worth while. The Toronto University is essentially a Provincial affair. Out of a total enrollment of students in the year ending June 30, 1915, there were 3,910 Ontario students enrolled out of 4,476 of a total enrollment. Of this total 48 were registered as both from Ontario and abroad.

Almost half the Ontario students come from Toronto, but the balance are spread well over the province, Glengarry being the only county that has absolutely no registration whatever, while Haliburton has only one.

Registration by Provinces runs as follows:

	Totals.
Ontario—
Province	2,312
Toronto	1,498
Nova Scotia	17
New Brunswick	6
Prince Edward Island	6
Quebec	18
Manitoba	40
Saskatchewan	88
Alberta	63
British Columbia	64
Yukon	4
United States	81
Elsewhere	96
Occasionals	83
Total	4,476

Fees collected from students last year amounted to $271,279.91, with expenditures of $949,630.02. The annual statement, published in a blue book form, is a tangled mass of statistics, which make a good day's work to untangle for a layman. A simple statement of money received, and spent, and money received and not spent, would be a valuable addition to the book, where the ordinary person could look and see at a glance how the University stands. The balance of the book could be left as it is now for mathematical sharks and statistic-eating animals to masticate. This would lead to a better understanding of the finances of the Universityf—if such is desired.

The students in the University of Toronto from the Province of Ontario are distributed as follows:

CALL FRESH TROOPS TO COLOURS IN ITALY

ROME, April 12—By Royal decree the following classes of reservists are called immediately to the colors: Men born in 1890 and who have served in the cavalry; men born in 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895 and 1896 and who have served in the mounted artillery and men born in 1892, 1893, 1894 and 1895 and who have served in the engineers, as well as all men in the territorial militia who have served in the cavalry, and also men of the transport service for artillery and engineers.

Former Captain of Military Police In Lindsay, a Deserter

LINDSAY, April 13.—It has been given out around town that one of the 58th Battalion from Lindsay who left here about one year ago deserted from the regiment the night previous to that assigned the company to leave Brockville for England and the fellow has never been seen since though his whereabouts is sought for by the Militia Department.

While in Lindsay he served as Captain of the miltary police and professed to be a native of Sweden. He spoke German, Swedish, French, Yidish and English languages and was looked upon as a clever officer.

It is now a matter of conjecture as to whether he was a spy or an ordinary deserter who got cold feet at the last moment. His sudden disappearance had the effect of withholding the transportation of the troops for several days.

To a companion he previously stated he would never go overseas and to an officer he left an unpaid account of $30.

WAR CONVERTS AETHIST TO CHRISTIANITY

Horation W. Bottomley, of London, Free Thinker and editor of John Bull, has renounced his atheism as a result of the war. He says: "Now today, in my fifty-fifth year, and after about as strenuous a life as any man of that age has ever lived, I believe in God and in the immortality of the soul of man! I am not sure that if poor Foote (G. W. Foote, the leader of English atheists, who has just died) had died a few years ago, I might have been a candidate for his successorship. But now it is too late. The great world war has done it. In war there is a mighty alchemy, transmuting the base metal of human experience into the pure currency of faith. If war does not endanger faith it must of necessity breed despair. . . . Pure rationalism, however 'scientific' has no word of comfort for weary watchers, or of solace for the broken heart. . . . . And now I have come to believe that every noble aspiration, every worthy act and thought—every high resolve—is conserved immortality. I believe that God has a divine purpose for not only the blood of heroes but equally for the tears of women, the quivering anguish of the human heart and the sacrificing effort of unselfish aim."

ANNUAL DOG RACE STARTS AT NOME

NOME, Alaska, April 12.—The great sporting event of the Far North the annual All-Alaska Sweepstakes dog race, focused attention to-day on Nome, the starting point to the 412,-mile contest over the snow trail to Candle and return. Two thousand dollars was the purse, obtained at the sweepstakes carnival last Saturday night.

The entrants are the winner of last year's race, Seppala, with 17 dogs; Bobby Brown with 12; Fay Delsene, with 14, and Paul Kjegstad, with 16.

The trail is in only fair condition, the weather of the last few days having been too warm to ensure a fast race.

There is no limit to the number of dogs a driver may place in his team, but the rules of the Nome Kennel Club require that every dog taken out must be brought safely back, either riding on the sled or working in the harness. This rule is to prevent drivers from abandoning disabled dogs on the trail, or leaving them at the reporting stations through which the racers pass.

In previous years the race has developed into a contest between the Siberian wolf dogs and the Alaska-bred malamutes. Both breeds have ardent supporters, but the champions of the "Siberian wolves" lay stress upon the fact that the record of 74 hours 14 minutes 20 seconds was established with a team of Siberians.

To clean coffee or tea pots boil a little borax solution in them twice a week for fifteen minutes and it will purify and sweeten them.

GERMAN SPY SUFFERS DEATH IN LONDON

LONDON, April 12.—A spy was put to death in London to-day. Announcement of this occurrence was made officially as follows: —

"A prisoner charged with espionage was tried by our general court martial at Westminster, Guild Hall, on the 20th of March, and the following day was sentenced to death, which was carried out this morning."

Whole License Board Will Act Next Year

"I might as well tell the House now that the Government intends to retain the license board, with five members for next year, instead of three as provided for in the act," said Hon. T. W. McGarry in the Legislature Tuesday night, in reply to Mr. Rowell's question with regard to the provision for $15,000 in the further supplementary estimates for enforcing the Ontario Temperance Act including salaries and expenses of commissioners and salaries of provincial inspectors. He gave no further information on the matter.

SWOLLEN RIVER AIDS THE WORK OF THE FRENCH MELINITE

Night Attack of Germans North-west of Verdun Results in Disaster for the Enemy—House Engulfs Struggling Foe

In a Village Northwest of Verdun, Monday, April 11, via Paris, April 13.—Yesterday I witnessed a great battle, the climax of the Verdun struggle.

Night had fallen as we descended the slopes into what seemed an ordinary workroom, furnished with stools and a table. The only window was a long embrasure, hidden outside by an ingenious arrangement of branches.

Two officers and some soldiers are at work, the first officer announcing figures with an eye glued to the telemeter glass, pivoted on a massive base—for the cannonade of the foe rocks the ground like the waves of a tempest—and the second officer bent over his calculating, then snapping orders to soldiers at the telephone.

The officers are regulating the fire of a battery two miles in the rear upon the German trenches down to our right, near the river, where the enemy is massing for an assault. At the same time they direct a searchlight, whose rays illuminate their field of vision. I take my glasses and stand by the embrasure.

Immense White Arm.

"Follow the searchlight and you will soon pick out the German trenches and see the effects of our fire," says my guide. For some moments I looked, dazzled by the ray itself. It is like an immense, white arm outstretched toward the horizon, barring my vision. Beside me the observer with his telemeter seizes his telephone and started to direct the searchlight.

And the ray shifts and vanishes, reappears, grows bigger, and diminishes, finally focusing on a far-off point, obedient to the orders like a pencil in a giant hand.

A the receiver clicks back on the telephone I can see clearly. It is a patch of a field, streaked diagonally by a dark line, which is the German trench. Clouds of smoke obscure it at intervals, stabbed by swift flashes.

I watch interminably; nothing changes. Then the observer throws another order into the telephone, and a second ray doubles the field of view. He turns toward his companion at the table and reels off figures in a hurried tone. The latter transmits more figures to the soldier, who has resumed his telephoning. All three seem perfectly calm, but I sense a thrill of anticipaton.

The Attack Begns.

Suddenly the field patch is covered with scurrying dots like a mass of excited ants, rushing forward across the light, out of the picture into the darkness. It is the enemy charging at last.

Then a dense thunder cloud covers everything. The searchlight's rays beat vainly against its yellowish walls. The glass trembles in my hand like a nightmare vision conjured by magic amid the smoke. A horrible scene is revealed, first dimly, then clearer, and finally very distinct in the sharp white light on the field the dark lines of rushing ants have disappeared; in their place a ragged hollow, in which blocks of earth like huge tree trunks roll and quiver.

Foe Troops in Agony

Among them the tiny dark things are writhing like fallen leaves fluttered by the breeze. Those shapeless objects are German soldiers. As the smoke cleared I distinguished arms raised in agony or supplication. Some try to crawl upwards. They form heaps, sliding back together, as one mounts another and drags him down. Meanwhile from the right of the scene what seems to be an immense black snake creeps forward. In the ray of light it glimmers. It reaches the lip of the hollow, and the mass of crawling men quiver with a new agitation. It is the water of the Meuse overwhelming the Germans by the same concentration of melinite that ruptured the river's dikes. With frantic gestures the Germans fight upwards; there comes a flash and another cloud patch, half-veiling the chaos of earth and water, and drowning men. Then the shells begin to fall rapidly and the searchlight abandons the struggle against smoke mounting higher along the bare hills. A few moments later it returns. I see a placid pool glimmering beneath the ray save when an occasional spot of blackness is floating motionless. I look at my watch; three hours have passed since we entered the post. That is what I saw of the greatest battle of Verdun.

Thin Folks Who Want to Get Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Most thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are, when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, much of the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal, amount of fat, the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can probably best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a careful combination of six splendid assimilative agents. Taken with meals they mix with the food to turn the sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood, and its rapid effect has been in many cases reported remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by all druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid.

NOTE.—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

Customs Officials To Seize Pictures

NEW YORK, April 13.—Warrants for the arrest of six of the seven men alleged to have participated in a recent effort to bring pictures of the Willard-Johnston prize fight into the United States by re-photographing moving pictures films across the Canadian border are in the possession of the United States district attorney here.

Of those accused of an attempt to violate the customs laws by a new method, six are New York men and one a Canadian. The indictments were returned by the Federal grand jury at Syracuse, N.Y. The indicted New York men are Harold T. Edwards, A. Lamar, Isaac C. F. Ullman, manager of the Duplex Film Company; Harry A. Fishbeck, A Cinematograph operator, James J. Johnston, manager of an amusement enterprise; Laurence M. D. McGuire, president of the New York Real Estate Board; and W. V. Brymer. The Canadian name in the indictment is J. J. Orkney.

It is charged that the men attempted to evade the law prohibiting the importation of prize fight pictures by setting up a tent on the Canadian border at Rouse's Point, N.Y., and re-photographing the fight films across the border, thus avoiding actual shipment across the line of the films made in Havana.

The new films so made were brought to New York and shown in a private exhibition. The expedient caused much comment in the moving picture and sporting circles, and the outcome of the Government's attempt to punish the men concerned in it is awaited with unusual interest.

It is announced that customs officials virtually have decided to seize the new pictures on the ground that the intent of the law cannot be defeated by such a process.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or exposure to coldor and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by soothing the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Municipalities Enter Protest Against the McGarry Bill

Legislation is Too Cramped For Successful Operation of Hydro---Conference at City Hall---Member of Parliament Says That Opponents of Hydro Scheme Should Be Put Out of Business---Peterboro' Representatives Present.

"I would put any body out of business who is going to be-devil and damn this great Hydro scheme," said Sam Carter, M.P.P., at a well-attended meeting of the Municipal Electric Association in the City Council Chamber this morning.

His Worship Mayor Duffus and Alderman Edgar, of Peterborough were among those present.

The meeting was summoned to protest against the McGarry bill recently introduced into the Ontario Legislature. So great was the crowd that the gallery had to be opened.

"We are not here in any spirit of antagonism to the Government," said Mayor Church.

A Business Concern.

"The Government has been a pioneer in this work. The Hydro, as a business concern, is second to none in the world. All contracts have been built ahead of time and this is a tribute to Sir Adam Beck. We meet the Government to-day to have a heart to heart talk with them about the Hydro. We want to safeguard the interests of those municipalities which are purchasing Hydro power. We are not opposed to Mr. McGarry. He has always been a warm supporter of the Hydro."

Statute Too Cramped.

"We have clashed with the auditor because the statute is too cramped to allow us to do the business," said Sam Carter, M.P.P. "If the Government makes any further attempt to curtail the power of the commission we must protest. We don't want to be cramped; we want more room. We want the statutes so altered that we can do the business we are doing to-day and more. The commission has not gone on unduly. It has only gone on as the Government said.

Government Neglect.

"But the Government neglected to provide the necessary statutory legislation to provide for extension. Instead of that, every year, if we are not careful, they will keep on clipping."

Philip Pocock of London, a former president of the association, said: "As an association we were very much surprised that this McGarry bill had been introduced without consulting the municipalities.

"The municipalities are liable for over $9,000,000 in the main transmission lines. The municipalities have over $15,000,000 invested in the Hydro project. The Government should bring in legislation to permit the commission to operate the scheme. The Government cannot treat the pioneers of this project as they propose to. We should have two members on the commission and one auditor. We could appoint Sir Adam to represent the municipalities. A scheme ought to be devised whereby each municipality should have a voice.

Trust the Municipalities.

"The development of power at Niagara is an important part of the scheme. It is due to the municipalities that they should be entrusted with the development of that scheme and reap the benefits therefrom."

Out of Politics.

"Our municipality is very much opposed to the taking away of the power of the Commission and placing the control in the political arena," said Angus McDonald of Stratford. "I do not think we could do better than have our president, Mayor Church, as the representative of the municipalities on the Commission."

City Solicitor W. Dougherty, of St. Thomas—"The McGarry bill is not before this meeting and has not been considered by the municipalities. The rank and file know absolutely nothing about the bill. Until we have seen the bill we cannot pass any resolution which will have any effect on the Government."

The following resolution was carried unanimously:—

(1) That this Ontario Municipal Electric Association, representing the municipalities purchasing power from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, protests strongly against any legislation being enacted (affecting the present efficient and satisfactory administration of the development and distribution of power as now accomplished by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario) without our knowledge and approval.

Want Two Commissioners.

(2) That this general meeting of all members of this association held in the City Hall, Toronto, on Wednesday, April 12th, recommends that the Legislature take such steps as will empower the municipalities, through their regularly appointed representatives, to elect two of the commissioners to the board of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and that the municipalities, through their executive, be authorized to appoint an auditor with permission to make a complete audit of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission accounts.

Combined Knowledge of Strategy With the Genius of a Jules Verne

All France is resounding with the praises of Lieutenant Colonel Emile Driant, who fell on the first day of the battle of Verdun at the head of his chasseurs. Besides being a gallant officer and one of the deputies from the Nancy district, he was a gifted writer on military subjects and combined the qualities of thorough acquaintance with technical strategy and the fanciful genius of a Jules Verne.

Under the pen name of "Captain Danrit" he wrote many serious works as well as novels in which he used the latest discoveries to embellish fiction. Among his better known books are "War in the Twentieth Century," "The War of Tomorrow" and "The Fatal War". Like the German Emperor, he was impressed at one time by the "yellow peril" and one of his books bears the title "The Yellow Invasion." That he was fully modern is shown in his "Robinsons of the Air" "Submarine Robinsons," "The Aviator of the Pacific" and "A Dirigible at the North Pole". Grim warnings are contained in his works:—"Stories of to-morrow and "Toward a New Sedan" Others of his writings are "Jean Lapin" "God Children of Napoleon" The Ugly Little Fellow" "From Samarcand to Lhasa" and "The Emperor's escape." Urged by his friends before the war, he had consented to have his name presented as a candidate for one of the vacant seats in the French Academy.

Captain Driant fell while fighting a rear-guard action between the Caures Woods and the village of Beaumont, a bullet having pierced his temple. His immediate comrades jumped into a hole that had just been made by a German shell and were taken prisoners a few minutes later. He was buried near Beaumont, north of Verdun, a German officer making his grave.

He was sixty years old and leaves one daughter and three sons, the oldest of whom is fighting on the French front. His wife was Mlle. Boulanger, daughter of the famous French general, once Minister of War.

SATURDAY IS "TRENCH DAY"

Canadian Kitchener League Asks You to Please Remember It When You See Their Collection Boxes on the Streets—Money Used For Soldiers' Comforts—Read Appended Letter

On TRENCH DAY, Saturday, April 15th, this coming Saturday, when you see ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League with their collection boxes, please recall the work they have done for the men at the front and for which they have received such expressions as the following:

Just a few lines to say that I I have received a pair of the socks you were so kind to send over. They are just splendid, and one pair of socks knit by the ladies of Ontario, who certainly know how to knit, is worth ten pairs of machine made socks. We are resting in the billets after a spell in the trenches.

I was in Canada for thirteen years, having come from England in 1902. I was in the vicinity of Orillia for a few years and went from there to Alberta where I have a homestead of my own. I am twenty-two years of age. The chief occupation of the people around here is hop growing and they go about their work as if there was no war on at all.

This is a sample of the gratitude conveyed from the trenches to the Canadian Kitchener League for the comforts they have supplied the men. But the ladies desire to continue their work, and to send as many packages as ever, if not more. They have given of their own means, and they have raised various sums by every method that presented itself. But it has just come to this that funds are needed right now, and the direct method of appeal has been decided upon.

Hence TRENCH DAY. It must commend itself to every citizen who is anxious for the comfort of the Peterborough men at the front. Every contribution will be gratefully received and the last farthing of trench value will be wrung from every cent.

"Fight For France Here"

Col. Armand Lavergne Urges Boycott of Ontario-Made Goods.

MONTREAL, April 13.—Deprecating the subscriptions of French-Canadians to Red Cross funds, patriotic funds, Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, etc., Colonel Armand Lavergne at a meeting of French-Canadians at Longueil called upon his compatriots to refuse to go and fight for France in Europe, but to remain and fight for her here.

Col. Lavergne said the motto of those against the French in Ontario was to make the Province English even if it should cease to be English.

He thought the Saxon had devoured the Anglo. After describing the origin of the "boycott" in Ireland, he called upon the French-Canadians of Quebec to declare a boycott of Ontario-made goods. He also urged them to insist on speaking French on railways, in stores, which would give more work to young French-Canadians.

Reiterating his claim that while French could not be taught in Ontario German could, Col. Lavergne said if French-Canadians bowed their heads they were unworthy of their forefathers who saved Canada for the British.

He asked them to remember they were of the same blood as Joan of Arc.

MRS. WHEELER EJECTED FROM UNION LEAGUE CLUB AFTER ALIMONY CHASE

NEW YORK, April 13.— Another chapter was added to the already long narrative of the marital difficulties of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gallatin Wheeler, Jr., last night when Mrs. Wheeler, accompanied by a deputy sheriff, invaded the foyer of the Union League Club in an attempt to arrest her husband for the non-payment of a year's alimony amounting to $3,600. Mr. Wheeler escaped service by running up stairs, while club attendants prevented his wife and the deputy from following, after they were politely, but firmly ejected from the building. As Mr. Wheeler had lived at the club since his separation from his wife in 1912, it was stated that the club could be construed as his home.

Mrs. Wheeler has recently presented an affidavit to Justice Greenbaum alleging that her husband had not for a year paid the $300 monthly alimony awarded to her. She had heard, the affidavit stated, that he was intending to leave the jurisdiction of the court by making his residence in the West Indies, where he has extensive business interests, thus escaping the payment of the money. Upon this assertion Justice Greenbaum gave an order for the arrest of Mr. Wheeler, and to identify him his wife accompanied Julius Browner, a deputy sheriff, to the club.

Entering the foyer of the club, Mrs. Wheeler saw her husband and Browner stepped forward with the paper in his hand. Mr. Wheeler saw the deputy bearing down upon him and ran through the reading room. Attendants ran forward and grasped Mrs. Wheeler by the arm, while others prevented Browner from following Mr Wheeler. The determination of the deputy to turn the affaire into a game of "hide and seek" was frustrated by a polite but firm ejection.

Attracted by the excitement a crowd gathered. Mrs. Wheeler took refuge in the hallway of an adjoining building, while Browner took his stand opposite the entrance of the club to await the possible exit of Mr. Wheeler. At a late hour last night there was no reported evidence of his success.

Mrs. Wheeler, who as Claudia Carlstedt, was popularly known as "the beautiful girl in the red tights," talked to a Herald reporter while sheltering herself in the hallway. Clad in ill fitting garments with frayed gloves and old shoes, the woman who had gone upon a wedding journey around the world and who had once owned $100,000 worth of jewels, told of her poverty and her attempts to force the payment of the alimony awarded to her.

Her husband's action for divorce was lost last year. Since that time she said, she had been living with friends, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Morris, No. 508 West 134th street.

FINDS DYNAMITE ATTACHED TO BURNING FUSE

YOUNGSTOWN, N.Y., April 13.—Fearing an attempt would be made Tuesday night to damage a house into which he had just moved, George Phillips, junk dealer, kept close watch on the premises. Shortly after 11 o'clock, while walking around the dwelling, he found, near one of its front corners, a fuse burning briskly. He tried to stamp out the fire, but could not, so he traced the fuse to the house.

Under one corner he found a stick of dynamite, to which the end of the fuse was attached. He grabbed the dynamite and threw it into the yard, 20 or 30 feet form the house.

Terrific Explosion.

There followed a terrific explosion that awakened the sleeping village folk and brought them hurrying into the streets to ascertain the nature of the blast, which all agreed was louder than anything that Youngstown had ever heard before. Mr. Phillips told them what had happened and led as many, as wanted to follow him, into his yard.

There, sure enough, was a hole big enough for a cow to hide in, its size furnishing mute evidence of what the explosion would have done to Mr. Phillips' house but for his timely discovery of the fuse sputtering on the damp ground.

Mrs. Phillips was asleep in the house at the time. That is, she was asleep until the dynamite dug the crater in the yard not far from her bed room window, but the alarm clock stunt of the explosion, of course, ended her slumber.

Moved Tuesday.

Mr. Phillips and his wife moved into the house Tuesday afternoon. The dwelling is on Bird street, and is a frame structure of a story and a half. H. A. Walker of Niagara Falls owns the house. Alvin Tryon lived in the house. He moved out Tuesday. The dwelling was discovered on fire in the forenoon. Neighbours, summoned by Mrs. Tryon, put out the blaze before the firemen arrived.

Later, Tryon was arrested, charged with intoxication. He was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Robinson and was sentenced to the Erie county jail for 60 days. After his examination he was placed in the village lockup, it being planned to take him to Buffalo yesterday.

SIEGEL TO OPEN STORE.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Henry Siegel, whose conduct of his department store banking enterprise a few years ago, led to a considerable sojourn in the Monroe County penitentiary, is planning to open a new department store in the ten-story loft building on the northwest corner of Broadway and 35th street. Negotiations for a lease of part of the two lower floors of the building fronting on those two streets, have progressed to the final stage. Unless a hitch develops, it was predicted the deal will be consummated in a day or two.

A German officer quartered in Brussels was explaining to an old lady that Germany was many times larger than Belgium. "How is it then," she inquired, "that you can travel through Germany in a week or so whereas you have taken over a year to get through Belgium—and you are not through yet?"—Boston Transcript.

A CHILD'S TONGUE SHOWS IF LIVER OR BOWELS ARE ACTIVE

If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Give Fruit Laxative at Once

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile, and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of Mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by A. Single Application

Don't waste time scrubbing a sink with scouring powder, as kerosene will do the cleaning half the time, and will not hurt the enamel.

"Miss Modiste" Delighted

Speaking of the charming comedy which comes to "The Grand" next Saturday, the Kingston Standard says:

"Miss Modiste," with Hal Johnson, that inimitable impersonator of female characters leading the funmakers, pleased large audiences at the Grand yesterday. The comedy which is set to music, was one of the most pleasing offered here in some time. Amusing situations come fast and furious, creating ripple after ripple of laughter and none were eager for the final curtain. The song numbers were bright and catchy and added greatly to the effectiveness of the comedy, while some up-to-date dance numbers also pleased.

The comedy deals with the efforts of a young man to impersonate an actress in order that he might outwit his sweetheart's guardian: Mr. Johnson gave an excellent delineation of the character, his make-up and actions being perfect and also humorous. The comedy revolves around an aged bridegroom, Hal Johnson as Gloria and the real Gloria, the climax coming when the latter arrives. Geo. Collins, as the bell hop, Harry Adams as the bridegroom, Lillian Forest in the role of the ward, Lucile O'Dea as Gloria and Eva Swinburn as the maiden lady gave excellent support to the leading character.

BIG AMERICAN WAR SHIPMENT TO BRITISH

LONDON, April 12. — Ten thousand square yards of wire mosquito netting bought in the United States has just been forwarded to the British troops operating in Mesopotamia. Ice making machines and river boats of shallow draught for the Tigris also were included in a recent consignment of war materials sent to the same army.

RYAN'S NAME ON STUBS OF VON PAPENS' CHECKS

NEW YORK, April 13. — Check stubs taken by British boarding officers from Captain Frita von Papen, former military attache to the German embassy, which were exhibited yesterday to the Federal Grand Jury investigating the plot to wreck the Welland canal, showed that in September, 1914, more than $200 was set aside for John T. Ryan of Buffalo, attorney, who testified last week that, not knowing he was acting for the German government, he paid money to several men believed by him to be interested in grain speculations.

One $100 check drawn September 16, 1914, was for Horst von der Goltz, who gave evidence against Captain Hans Tauscher and for Ryan. Another check stub, dated September 28, is "For Ryan—Buffalo."

Still another check stub shows that on October 14, 1914, $40 was set aside for Albert A. Fritzen, who is named in the warrant under which Captain Tauscher was arrested.

Assistant United States Attorney Wood examined before the grand jury Harry J. Kitchin of the banking house of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, whose name appears on most of the checks signed by Captain Von Papen, while Goltz was asked about payments made in connection with the trip to Buffalo for the purpose of blowing up the canal.

YOUNG TURKS ARE FOR PEACE

ATHENS, April 12.—According to reports from Constantinople, a meeting of leading members of the Young Turk Committee of Union and Progress was held recently under the presidency of the Secretary General, Kiamil Bey. The proceedings were stormy, the majority of the members vehemently attacking the government and blaming it for its shortsightedness in the matter of provisions for the army and the people.

The question of a separate peace was also raised, and was welcomed by the majority of the committee, who appeared to despair of any other means of arresting the Russian advance.

The general situation in Turkey is so critical, and the future seems so full of dangers that people hitherto the most optimistic are now unable to find any gleam of hope in the ever darkening horizon.

In order to persuade the Turks to send troops from Thrace to the Caucasus-Bagdad front the Germans proposed that the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus should be occupied by Germano-Bulgar forces. The proposition was discussed at a special sitting of the Committee of Union and Progress, but was rejected after a lively debate.

Travellers from Constantinople report a serious riot that occurred recently at the Haidar Pacha Station as the result of a refusal of recruits to proceed to the Armenian front. The military authorities ordered the guards to fire, twelve recruits being killed and thirty wounded. It is also said that the soldiers in the barracks at Tashquia Matoko mutinied against their German officers, two of whom were killed.

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.

776 Enlisted in Canadian Forces in Britain

LONDON, April 13.—Col. Frank Reid, formerly of London, Ont., expects that $2,000,000 will be saved to the Dominion Government through the system just initiated of the reclamation of surplus kits. Col. Paul Magnon, of Montreal, is in charge of this branch of the work at Shorncliffe.

Col. Reid, who is director of recruiting for the Canadian forces overseas, states that the enlistments in the Canadian army on this side from June 20th, of 1915, to March 15th, 1916, numbered 776. No man is accepted unless he can show at least three years' residence in Canada.

Only the Ultra Rich Will Throw Old Boots at This Year's Crop of June Brides

Shoemakers, like many other merchants, report the strenuous effects of war conditions upon the prices of the materials used by them in their trade. Side leather that used to cost 28 and 29 cents a pound is to-day worth 60 cents. Irish flax thread used to sell at 90 cents a pound; to-day you can scarcely get it at $2.00 a pound. Nails have increased from 6c to 12c a pound. Leather soles by the dozen, formerly costing $3.60, are now $4.50. The shoemaker used to be able to buy rubber cement for 75 cents a pound. To-day it is about $2.25. And so it goes. You may think the price rather high when you have a pair of boots half-soled, but the shoemaker knows that his profit is so small that he keeps asking himself why he should not increase his prices.

In a reminiscent mood to-day Col. Miller told of a man who used to come down from one of the upper townships every Spring and leave an order for two pairs of French kid boots that cost him $6.00 a pair. Just a day or so ago he appeared with his annual order.

"You may not want them when you hear what they will cost you," Col. Miller said. These, by the way were specially made for the customer.

"Oh, you know I never haggled over a quarter, one way or the other," replied the man.

"Well, you can have them made for you at $20," said Colonel Miller, "$14.00 a pair." They were long boots that were for general use in the north country.

When the customer recovered, and got his bearing in the swollen sea of increased prices, he was willing to pay $10 a pair.

"You won't take $10 a pair?" he queried.

"No," was the answer; "I can't do it. To begin with I am not sure that there is one hide of French kid in the country. There have been no hides coming in since the French and British governments declared their embargoes, and whatever remains in stock in this country are few and very dear."

So the man had to turn to something else for this year. That may be an exceptional case, it is true, but it illustrates the increased cost of leather.

Trade-Marked Goods Increased.

"Only yesterday," Col. Miller continued, "I was visited by the representatives of two of Canada's foremost boot manufacturers, who announced advances on their fall gods of fifty and sixty cents a pair. Each of these manufacturers has in the past built up a reputation of which his trademark is a symbol. His name and his reputation is behind the quality of the output. This year, he could have kept the price stationary by depreciating the quality. Rather than adopt that course he has maintained his standard and raised his price. This applies not only to these two firms, but to practically all the reputable houses in the country."

Six Dollar Boot Now.

Local boot dealers are selling more six-dollar boots now than ever. In fact they are a product of the conditions which have obtained during the past two years, and have been particularly noticeable during the past year. Only a few years ago four dollars seemed a big price for boots. Then came the advance to five dollars. There are many sold at that price to-day, but the six-dollar grade is in big demand and has a wide sale.

The war has struck severely at the shoe industry and trade. It is an interesting story, too, but deserves detailed and careful treatment. The ordinary citizen sees the effects in the higher prices, and inclines to the opinion that the retailer is making all the profit. But behind the prices is the struggle to get supplies, to maintain a fixed standard and to otherwise cope with the extreme conditions now existing. The manufacturer and the retailer are both paying higher prices, and the ultimate consumer or user is likewise getting his taste of it.

Streets Oiled Last Year Wintered Well

The observant citizen has noticed that the streets oiled last year have wintered well. Smooth and well bound some of them give the appearance of recent oiling. For a striking contrast look over some of the streets oiled last year and some that were only watered, or those that were left to nature's attention. The evidence is so favorable to the oil treatment that citizens not only appreciate last year's work but wish that it might be extended during the approaching summer.

Were Prominent In Y.M.C.A. Work

Association Sustains the Loss of Two Splendid Fellows—"Y" News

The banquet of the Church Bowling League will be held in the Y.M.C.A. dining room, Friday evening, April 14. To accommodate members who are working the hour is fixed at 7 o'clock and preparations will be made for about 85 plates but all reservations should be made this Thursday evening.

Sadness has been cast over our Y.M.C.A. membership by the death of Wm. Stubbs and Pte. Chas. Ratchford. Mr. Stubbs has been connected with our association for a long term of years. He was a leader at the first boys' camp held on Stoney Lake and during the past few years by the use of his motor boat and other means has done much toward making the Boys' camp a success. During the past few months Mr. Stubbs has been assisting the Finance Committee in collection work so has been brought in very close touch with the membership of our association and particularly with the employed staff who miss him greatly.

Pte. Chas Ratchford was one of our intermediate members who together with 25 other enlisted with the 8th, C.M.R. Word was received yesterday that he had made the supreme sacrifice at the front in defence of his country.

Forty-six and one-half per cent., or a total of 175 members have enlisted from the senior and intermediate departments since the war began and many of our boys are under fire at the present time.

We would request members of the Board of Directors, Mothers Club, and Ladies' Auxiliary to remember in daily prayer the stalwart Y.M.C.A. boys who are doing their "bit" that they may be sustained in danger.

FEEBLE, NERVOUS WOMEN

LOSE COLOR, ARE WEARY, LOOK WRINKLED.

Once you use the celebrated nerve vitalizer and tonic, Ferrozone—once you feel its magic powers, working through your weakened system—then you'll know for sure that health at last awaits you.

So much quicker and surer is Ferrozone to rebuild and restore that thousands use no other medicine.

"Because I am now well," writes Miss I. P. Sinclaire, from Sault Ste Marie "I feel it my duty to tell every young woman what benefit I got from Ferrozone. I grew very thin, and at twenty-five years old my face was hollow and wrinkled—my color was bad and I looked ten years beyond my age. I was nervous and hysterical, couldn't sleep, had no appetite, burst into tears at the least provocation. Then I worried, feared I would go into decline, and was so depressed every morning that life was no longer happy.

"I was astonished at the quick and thorough action of Ferrozone. It gave me permanent strength and vitality, nervous fears disappeared, indigestion and stomach weakened were cured. Sound sleep returned. I looked better and younger, had clear color. I gained in weight, felt happy, vigorous, strong. It is a year since I first took Ferrozone. It has restored me to health I never knew before and I will continue to recommend it as the grandest tonic and strengthener on earth."

Very few girls and women are so abundant in health as to not require medicine. Nothing excels Ferrozone in supplying strength, blood and nerve power. Not a stimulant, but a nourishing tonic is Ferrozone. 50c per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers. Try Ferrozone. Do it to-day

THIS MORNING'S POLICE COURT

Riding a Wheel on The Sidewalk Cost a Local Man Two Dollars

Thomas and Robert Dickson of Smith and Douro Townships, respectively, appeared in the police court this morning in answer to a charge of being found drunk in a public place. They were satisfied to plead not guilty until Chief Thompson announced his intention of looking up their police court records. P. C. McArthur had taken the two men below when to the surprise of the Court he returned to say that the two men were willing to plead guilty. They said they hadn't "time to wait over."

They were each fined two dollars. One of them claimed to be insolvent, whereupon Magistrate Dumble reminded them it would be better business to bring money with them with which to pay their fines when they came to town to get drunk.

Good Roads.

"We have got good roads now and there is no necessity to ride on the sidewalks," observed Magistrate Dumble. He referred to the case of E. E. Logan, who was fined two dollars for riding a wheel on the sidewalk.

Passing a standing street car cost a local automobile owner five dollars.

Lieut. A. B. Colville Home On Sick Leave

After Three Months in Trenches Broke Down Under the Strain

Although only a few hours' notice was given that Lieut. A. B. Colville would return home on Saturday night, a large procession, headed by the 40th Regt. band and the local company of the 139th Battalion, marched to the station to do him honor. The streets were also crowded with a large number of our town townspeople who had heard the news, and were anxious to get a look at the returned officer as he passed in the car.

Lieut. Colville, who went overseas with the 39th battalion in June of last year, has been invalided home on account of failing health, due to a strain following the operation for appendicitis which he underwent just before enlisting. He has been in a hospital in England since Christmas, receiving treatment and although now completely recovered, has been given three months' leave to recuperate. He will report for duty on June 7th.

After his arrival in England, Lieut. Colville was transferred from the 39th to the 20th Battalion and went to France and Belgium in September, serving in the Fourth Ontario Infantry Brigade for three months.

Lieut. Colville, who is a son of the late M. A. L. Colville and Mrs. Colville of town, is widely known through out the province, having been vice-president and solicitor of the Electric Power Company, which was recently taken over by the Hydro Electric Commission. Previous to his connection with this company he practiced law in Campbellford. Lieut. Colville's only brother, Cyril, is also on active service in France.—Campbellford News.

Sporting Editor of The Star: That game rooster presented to the Sportsmen's Battalion by George Graham of Peterborough, should have been presented to the Irish Fusiliers' Battalion, as he was raised by a good Irish lad, James Macway of Cobourg, and he is one of the Prang Ranger breed.

PELL IN A PAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Aper's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

Glassware should always be washed in a wooden bowl, as there will be far less chance of it getting broken.

TURNBULLS

THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE WINNERS IN THE BIG LEAGUES

Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and St. Louis Won in The National and Washington, Detroit, St. Louis and Boston in The American

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

BOSTON, April 12.—Barely more than five thousand people witnessed the opening game here to-day, the weather being unseasonably cold, but the world's champions were the victors over the Athletics, by a 2 to 1 score. Governor McCall and Mayor Curley were among those present. Ruth pitched great ball, holding the visitors to three hits in eight innings. In the ninth he passed Walsh and made a bad throw to Barry when Oldring bunted. Lajoie brought Walsh home with a single, and Foster replaced Ruth. Boston's two runs were due to errors by Pick and Bush, and a sacrifice fly. Walker showed up brilliantly in Speaker's shoes. Manager Carrigan was given a great floral horseshoe. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Philadelphia .. .. 000000001—1	4	4
Boston.. .. .. .. 00000110x—2	5	1

EXTRA INNINGS AT NEW YORK.

At New York—New York and Washington opened the American League season here to-day under ideal conditions. An exciting, well played eleven-inning game was won by Washington by a score of 3 to 2. The game was a pitchers' battle between Walter Johnson and Ray Caldwell, and the batting of Second-Baseman Morgan won Washington's game. Morgan drove in two of Washington's runs, including the winning score in the eleventh. "Home Run" Baker, playing his first regular game for the Yankees, made a good impression, getting two singles and fielding perfectly. Milan scored a run for Washington in the first inning with a home run drive into the right field stand. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Washington.. .. 10000010001—3	10	0
New York .. .. 00000000000—2	5	3

Batteries—Johnson and Williams; Caldwell and Nunamaker.

COVALESKI OUTHIT WHITE SOX

At Chicago — Pitcher Covaleski made four hits to-day, one more than he allowed the whole Chicago team, and Detroit won four to nothing, scoring all its runs in the first two innings. Long hits by Cobb, Bush, Veach and Covaleski, who included a triple and a double in his four, were factors in the visitors' victory. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Detroit.. .. .. .. 31000000—4	8	2
Chicago .. .. .. 00000000—0	3	2

SPEAKER WALKED THREE TIMES.

At Cleveland—Cleveland lost its opening game to St. Louis by 6 to 1, chiefly because it could not hit Groom, ex-Federal League pitcher. Groom was very effective with men on bases. The support given the Cleveland pitchers was ragged. Tris Speaker played his first game with Cleveland. He fielded spectacularly and walked three times, being passed purposely twice. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
St. Louis .. .. .. 01100400—6	7	1
Cleveland .. .. .. 10000000—1	3	4

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

BROOKLYN, April 12.—Boston beat Brooklyn in the opening game of the National League season here to-day, 5 to 1. A large crowd witnessed the contest, despite the cold weather. President Tener, Secretary Heydler and Barney Dreyfuss of the Pittsburgs were among the spectators. Timely hitting won for the Braves, Magee being especially prominent at the bat. Rudolph was invincible, except in the fourth inning, when the Superbas bunched a double and two singles for the only run. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Boston.. .. .. .. 01011010—5	9	0
Brooklyn .. .. .. 00010000—1	6	2

Rudolph and Gowdy; Cheney and Miller.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—Bad pitching by Stroud in the ninth inning gave Philadelphia the victory over New York in the opening game of the season here to-day, 5 to 4. With two out in the home team's half of the ninth and the score tied, Stroud game Stock a base on balls. The latter stole second and advanced to the plate on two wild pitches by Stroud, ending the game. Both Alexander and Anderson were hit hard at the start, the latter being taken out after two innings. Before Mayor Smith tossed out the first ball each member of the Phillies who was with the team last season and Manager Moran was given a gold watch. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
New York.. .. .. 201001000—4	8	3
Philadelphia .. .. 120001001—5	7	3

Anderson, Stroud and Rariden; Alexander and E. Burns.

CINCINNATI, April 12. — When the music and shouting were over today the Reds were hanging on the short end of a 7 to 1 score. The Cubs were too good for Cincinnati at every stage of the game. George McConnell held the slab position for the Cubs and allowed the Reds seven hits. The home team scored their only run in the second round on a single and double in quick succession. Toney and Schultz were walloped for nine hits. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Cincinnati.. .. .. 10000000—1	7	2

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 12. — The Cardinals put 18,000 ans in a happy mood by winning the first game from the Pirates to-day, 2 to 1, in a great pitchers' battle between Doak and Kantiehner. The winning run came in the ninth. After Long popped to Schultz, Betzel singled, stole second and reached third on Wilson's wild throw. The squeeze play engineered by Hornsby sent over the deciding score. Hans Wagner, at 42, poled three singles and drew a walk, while he handled six chances perfectly. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Pittsburg .. .. .. 000000100—1	6	2
St. Louis .. .. .. 000000101—2	8	2

DOG TEAMS RACE OVER SNOW TRAIL

Foxhound Leaders Covered First 26 Miles in Eight Hours, Forty-Three Minutes.

NOME, Alaska, April 13.—Five dog teams, driven by five of the most skilful drivers in the North, are swinging along the snow trail from Nome to Candle yesterday in the ninth annual all-Alaskan sweepstakes race. The course, from Nome to Candle and return, measures 408 miles.

Robert Brown, driving fourteen Malamutes, and Fred Ayer, with his fourteen fox hounds, were first to reach Council, 26 miles from Nome, late yesterday. The time to Council for the leaders was 8 hours and 43 minutes. Leonard Seppala was 11 minutes behind the two leaders, and was followed 11 minutes later by Fay Delano. Paul Kjegstad was last.

LAWN BOWLERS ARE GETTING READY

After the long season of rest, the lawn bowlers are beginning to wake up like bees in a hive. Many of the members already have lists of new applicants for membership.

An unusually bright season is looked for this year. About fifteen new members are already in sight.

Fifty new members are aimed at by the 24th of May. Let everybody get busy. There will be a general meeting of the club on Tuesday, April 25th at 8 p.m. at Mr. Fitzgerald's office. Every member is expected to be present with his list of new prospective members.

Vienna Believes She Is on Eve of Victorious Peace

London, April 10.—A Milan despatch to the Daily Telegraph from Andre Beaumont says that an American just arrived from Vienna declares that the people of that city are under all sorts of extraordinary illusions, one of which is that the war will end within two or three months. "They firmly believe that peace will be entirely in their favor."

"Viennese burghers crowd to the cafes to drink to the health of their army, which they proudly call in the presence of foreigners 'ever victorious.' The contrast between the victories and the rationing of bread, meat, sugar and other necessities does not strike them but the poorer classes are frank in expressing their desire for peace."

Asked if there was an possibility of a revolt of the working classes, he said that it was unlikely.

"You see," he said, "only women, boys and old men are in Vienna now. You cannot expect any very serious revolt from them."

"At the big official bakeries a crowd of about 20,000, chiefly women and children, assembled in front of a bakery and howled for bread. Troops were called out and the crowd immediately dispersed.

"Milk is extremely scarce; most of the people are reduced to condensed milk, of which the supply also is becoming scant. The shops still exhibit the motto, 'God Punish England.' The Americans are detested almost as much as the British. It is unsafe for them to speak English in the streets or in the ordinary cafes."

PROTECTION LOOMS IN ENGLAND UNDER PLEA OF RETALIATION

The London Economist Says the Proposed Change of Policy Threatens to Impair the System Which Has Made England Greatest Nation in the World

NEW YORK, April 12.— England, while forcing back her enemies in Flanders and France, at Saloniki or on the Tigris, is menaced by a new peril at home, according to London newspapers recently received here. Party lines are reforming and the government is threatened in the midst of war with a serious economic crisis. Under the specious plea of retaliation on Germany after the war, a policy is being urgently advocated that if successful, according to the London Economist, promises to impair the system through which Britain has become, despite the small extent of her country, the greatest and most prosperous nation in the world.

In the guise of revenge on Germany for her barbarous misdeeds the cry is being raised that German trade must be boycotted after the war. This appeals strongly to the masses of the people, aroused to anger by the Zeppelin raids and the slaughter of non-combatants on passenger steamships. It undoubtedly would injure German tradesmen, but there is a question whether it would not injure England herself still more.

The Economist divides the present opponents of Great Britain's free trade system into three classes. First, there are the prohibitionists, who would bar German trade altogether after the war. Such prominent statesmen as Mr. Reginald McKenna, on the liberal side, and Mr. Bonar Law, of the unionists, are asserted by the London correspondent of the Yorkshire Post to be pretty near agreement on future fiscal policy, and he alleges that the latter's public utterances show that "an economic entente is at least a possibility of the future in peace as well as in war, and that the permanent exclusion of the German financier from allied countries is being considered."

Colonial Preference.

Next are the advocates of colonial preference, who would have a tariff wall against German products raised throughout the Empire while admitting into Britain free or with small duties all the products of the Dominion and the colonies. Concerning this proposition, one writer says that Britain's colonies in 1911 bought goods from Germany valued at £8,000,000 ($40,000,000) and sold to Germany goods valued at £50,000,000 ($250,000,000). Such an adventure as the stopping of this trade by a preferential tariff, he declares, "might be good sentiment, but it would be bad business."

The third class of opponents are the protectionists pure and simple, who on the plea of injuring Germany want a tariff on foreign and colonial food products to protect the British farmer. Among the supporters of this policy are the London Morning Post and more or less openly the Northcliffe newspapers, the Spectator and the Westminster Gazette.

That the protectionists are making an impression in the colonies is shown by an increase of fifty per cent. in the general import tariff rate of India, from five to seven and one half per cent., while that on sugar is raised to ten per cent., and a large number of articles are transferred from the free to the dutiable list. At the same time Mr. Runciman at home has laid an embargo on the dried fruits of the Allies and neutrals, but exempts British colonies.

Naturally, these ominous signs have aroused the defenders of the British system to show how any attempt to destroy German trade would work greater harm to England's commerce. One of them, Sir Swire Smith, writes: "From 1850 to 1911 our total imports increased fifty-three per cent. From Germany the increase was about fifty per cent., but our exports to Germany increased 105 per cent."

Hurting Foe Hurts One's Self.

Another correspondent says textile interests should be reminded that "in regard to worsted and alpaca yarns Germany kept more Bradford spinning mills running than all the rest of the world put together." He suggested as an alternative, following the precedent of the terms Germany imposed on France in 1871, that Germany be required to give perpetual most-favoured-nation treatment to the Entente Powers.

Another Englishman, writing from Cape Town, names five objections to a tariff war with Germany: (1) It will injure both parties; (2) It will not necessarily result in the production of home made substitutes nor will it tend to improve our purchasing power; (3) it may, and probably will, materially help the United States at our expense: (4) It will certainly close against us the valuable markets we have in Germany and if effective will destroy the financial foundations of Germany and render her unable to pay her debts; (5) it is more likely to benefit a few capitalists than the people as a whole.

The Liverpool Courier, which represents the extreme view of the tariff reformers, says, on the other hand:

"If the free traders were right in asserting that tariffs are not the road to the greatest wealth, we still should advocate the adoption of the tariff weapon in the war that is to follow the war."

"This is a cheerful prospect," rejoins the Economist. "As soon as 'peace' is proclaimed the exhausted and demanded nations, loaded with new debt and war pensions, with trade crippled and currency debased are to start tariff warfare and a fresh race of armaments. The Liverpool Courier had better prepare its rich readers for an income tax of nineteen shillings in the pound (ninety-five per cent) and its poor readers for a doubling of the cost of living."

FRENCH OFFICER ESCAPES PRISON IN DUMP CART

PARIS, April 12.—A prominent French army officer has just come through an escape from a prison detention camp in Germany which parallels in real life that famous escape in fiction in which Victor Hugo's hero took the place of the dead man and was carried off to burial.

The officer of this recent experience was the military attache at Vienna up to the time the war began. He joined his regiment and in a dash ahead of the main body of troops, was taken prisoner and sent to a German prison camp not far from the Dutch frontier. Here, besides the physical hardships, two things occupied him closely: first, taking careful notes, with the training of a military attache, on German conditions in the nearby agricultural section and then escape.

The notes on German conditions are proving valuable now that the prisoner is free. Most information on German conditions paint a very bad picture in order to please the French authorities. But these notes are designed to inform rather than to please, and they show favourable as well as unfavourable conditions now prevailing in Germany. They show German farmers, with whom the French prisoners were taken to work, in a prosperous and contented state, with good crops and normal stocks of cattle, swine, poultry, etc. In particular it was noted that horses for farm labour have not fallen off seriously through the military requirement for artillery and cavalry horses. But in the entire time this officer was in the Germany prison camp, going daily through the surrounding agricultural country, he did not see one automobile used for private purposes, although there were hundreds of military automobiles. In general his observations, as an expert military observer, were that the internal conditions of Germany, particularly the farming regions, were not as had been painted; that there was little evidence of internal exhaustion and considerable evidence of prolonged means of resistance.

Meantime, pending his observations and the routine of prison duties, the officer had noted the daily coming and going of a large dump cart, used for carrying away horse refuse from the cavalry stables to the nearby fields. The sides of the cart were high and rigid and the tailpiece was removable to let the contents slide out. It occurred to the officer that if he could be carried out in a load of refuse and be deposited under a dung heap in the fields he might work his way to freedom. And so, with a companion, he tried it.

There was the difficulty first of getting into the cart so that when it was drawn up early in the morning for the manure to be thrown aboard the two men would be underneath. But this part they managed and they were lying in the cart under the thin covering of straw when the morning cleaning began. Soon the big clods of manure descended in showers over the sides of the cart and gradually the officer and his companion were pinned down under a smoking, sweating pile of manure, six feet deep, with two German troopers on top as it rolled off to the fields.

Here there was another danger beyond that of suffocation and stench that when the cart was dumped the top contents would go out first and the bottom, with the prisoners would come out on top. But the slide was even, top and bottom going out together in a crash, which left the French officer and his companion buried under the dung heap in the midst of the field.

The rest was waiting for the favourable moment of darkness to let the two men dig their way out and get into the nearest wood. They were well away that night, and after extreme privation from hunger and exposure came in sight of the Dutch boundary, only to find sentinels posted at regular intervals along the frontier to bar exit or entry. There was a dash at the nearest sentry, with the hope that in the struggle one of the prisoners would get by. And as they sprang forward in desperation they found themselves grappling, not a live sentry, but a figure of wood, roughly fashioned out of a tree trunk, with a German uniform about it, topped by a German helmet with a gun across the shoulder. The whole line of frontier sentinels was seen to be these figures in German uniforms at shoulder-arms.

The French officer and his companion gained Dutch soil and later were back in France, eager to take their place at Verdun.

Seven Tramps Cut To Bits When Cars Jam Together

CELINA, O., April 13.—Seven unidentified tramps were killed and 2 loaded freight cars piled into a heap on the Cincinnati Northern, 10 miles south of this city, in one of the worst wrecks in the history of the road.

Thirty-one of the cars were steel gondolas loaded with coal, the other was a frame box car in which the tramps were riding. It was demolished and the bodies were picked from the wreckage piece by piece. All were unrecognizable.

Solving the Tobacco Problem

The Anti-Tobacco League has not had much influence at the front. Tommy, Antoine, and Hans all demand their cigarettes and pipe-tobacco with regularity and in such abundance as may be, every hour of the day and most of the night. That the narcotic is almost a necessity to worn nerves and shattering nervous systems has been often stated. At all events, while the common soldier will put up with every inconvenience of quarters, will face death without a moment's hesitation, will even march sturdily along without food or rest, his "baccy" and his "fags" are not to be kept from him without a struggle. A humorous chapter in "Between the Lines," by Boyd Cable (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York), gives us the delightful story of "Pint-o'-Bass," and how he solved the tobacco problem. We are introduced to a dugout, where the arrival of new consignments of "baccy" from home have charmed the Britishers into a cheerful loquacity. A newcomer appears, bringing with him his share of the spoils slightly augmented through some successful trading with other recipients outside. We read on:

"Another fair shoot of a night," he remarked cheerfully, slipping out of his mackintosh and hanging the streaming garment on the door. "Bust me if I know where all the rain comes from."

"Any luck?" asked the lead driver, leaning over to rearrange the strip of cloth which, stuck in a jamtin of fat, provided what—with some imagination — might be called a light.

"Five packets—twenty-five fags," said the Centre Driver. "There was two or three wantin' to swap the baccy in their packets for the fags in the other chaps, so I done pretty well to get five packets for mine."

"'Twould 'a' paid you better to 'ave kep' your baccy and made fags out o' it wi' cig'ret-papers," said the Wheel Driver.

"Mebbe," agreed the Centre Driver. "An' p'r'aps you'll tell me—not being a Maskelyne an' Cook conjurer meself—'ow I'm to produce the fag-papers."

The Gunner chuckled softly.

"You should 'a' done like old Pint-o'-Bass did, time he was on the Aisne," he said. "Bass is one of them fag-fiends that can't live without a cigarette, and wouldn't die happy if he wasn't smokin' one. 'E breathes more smoke than 'e does air, an' 'e ought to 'ave a permanent chimney-sweep detailed to clear the soot out of 'is lungs an' breathin'-tobbs. But if Pint-o'-Bass does smoke more'n is good for 'im or any other respectable factory chimney, I'll admit the smoke 'asn't sooted up 'is intelleck none, an' 'e can wriggle 'is way out of a hole where a double-jointed snake 'ud stick. An' durin' the retreat, when, as you knows, cigarettes in the Expeditionary Force was scarcer'n snowballs in 'ell, ole Pint-o'-Bass managed to carry on, an' wasn't never seen without 'is fag, excep' at meal-times, an' sleep-times, an' they bein' so infrequent an' sketchy-like, them days, wasn't 'ardly worth countin'.

"'Twas like this, see, that 'e managed it. You'll remember that, when we mobilized, some Lost Dogs' 'Ome or Society for Preventin' Christian Knowledge or something rushes up a issue o' pocket Testaments an' dishes out one to everybody in the battery. Bound in a khaki cover they was, an', comin' in remarkable 'andy as a nice sentimental sort o' keepsake, most of 'em stayed be'ind wi' sweet'earts and wives. Them as didn't must 'ave gone into 'Base Kit,' cos' any'ow there wasn't one to be raked out o' the battery later on except the one that Pint-o'-Bass was carryin'.

"Bein' pocket Testaments, they was made o' the thinnest kind o' paper, an' Bass tole me the size worked out exactly right at two fags to the page. 'E started on the Creation just about the time o' Mons, an' by the time we'd got back to the Aisne 'e was near through Genesis. All the time we was workin' up thro' France again Bass's smokes were workin' down through Exodus, an' 'e begun to worry about whether the Testament would carry 'im through the campaign. The other fellers that 'ad their tongues 'anging out for a fag uster go'n borrow a leaf off o' Bass whenever they could raise a bit o' baccy, but at last Bass shut down on these loans.

"'Where's your own Testament?" he'd say. 'You was served out one same as me, wasn't you? Lot o' religious wasters! Get a Bible give you an' can't take the trouble to carry it. You'd ha' sold them Testaments at a sixpense a sack in Woolwich if there'd been buyers at that price—which there weren't. An' now you comes beggin' a page o' mine. I ain't goin' to give no more. Encouragin' thriftlessness, as the adjutant 'ud call it; an', besides, 'ow do I know 'ow long this war's goin' to last or when I'll see a fag or a fag-paper again? I'll be smoking Deuteronomy an' Kings long afore we're over the Rhine, an' mebbe,' he sez, turnin' over the pages with 'is thumb an' rearin' out the Children of Israel carefully by the roots, 'mebbe I'll be reduced to smokin' the inscription, "To Our Dear Soldier Friend," on the fly-leaf afore I gets a chance to loot some baccy-shop in Berlin. No,' 'e sez. 'No. You go'n smoke a corner o' the Petit Journal, an' good enough for you, unprovident sacrilegious blighters, you — givin' away your own good Testaments.'"

War Destroys Great Forests in War Zone

The havoc wrought to trees in European war zones has been tremendous. In Belgium, France, Russia, Serbia and Montenegro, the heavy bombardments have swept away beautiful forests, so that the land has become as bare as if a disastrous fire had swept it. In addition, wood has been in great demand since the war started and every available tree has been cut down. In Germany the demand was very large for chestnut trees, from which the stocks of guns are manufactured, and in all the belligerent countries lumber has been used as never before—for trench building, wagons and trucks.

All this has aroused the various forest preservation societies throughout Germany. Dealers are going through the Tyrol and are arranging to buy every chestnut tree that they can find. This beautiful country is noted for its majestic trees and nearly every village in the Tyrol is proud of its giant chestnut trees. However, the peasants, many of whom have been almost impoverished by the war, are in great need. They are doing now what they never for a moment dreamed they would do—selling these magnificent trees to the dealers and marring the beauty of their vicinity. Scores of the giant trees have been felled and are lying in the roadways ready to be carted away. This has aroused the tree lovers, and efforts are being made to preserve what trees still remain standing. It is predicted that when the war is over there will be a great scarcity of timber in the belligerent countries, and that the United States will no doubt be called upon to supply the need.

HER DUTY TO COUNTRY.

Parents Dead, Sisters Young, Wealthy Girl Goes as Nurse.

NEW YORK, April 13.—"For the honour of my family the least I can do is to go abroad to act as a nurse. I have no brothers and my sisters are too young to do anything to help others. My parents are dead; why should I not do my share in the great work?"

Miss Doyle is said to be one of the wealthiest young women in Newfoundland. She is a niece of the late Hon. John Harris, president of the Legislative Council of Newfoundland.

She is going to London to report at the Queen Alexandra's Imperial Hospital service, and believes she will be assigned to duty on the firing line in France.

Public Welfarist Gives Some Reasons for Wife Desertion

Why do so many husbands run away? asks the Newburgh News. A statistician connected with the Bureau of Public Welfare has been trying to answer the question. After investigating thousands of cases of desertions, he finds that the husband's action can usually be ascribed to one of the following causes:

Ill-health and peevishness of the wife.

Slouchness of the wife either in her own person or in her housekeeping methods or both.

The wife's habit of nagging or gossiping.

Dislike for children on the wife's part.

This statistician found that the strongest incentive to reconciliation in cases of family discord is almost invariably the child. He also found that very few wives are deserted who are:

Physically big and mentally cheerful.

Able to contribute to the family income either by outside labour or by frugality in home management.

Sympathetic and considerate of their husbands.

The very interesting and valuable statistics which he collected prove that native American husbands are more prone to desert their wives than are the foreign born. They also show that married life is the happiest when husband and wife are nearest alike in age, nationality, religion, moral standards, temperament, health and physical strength.

MONRO TELLS OF BIG LOSSES ON GALLIPOLI

LONDON, April 12.—Another chapter was added to-day to the history of Great Britain's disastrous adventures in the Dardanelles, and to have cost 200,000 men. It is contained in the report of General Sir. C. C. Monro, who succeeded General Sir Ion Hamilton in command.

Twenty-one guns, 508 animals and a large store of supplies were abandoned, says the report published in the Gazette. General Monro gives the first detailed account of the evacuation of Gallipoli. He covers the period between October 28, 1915, and January 9, 1916.

"The position of the British at Gallipoli was unique in history" says the report. "Only a fringe of coast line, a possession with every possible military defect, was secured."

The troops are described in the report as suffering from lack of rest, epidemic diseases, and a dearth of competent officers. The expedition was made up, says General Monro, of Make-shift brigades composed of infantry and cavalry.

"An advance on Constantinople was impossible," says the despatch.

DIFFICULTIES AT SALONIKI.

General Monro accordingly recommended the evacuation of the peninsula and the troops were transferred to Saloniki and Mudros.

Saloniki General Monro says:

"The British arranged to maintain the position from Saloniki to Krivolak and support the French on their right, who were protecting the railway from Krivolak to Veles. If communication with the Serbians was not opened the allies, it had been arranged, were to withdraw.

"Difficulties of transport and of landing troops at Saloniki prevented giving assistance to the Serbians. The intimation that the allies were proceeding with a selected defensive line at Saloniki was well received by the Greek generals, who were friendly."

In the Dardanelles operations, owing to the unprecedented storm of November 21, and the consequent exposure and exhaustion, 200 deaths occurred among the British, and there were 10,000 sick during the first few days of December. It is probable that the Turks suffered more, adds the report.

21 GUNS, 508 ANIMALS LOST

"Text-books principles and the lessons of history were ignored in the evacuation of the peninsula. No preliminary feint attack was made," continues General Monro. "The rapidity of the action was made possible by the favorable weather.

"Ten disabled guns, fifty-six mules and some carts loaded with supplies were set afire and abandoned at Anzac. Supplies only were abandoned at Suiva Bay.

Altogether twenty-one guns, 508 animals, some vehicles and a considerable quantity of supplies were

LONDON, April 13.—The Rotterdam correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphs:

"A popular anti-German agitation has arisen in Amsterdam and Northern Holland, led by a revolutionist named Nieuwenhuis, which aims at preventing foodstuffs and other goods from entering Germany. Demonstrations are being held in the streets of Amsterdam demanding that the frontiers be closed and that F. E. Posthuma, Minister of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce, who is accused of pro-Germanism, be removed.

"Nieuwenhuis was once a favoured democratic leader, but lost his popularity some time ago owing to his extreme Socialism. He is now gaining ground by his anti-German campaign.

"Meanwhile the aristocrats resident at The Hague and the naturalized Germans of Rotterdam are strongly pro-German. Never was the political dividing line between the classes and the masses in Holland so sharp."

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, April 13.—Mexican Petroleum led a decline in prices on the stock exchange at the opening to-day, selling down 1 1-4 points at 108. U. S. Steel was off 1-2 a point and losses of about half a point were general in the war stock list. Beth. Steel was a lone exception, opening at 474, up 9 points. Stee was steady at opening price at 11 o'clock. Crucible was more than a point down, and American Loco which was 1 3-4 points down at 74 3-4, at one time had recovered to 75 1-2.

TORONTO, Ont., April 13.—Canada Cement again made a new high record when the Toronto market opened this morning, but the most noticeable feature was the demand for Russel Motor shares. These advanced yesterday and kept on going up this morning so that the common, which opened at 43 yesterday, sold up to 52 this morning, and the perferred, which opened yesterday at 73, was 83.

Drops of from one to three points marked all of the leaders. Quotations at one o'clock showed American Smelter 98¾ off 2¾ the days high; United States steels loss was ¾ Mexican Petroleum was at 105¼ off 3, Marine preferred at 72¾ was 2 off its high, and Crucible showed a drop of 2⅞.

MUSKRATS IN THE OUTFALL SEWER

It seems slightly extravagant to expend about $75,000 for the sake of trapping muskrats in the streets in the heart of the city—almost. The spring floods in the river have "backed up" the water in the outfall sewer on Park Street, and the muskrats of adventurous spirit enter the sewer on exploring expenditions. They naturally make towards the sewer manholes for air and, so far, several have been caught by the workmen, and made to pay dearly for their invasion of the city's property. Yesterday, about 4 o'clock, workmen were putting in a manhole in the outfall sewer at the junction of the celebrated Romaine street sewer. In the opening of the sewer could be seen occupying the mouth of the latter, apparently waiting developments, and all at sea—or sewer—over the mysterious concrete work going on above could be seen a bouncing big rat. "I'll set a trap for him to-night; he's a big cuss," the remark of one of the workmen had perhaps an occult reference to the final syllable of the aquatic rodent's scientific name—"Fiber Zibethicus." The presence of muskrats in our city streets is, perhaps, something to boast of, but it is an expensive sort of pride, and a dangerous one. With munitions graft filling the air, the presence of muskrats in the $75,000 sewer is a strong temptation to the most honest workmen to practice the "skin game."

Addresses Were Much Enjoyed

The addresses given by Miss H. L. Ellis of Toronto in Murray Street church on Tuesday here were very much enjoyed. The audiences were large in view of the rainy weather and those who attended were well repaid for the effort made.

The afternoon address was on "The Power of Prayer in Missionary Work" and in the evening Miss Ellis spoke on "A World view of Missions."

The reports of the Ladies Circle revealed a year of splendid work in the part of Murray Street ladies. The mite boxes which were opened contained a considerably larger sum than in previous years.

At the evening hour the meeting was in charge of Miss Mary Scott the young ladies president, while Mr. Jos. Wearing introduced Miss Ellis.

A Citizenship Organized For National Service

(From the American Review of Reviews.)

Canada, as an immediate consequence of this war, will have a citizenship fully organized for national service. Even if the war should end within the next year, Canada would have almost or quite half a million soldiers, 60 per cent. of them being well trained and disciplined. She could not fail to benefit by the intense discussion that has taken place in England, the United States, and elsewhere, regarding "preparedness." The best-informed Canadians have said privately, with even more emphasis than in public utterances, that Canada has not the slightest intention of relapsing to a defenceless condition. On the other hand the Canadians are neither so extravagant as to think of creating a professional army on the old-fashioned kind, on a large scale. Their half million soldiers at the end of the war will for the most part constitute a reserve body. They will be eager to go back to civilian life and Canada will be just as free from "militarism' as if no man in the country had ever learned to shoot a rifle. But Canada will almost certainly adopt a plan more or less similar to that of Australia, by means of which boys and young men may obtain a sufficient amount of training to make it easy for them to render actual military service if another time of need should ever come. The experience of our nearest neighbour in this respect should have a salutary influence upon the course of affairs south of the international boundary line.

They are not compelled to bother over what are for the most part exaggerated, if not wholly artificial, distinctions between parties. They are free to give their best thought and effort to the welfare of Canada as a whole. They are seeking points of agreement rather than of difference. They are trying the experiment of governement by co-operation, as against that of government by partisanship, division and misrepresentation. So much of benefit will come to Canada through this period of genuinely constructive national effort that it will go far towards recompensing the losses and sacrifices of the war. If peace comes without too great delay the energising of Canada by reason of the efforts that have been put forth in this period will yield notable results. Not only will Canada be the second nation of the Western Hemisphere—she holds that place already—but one of the most influential communities of the reorganized world that is to be.

EDMONTON NEEDS CASH.

Authority to Sell Land to Realize Taxes is Sought as Relief.

EDMONTON, Alta., April 13—That the credit, not only of Edmonton, but of all cities in Alberta, and even the province itself; will be affected if the Alberta Legislature does not give Edmonton authority to hold a tax sale, is the contention of the Board of Trade Council. It is pointed out that $500,000 arrears is owing on 1915 taxes, and $3,500,000 on the years of 1914 and 1915. The Board of Trade contends the city has reached the irreducible minimum of expense, that money can only be obtained by loans on security of arrears of taxes and by tax sales, or by both, and that loans cannot be obtained without authority to hold tax sales. Default by the city into the hands of receivers is the alternative offered, along with the closing of the city schools and hospitals.

GREECE DENIES THAT RUSSIAN SACKS WERE FOR BULGARS

Absolute Denial Made to Allegation in Paris Temps---Germany Now Merely Fighting For Best Possible Terms

LONDON, April 14.—The Greek Government, according to the despatches from Athens, published a denial of the statement made by the Paris Temps to the effect that Minister Gounaris had allowed Greek officials to sell to Bulgaria 37,000 sacks of property belonging to Russia at Salonika. The Minister asserts that certain sacks were requisitioned, but that Greek property was used for the Greek army.

The Daily Mail correspondent at Athens says that the affair has created great excitement among the press and public there. "The Bulgarian Minister at Greece," he says, "joined Minister Gounaris in the denial of the French paper's statements. The question occupies public attention to the exclusion of everything else. Even Verdun is forgotten."

The newspaper Ethnos says:

"The heart of the people grows faint before such a sinister state of affairs. It is no longer a question of intervention or neutrality, it is a question of a colossal peril sprung upon the State and the people. The probable consequences will give rise to the deepest pessimism. We trust that the facts are not as alleged."

DOESN'T HOPE TO WIN.

PARIS, April 14.—William Foley, the Geneva representative of N. W. Halsey and Co., of New York, arrived in Paris yesterday. He said that he saw at Frankfort on March 6 a partner in a firm of New York bankers, who told him that German financiers are convinced that Germany no longer has any chance of final victory, although the war may continue for eighteen months more. Germany is fighting for the best possible terms.

The banker instructed Mr. Foley to sell £400,000 ($2,000,000) worth of Japanese bonds for New York account. He confirmed reports of food riots throughout Germany. There have been troubles in Frankfort, but conditions are particularly bad in Wurttemberg and Bavaria.

He said that the Deutsche Reichsbank bought all Austrian gold in October, 1914, and on this account Austrian banks have not issued statements since that time.

Sir Sam Welcomes An Investigation

NEW YORK, April 14.—Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia, to-day made a sweeping denial of the truth of the charges made against him in connection with munitions transactions, upon his arrival from England, aboard the liner St. Paul. He told reporters he welcomed an investigation of any fuse transactions.

SHOOTS WIFE AND ATTEMPTS TO COMMIT SUICIDE

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 13.—Mrs. Cora Wolter, who in addition to owning much business property in this city, had attracted much attention in New Haven, here and at Palm Beach because of her beauty, was shot and probably fatally wounded late yesterday afternoon by her husband, Louis Wolter, who then shot himself in the head. Both were reported to be near death last night in St. Vincent's Hospital.

Wolter, the son of a wealthy cigar manufacturer of Chicago, left letters accusing his wife of ruining his happiness and driving him to the end her first husband found. Frank Ames, a Bridgeport theatre owner, who was her first husband, killed himself with gas two years ago after writing a letter stating that he did so because she had fallen in love with Wolter.

Mrs. Wolter and her husband returned from Palm Beach only a few weeks ago and went to live in apartment house she owns at No. 60 Cannon street. They quarreled and she left him on April 8, going to live in another apartment she maintains here. On Saturday she filed papers in the court here for a divorce.

Apparently Wolter was preparing to kill himself this afternoon and had no thought of ending her life when she happened to call at No. 60 Cannon street. She said she went there to get letters and papers belonging to her. Following the tragedy the police found many letters addressed to her by other men.

"You Sold My Love"

Wolter had written two letters just before she called, in which he spoke of being about to end his life. One of these was addressed to his wife, and read:

"Dear Girl— Frank Ames did the same thing that I am going to do. You sold my love and everything I have. God-bye, little girl, you have gone the limit, good-bye.

"LOUIS."

The other letter, framed in the utterest of language, was addressed to Dwight W. Tuttle, a prominent lawyer in New Haven.

The unexpected arrival of Mrs. Wolter apparently had interrupted her husband's writing the letter to Mr. Tuttle. He had not finished that letter. So far as known Wolter was surprised to see his wife. Their quarrel was renewed. Angry words were heard and Wolter pursued his wife from the rooms and down the stair. While she was running down the steps he fired three shots at her. Two bullets entered her back and she fell the rest of the way to the landing.

Then Wolter returned to the room where he had been writing and sent a bullet into his head. Neighbours heard the shooting and soon found them.

In searching the rooms the police found many letters from men addressed to Mrs. Wolter. Several of these had been addressed to her at the Breakers Hotel, Palm Beach, where she had stopped every winter. One was from a man, who write:

"I fear your dazzling beauty will be my death. You haunt my dreams and I am never happy away from you."

In another letter the police said that a man stopping at Palm Beach had threatened to commit suicide unless the woman to whom he addressed it left her husband and went away with him.

Mrs. Wolter, who is about thirty-five years old, was married to Mr. Ames twelve years ago and they were quite unhappy until he ended his life. She had inherited a large income-paying business property here and Mr. Ames enjoyed a large income from his theatre.

It was at Palm Beach that she met Mr. Wolter, about three years ago. Her husband objected to Wolter's attentions and in May, 1914, ended his life, leaving a letter that Wolter had ruined his home. A few months later Mrs. Ames and Wolter were married. She had been interested with his father in the manufacturing business in Chicago and sold that interest and lived here and at Palm Beach with his wife.

DRINK WATER TO AVOID SICKNESS SAYS AUTHORITY

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Daily Keeps the Doctor Away.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research in the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quickly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make everyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

RUN BANKERS KNOW TRUTH

VICTORY IMPOSSIBLE.

But War May Last 18 Months More ...Food Riots Have Occurred in Germany.

NEW YORK, April 13.—A cable from Paris to the Sun says:

William Foley, the Geneva representative of N. W. Halsey and Co., of New York, arrived in Paris today. He said that he saw at Frankfort on March 6 a partner in a firm of New York bankers, who told him that German financiers are convinced that Germany no longer has any chance of final victory, although the war may continue for eighteen months more. Roman Meal Prevents Tooth Decay because it provides in the dark parts and bran of grains the lime salts which harden teeth. It also has the coarseness which keeps them free from accumulations and promotes circulation in them. Best of all, it prevents absorption of poisonous substances from the digestive tract which are excreted by mucous membranes of the mouth as acids and which erode the tooth, enamel, causing teeth to break down. Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is thus a godsend to your child. Make it in porridge, pancakes, and baked products. Try, also, the ready cooked form known as Roman Meal Nuggets. They are delicious when served with hot milk and cream.

REVOLVER FORCES UNWILLING STRIKE

NEW YORK, April 13.—The three hundred men employed in the National Fireproofing Company's plant at Woodbridge, N.J. are satisfied with their working conditions and turned a deaf ear to the repeated summons of Orro Shander to go on strike. He had been agitating a strike at the plant for several weeks and at noon yesterday he tried to hold a strike meeting of the men.

They laughed at him and told him to go about his business. He did, but his business is starting strikes and that is what he proceeded to do.

When all the men had returned to their work after the noon hour Shand er entered the plant with a revolver which he flourished, and ordered every man to leave his work. Just to show he was not joking he fired a few shots and broke electric light globes.

Most of the men did as he ordered now, should the old trouble re-cur marching out into the yard, where he lined them against a fence. The few who failed to join his personally conducted strike were forced away from their machines with his pistol pressed against them.

In the yard Shander was delivering a fiery strike speech to the men when the police arrived. He resisted, and in the fight his nose was broken. After he and his revolver and several boxes of cartridges were carried away by the police the "strike" was declared off and the men returned to their work. Shander had been employed in the plant several weeks.

PITTSBURG PARKS FOR "SPOONING"

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 13.—"I want to extend an invitation to all of Pittsburg's lovers, and married persons as well, to use the city parks for 'spooning' if they so desire, and, further, any policeman who attempts to interfere will be 'put on the books,' on the ground that he is not humane," announced Superintendent of Police Matthews.

"Yes, sir, you can say for me that 'spooning' goes in the parks, and Easter ought to be a good time to inaugurate it," continued Superintendent Matthews. "It is in the spring of the year especially that young hearts turn to love affairs, and love leads to marriage and happy homes, so why not let the boys and girls 'spoon' and count stars?"

The HOME CIRCLE COLVAN

LOVE RETAINED.

In our estimation there is no subject of more interest to womankind than that of retaining a husband's love. Of course when a young couple start to make the home nest they are surrounded with the glow of romance and sentimentalism, and life seems all rose tinted. But by degrees the stern, prosaic side of life is shown and for the first time they realise that life is not all a bed of roses, that there is bitter mingled with the sweet. Gradually they get accustomed to each other's society. He don't rush home as eagerly as in the first few weeks of their married life. One day he is much later than usual in coming home to his dinner, and she is careless about his company, too; so she has gone out to see a neighbor; he has to go in the dining room and eat his dinner alone. He means to go home quite early that evening by way of atonement, but unfortunately business detains and it is a little later than usual ere he can leave his office, but he hurries home because he knows, or thinks he does, that someone is waiting to welcome him, but alas, for human hopes! When he reaches home, instead of the radiant face and bewitching smile which he expected to see his wife has retired; she feels so much aggrieved that not one pleasant word does the poor tired husband get. She means to teach him that his society is not also much importance to him after all, and well he learns the lesson. The next evening he stops for a chat with an old chum, finds it very pleasant to resume past relations and be "one of the boys" again. And so that tiny rift within the lute has wrought discord in the once happy home. She wonders why he no longer courts her society as of yore. Let us whisper a word of advice right here. Let your husband know by word and deed that there are no hours so sweet to those spent by the fireside with him, that you prefer his company to all others. Make your home so bright and attractive that he will be anxious to spend all the time that he can in the cosy little nook, and last but not least, make yourself as charming as possible. You need not think he does not care how you look. Oh, yes, he does, and you should curl your bangs or crimp your hair as prettily and dress as becomingly as when you were a girl and dressed to meet your [illegible]

We wish every mother could dream this dream. "The world may spare her but [illegible] home cannot." There are no children but need a mother's care and love. They are more responsive and obedient to a tie of blood than to a tie created by law. Does she inquire then how can she economize her forces that they may last; how she can burn less fuel that her little fire of life may burn brightly and long? My answer is, let women try to give to things their true importance. It will make no difference in a week's or a year's time how the windows and woodwork look today; it will make a difference whether the children are perfectly nourished physically and trained mentally. Learn to do the most important things first, and if your strength ebbs, learn to let the minor things wait. Try to get something out of life for all that you put into it. Enjoy something to-day for to-morrow may never be yours. People ought to get more than an existence with such help as sunshine and song, laughter and friendship.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn how to tell a story. A good story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick room. Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows. Learn to stop croaking. If you cannot see any good in the world keep the bad to yourself. Learn to hide your aches and pains under a pleasant smile. No one cares to hear whether you have the earache, headache or rheumatism. Learn to meet your friends with a smile. The good humored man or woman is always welcome but the dyspeptic or hypochondriac is not wanted anywhere and is a nuisance as well.

December is that one month of the year when the conduct or deportment of the average child improves about ninety-nine and nine-tenths per cent. The change begins to manifest itself early in the month and continues to grow until the twenty-fifth when a perfect halo of innocence and virtue illuminates their faces. If we could have three or four Christmases a year the reform schools would have to go out of business.

WOMAN'S LOVE

There is a positive cheerfulness that is determined to look upon the bright side of life through whatever discouragements present themselves. It is fortunate for the home mother and for her husband and her children when she is possessed of an actively cheerful disposition. It is a sight of a kind heart and a firm determination to make others happy as well as to be happy herself. The cheerful woman will find a dozen causes for congratulations in events which to others have a sinister look. A week of rain keeps her at home from a long-anticipated visit, but she will tell you and she undoubtedly makes herself believe it, that it is fortunate for the season of quiet has given her a chance to finish a quantity of sewing or to do some special preserving she was anxious to have off her mind. The lovelight is in her eye, whether days be dark or bright. She smooths all paths and conquers the most obdurant grumblers. She has a kindly word to say to every one. Gossip pains her, and she often manages by that admirable tact, which is so often a part of her gift, to turn the conversation into a more kindly channel of thought. There are emergencies in every household which call for a display of a statesman's skill. The cheerful woman is pre-eminent on such occasions. She conquers the grim uncle or the dyspeptic cousin with her infective cheerfulness, and her servants recognize her as their friends and ally in all matters that are essential to their welfare. The length of time she keeps her servants is a source of wonderment to her less fortunate friends, but the secret of it is her own winsome disposition. She soothes the tired worker with a word of kind commendation where another might make a querulous complaint. When direction is needed she delivers it in such a gentle, albeit firm manner, that it has no sting or reproof. This gentle, tactful woman is not afflicted with work that is from sun to sun, or that is never done. She does not moralize much, perhaps, but by some means she manages to accomplish a great deal of work and have plenty of time at her command. It is by means of that same cheerfulness of disposition. There is less delay in executing her commands, and she possesses the gift of timing her turns so that sometimes it seems as if the fairies did help her. And the fairies of gentle breeding and kind heart do help her. Heaven bless the cheerful woman.

[illegible] more may surpass the true love of a
Of all the love affairs in the world, big boy for his mother. It is pure and noble, honorable to the highest degree in both. We do not mean merely a dutiful affection. We mean a love that makes a boy gallant and courteous to his mother, saying to everybody plainly that he is fairly in love with her. Next to the love of a husband, nothing so crowns a woman's life with honor as this second love, this devotion of a son to her. We never yet knew a boy to turn out bad who began by falling in love with his mother, whose man may fall in love with every pretty, vain girl, and the man who is a fresh-faced girl, and the man who is gallant with the girl may cruelly neglect his wife and scorn wife, but the boy who is a lover of his mother, in her middle age is a true knight, who will love his wife as much in her sere-leafed autumn as he did in the dalsied springtime.

Mothers, be patient. Do not wound a child; remember it has a tender heart, and who can bear to see the quiver of a baby lips, or hear the echo of infant sorrow even after sleep has shut down the tear washed lids. "If we knew the baby fingers,
Pressed against the window pane,
Would the cold and dismal to-morrow,
Never trouble us again,
Would the bright eyes of our darling
Catch the frown upon our brow,
Would the print of rosy fingers
Vex us then, as they do now?"

Some women are intellectually bright in spite of their environments, and because of them. The broader and higher the life, the more there is in it. But from other women, how early in life we often see the lustre of brightness fading away, and it is those mothers who are weighted down with household and maternal duties, and have resigned themselves to restrict their pleasure and advancement to second hand, through their sons and daughters. First of all, do not allow yourself to think you are growing older for thinking is being out of this subject. Those who try to remain young in a certain sense succeed in doing so. Be generous to yourself.

* * *

Success in life does not come by having your own way every time. Yielding a little here and there smooths many a rough place. In domestic life, one finds the most perfect house where there is mutual forbearance, and in business the most successful merchant is the one who does not seek to gain every cent for himself.

Don't fret and fume at the petty ills of life; remember that the wheels which go round without creaking last longest.

THE OVERSEAS LEGIONS.

The children you have nurtured, Empress, see—
They come to float your banners—shore and shore,
Calm azure coast and islands multiflore
Suddenly teem with living answer: We
Are ready, and if ever fiefs before,
Sons now, henceforth! What orders, Majesty?

Swarthy the bands, dark-browed and fine of limb—
And men shall hear, before the war is done,
How India chaunts the Empire's battle hymn.
Link upon link, until the chain is one.
They gather from the distant borders dim.

Heavy the wheat fields lie beneath the heat
Of August suns, ungarnered. Strength and worth
Of vigorous labourer have all gone forth
The warlike tide of foreign field to meet.
Canada sends her farmers from the North
To harvest in for England living wheat.

The sea-brow'd islands hear the rolling drum.
As through the Empire's heart the shock is felt
Of war. And men forget that they have dwelt
Afar from England, and they turn them home.
Alrien leaves her herds upon the veldt.
What orders, England? See, your legions come!

HUNDRED OF AMERICAN MOTOR CARS IN LONDON.

LONDON, April 12.— American automobiles lately have been arriving by the hundreds on nearly every ship from New York, and there are several ten acre yards along the upper Thames where these American cars, in boxes, may be seen stacked ten boxes high. The majority are motor lorries for the army, and they are allowed to accumulate in the yards until wanted for actual use. When the order comes for a certain number of machines the man in charge of the yard locates the kind desired and has a force of mechanics to set up the cars immediately for delivery.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MME. PETROFF

(BY BARBARA PHIPPS)

It was midwinter in what was then St. Petersburg, now Petrograd. A party of ladies and gentlemen were skating on the Neva. A lady was standing somewhat apart from the others looking at the skaters. Noticing two gentlemen go by her in company, she turned to a lady standing near and asked, who they were. She was informed that one of them was a grand duke, the other Count Demidoff. At the mention of the latter name the inquirer started. Her informant noticed it and asked the cause, whereupon the other said something which interested the hearer greatly.

"I am Mme. Garotsky," the latter said. "I know the count very well. If you will permit I will arrange a meeting between you and him."

The next day Count Memidoff received an invitation to dinner with Mme. Garotsky to meet a friend of hers from one of the provinces. He accepted the invitation, and the moment he laid eyes on a guest to whom he was introduced as Mme. Petroff, he was struck with her beauty. Not only that, he was delighted with her intelligence. After the dinner Mme. Garotsky pleaded an indisposition and, retiring to her room, left her two guests together.

The count passed a delightful evening. Before taking his departure he had confessed that he was a married man, but was not living with his wife. Indeed, he had been married by proxy and had never seen his wife. He belonged to a very old family, his title dating back many centuries, and would have had the entree to the court circle had he the means to associate with persons who spent money like water. He had advertised for some rich commoner who would marry him and turn over to him a portion of her estate in lieu of being permitted to assume his rank. It was to be a mere commercial transaction, the two separating as soon as the marriage ceremony had been performed. His advertisement met the eye of a young widow who had inherited a large fortune from her husband, a very rich manufacturer much older than herself, who had died soon after their marriage. She offered a large slice of her estate for the privilege of being a countess, and, since neither expressed a wish to see the other and the widow lived in a remote province, they were married by proxy.

Mme. Petroff listened to this story, and the count fancied that he saw a sigh, which he attributed to the fact that he was a married man. Indeed, he had been captivated by the lady and was saddened at the thought that a marriage between him and her was impossible. However, when they parted he took her address in the city and the very next day called upon her.

Mme. Petroff remained in Petrograd some time and gave the count every encouragement to be with her. They drove together, skated together and Demidoff secured invitations for her. One day he told her that he loved her and would be only too glad to marry her were it not for the insurmountable objection that kept them apart.

Notwithstanding the fact of that objection, when Mme. Petroff returned to her home she invited Count Demidoff to visit her there. He scarcely understood this, for she had given him evidence of being a good woman, and if she could be anything more than a friend to him it could only be a wife, and to be his wife was impossible. He was loath to go, feeling that since he could not possess her he was only sinking deeper in misery. He had sounded her on the matter of a possible return of the fortune he had received from his wife and a divorce. But she had declared that on no account would she marry a divorced man.

When the count entered the place wherein Mme. Petroff lived he was astonished at its magnificence. On entering the house he found every luxury. His hostess introduced him to her mother, who lived with her, thus making his visit perfectly proper.

Count Demidoff's stay in the home of Mme. Petroff was like a visit to fairyland. Every day the hostess contrived new methods of passing the time agreeably. One thing surprised the count — there were no other guests except himself. Moreover, all the servants seemed to be acting as if they had been trained to a part. When they said "Yes, madame," something they got it "Yes, Mme. Petroff," and at all times they appeared to be saying what the simple creatures were not used to saying. One evening a lackey who was sent to summon the count for dinner said:

"The countess!" exclaimed Demidoff.

"I mean Mme. Petroff," said the poor fellow, covered with confusion.

"There is something concealed here," said the count half aloud to himself and went down to his hostess.

"Countess," he said, "may I take you in to dinner?"

"What!" exclaimed the hostess. "You have got my secret?"

"I have, replied the count, making a gigantic bluff.

"And you know that I am your wife, the Countess Demidoff?"

It was the count's turn to be astonished.

"You my wife—you, the provincial with whom I exchanged my title for a portion of your fortune?"

"Then you did not know"—

"But I know now." And, springing forward, he caught her in his arms.

HAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.

Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the tenits of the elbows, the backs of the knees, the groove behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as it is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the foulness from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adelard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do my work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taken it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BATTLES FOUGHT ON SNOW-SHOES AND SKATES

The recent battle on snow-shoes fought between the Italians and the Austrians among the soldiers of the High Alps, is not quite the loftiest encounter between regular armed and drilled soldiers recorded in the world's history, as has been asserted in some quarters.

No longer ago than 1904, British troops stormed the Gyangtse Jong, a strong Tibetan fort on the road to Lhasa, which is situated at a height of not less than 15,000 feet above the level of the sea. It was while scrambling to the attack up a well-nigh perpendicular precipice that a weary Tommy was heard to ejaculate: "I thought as how they told us afore we started that this 'ere Tibet was a bloomin' tableland." "So it is, you fathead," answered a comrade, "and we're climbing up the bally legs."

There has been no fighting on skates in Flanders this year, but that was due to the absence of prolonged frost. Both sides were known to have laid in plentiful stocks of skates, and had the winter been a severe one, instead of comparatively open, we should no doubt have seen a repetition of the tactics pursued by the Dutch when the Spaniards, under Alva, were besieging Amsterdam.

The besiegers in this case were taken completely by surprise, for the armed burghers of the city were adepts at skating; and sallying out across the frozen broads and marshes, they were able easily to out-manoeuvre the Spaniards, and eventually put them to flight, with the loss of several hundreds left dead upon the ice.

"TIZ" FOR TIRED AND SORE FEET

Use "Tiz" for puffed-up, burning, aching, calloused feet and Corns.

Why go limping around with aching, puffed-up feet—feet so tired, chafed, sore and swollen you can hardly get your shoes on or off? Why don't you get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" from the drug store now and gladden your tortured feet?

SURVIVED EXECUTION

Frenchman Lives Through Series of Adventures Almost Unbelievable

One of the most remarkable stories of the war is told by a French soldier who was made a prison r in the Ardennes in August, 1914, and who is now in a hospital in Paris. When he was captured the soldier was taken to the rear, and was informed by a German officer that the regiment was going to march through the town and that he would have to carry the German flag. The French soldier refused to do this and was told that he would then be shot for disobeying orders. "Shoot me," he replied; "I will not carry your flag."

The German officer detached seven men and ordered the French soldier to be shot at the first house in the village. The man was bound and the firing party started for the place of execution. On the road eight French prisoners under a German escort were met. "They wish to strike your imagination," said the doomed soldier, "I am going to be shot. Do not allow yourselves to be demoralized." At the first house in the village the French soldier was shot. He fell with four bullets in his right arm, two in the leg and one in the side. The firing party were men belonging to 23rd Prussian regiment of infantry, according to the Frenchman. The soldier was not killed. He regained consciousness. A German officer on horseback passed, and the soldier implored his help. The officer dismounted and without a word fired his revolver at his head. But the shot was not fatal. Next day the Frenchman felt his strength returning. A doctor wearing gold spectacles was bending over him, and gave orders for a piece of canvas to be thrown over his body. A ticket with the words "not transportable" was pinned to the canvas. The supposedly dead soldier was still conscious, but had not sufficient strength to move or cry out. The ticket prevented any ambulance man from picking him up.

For three days he lay there. Then, on the evening of the fourth, he felt that he was being moved. With a supreme effort he aroused himself from the torpor of death and groaned. He subsequently found himself in an ambulance with Belgian nurses attending him. A German doctor was giving orders. Afterwards he learned that two German soldiers had picked him up, believing that he had received his wounds while fighting. The French soldier held his tongue as to what had really occurred. For ten months he remained in Belgium, and was then sent to Germany, where he lived in a camp for three months. Finally he was returned to France with other seriously wounded prisoners. "And here I am," said the soldier, concluding his extraordinary tale. "My life resumed. I hope I have been spared in order to be revenged."

TELEGRAPH ASSISTS THE GENERAL STAFF

How a Modern Battle is Controlled—Specialized Work of Branches of Staff Described

An English newspaperman writes from Paris as follows: A modern army, even in times of peace, is an organization more gigantic and complex than any other active human combination, but in time of war, when it takes the field, it is a mobile force necessitating organization and service, the variety and scope of which almost stagger the imagination, and all these different forms of activity are under the control of a single group of men, who comprise the brains of the army. The British General Staff, presided over by the Chief of General Staff, is divided into two principal departments—Operations and Intelligence—known respectively as "O" and "I." The operations staff is occupied with the transmission of orders and the examination and transmission of reports of all kinds from all the armies and allied forces and purely military routine work.

The Intelligence Department is divided into four sub-sections. The first sub-division, "I.a," as it is known, collects all available information about the enemy; the strength and disposition of his forces; reinforcements, losses, etc. This is extremely important work, and in the present war is carried on by officers thoroughly conversant not only with the German language, but with the German army. The examination of prisoners, a task requiring some tact, forms part of their daily duties. A grimmer aspect of their activities is the examination of letters and badges found on the dead bodies of enemy soldiers. The badges play an important part in showing the location of different corps and regiments.

Spies, Maps, Tickers

The secret service section of the Intelligence Staff is known as "I.b." It deals with spies, reports from secret agents, and also watches and counters espionage by the enemy. "I.c." is the censorship section. The "I.c." section is kept busy with preparing maps which devote special attention to enemy positions. The staff receives data from all sources, and from all parts of the front. They rely particularly on the numerous reports and wonderful photographs they receive from the flying corps.

With regard to the making of maps, different armies have different ideas. At the General Headquarters of the French army, for example, there is, in a huge table about twenty-feet square, a relief map of the western theatre of war modelled in clay. This map shows the whole western battle line from the Channel to the Swiss frontier—every mountain, hill, and valley, every river, road and railway. It is as if one were poised in an aeroplane over France and could see the whole expanse of country from Dunkirk to Belfort, a distance of 400 miles. Along each section of the line of trenches, a number of 'movable' blocks are placed. These blocks represent units of the French army—a corps, a division, or a brigade, according to size. The approximate forces of the enemy are also graphically depicted in this way. With this great map before him, General Joffre anticipates or meets every attack or counter-attack on the part of the enemy.

How Joffre Works

In the adjoining room a telegraph office, "I which as many as 1,000 despatches are received in a day. The telegraphic and telephonic aides of the General digest and classify all information at once. On receiving news of an enemy movement the silent General, after mature consideration and consultation with the members of his staff, moves a few blocks on the map. As soon as his staff officers have worked out the necessary details, the telegraphers get busy. Probably thousands of soldiers are set marching, artillery is moved from one point to another. The supply wagons follow the fighting forces, and ambulances and field hospitals follow the ammunition trains. A bombardment of the hostile position begins, which may continue for days before the infantry is ordered to attack. So a great battle begins and is planned by the movements of a few blocks on a map.

A Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. Margaret Grasman, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—Mrs. George A. Dunbar, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—Mrs. E. Kiselius, 931 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.

Thinks the Verdun Drive Was a Political Move

Among the many military writers who are giving to the world their views on the reasons for the German attack on Verdun one of the best known is General Malleterre, of the Paris Temps, who believes the movement was begun because the German General Staff felt the necessity of striking a blow at some prominent point of the Western front in order to obtain a moral success that they could use to impress neutral nations. He admits that Germany by no means has reached the limit of her force.

"The eighteen months that have passed since the battle of the Marne," he says, "have given to us and to our Allies time to make up for our want of foresight and our unpreparedness and to gain that superiority with which we shall crush the Germans. This very drive on Verdun is a proof that the Kaiser's General Staff recognizes that it is incapable of conducting a general offensive which alone can produce a break on the front attacked while holding off other adversaries.

"Germany is reduced to making ventures with her shuttles of armies going to and fro between the different fronts, which are facilitated by her central situation and the remarkable organization of the imperial railways, and whatever partial successes she may attain, at a price more and more disproportionate to the results, she is fated to pass to the defensive everywhere, a defensive powerfully organized, only yielding at the last extremity any of the positions gained and discounting a final settlement as advantageous as possible for herself.

"We must not deceive ourselves. Germany has by no mean reached the limit of her resisting power, nor the Allies that of their effort. But common sense tells us that Germany, having mapped out a rapid and decisive war, has left us too much time to compensate for our inferiority at the beginning, and the more time passes the more the balance of force is turning to the profit of the Allies.

"In one of his daring announcements which sounded the call to arms for Germany just before the war General von Bernhardi cried in apocalyptic style that 'already God could be heard walking in the world.' And, as a matter of fact, we have heard these first steps of the German Thor, god of holocausts and devastation. As Heine had predicted, he came to destroy our Gothic cathedrals. But we hear other sounds, echoes of eternal justice, and among them, strange to say, are German voices.

"'We thought,' wrote a German journalist in 1915, 'that France was corrupted, that she had lost the sense of national solidarity. We recognize now that the French are formidable adversaries. Those who have led us into all these errors, all these false calculations, all these mistakes, have taken upon themselves a heavy burden of responsibility.'

"And Prince von Buelow wrote, also a little while before the war: 'There is in France an unalterable faith in the indestructibility of the vital forces of the nation. This dogma is based on the whole history of France. No other people has each time repaired so quickly the consequences of a national disaster, none has regained so easily its energy, its confidence in itself and its spirit of enterprise after cruel disappointments and defeats which appeared to be crushing.'"

System Was Full of Poison; Pains in Side and Back

Bad Constipation For Many Years, But Was Entirely Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

The most common ailment and the greatest cause of disease and suffering to-day is constipation. Artificial food and sedentary indoor life combine to induce torpid, sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. As a result poisonous waste matter remains in the system and gives rise to pains and aches and affords a starting point for serious disease.

Infectious and contagious diseases are little known to persons whose liver, kidneys and bowels are kept in healthful activity, for there are no suitable conditions for disease germs to thrive in. Even common colds usually take their start when they find the system in a constipated, poisoned condition.

Mrs. Ed. Miller, West Flamboro, Ont., writes: "I can truthfully say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have cured me of constipation. I suffered with constipation almost ever since I can remember, and for four years had pains at the left side of the back. If I walked across the kitchen floor I would have to sit and rest. That, I think, was terrible for a woman of twenty years. The condition of my blood was shown by pimples breaking out on my face. I suffered so much from pains and stiffness in the back, I am sure my system was full of poison. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have entirely cured me, and I feel better than I have felt for many years."

As a cure for constipation Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills stand alone, for by their action on the liver they awaken the activity of this organ, cause a good flow of bile, and hence remove the cause of indigestion, for bile is nature's cathartic. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

We need the picture of a waist that is "different"—even odd in design: one really stylish and practical too—that can be modified or adjusted to suit the individual taste, before we can be convinced that all these qualities can be combined in a simple shirt waist. One that will stand the test is shown in the illustrations—

No. 7,660—A very fetching model, to be made either with or without the front frill and in your choice of long or short sleeves, with the results shown by the views in the picture. The fronts are gathered at the shoulders and to the extreme in fashion is the blouse in its fullness. A very dainty collar overlays the neck, which is finished with a fold of the material that is used in somewhat curved outline down front for the button closing, suggesting box plait. The double frill just ripples an invitation. It is made with two plaits at the upper edge and when attached to the waist gives a semi-Eton effect. The sleeves have a double cuff—the outer one finishing with a frill or pleated ruffle. The perfectly plain tailored style shirt waist is the result of omitting the frill.

Sizes of this pattern are cut in 36, 38, 40 and 42 inch bust measure. Medium size requires 2 yards of 44 inch material.

To obtain this pattern send coupon to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

GIRL IN PAJAMAS SHOCKS AND PUZZLES POLICEMAN

NEW YORK, April 13.—If there is one thing on which the Police Department rule book is silent, it is the Chinese national costume. Nowhere from the title page to the epilogue does it even faintly suggest how a perfect Chinese lady, in sublimated pyjamas—the same being the regular Shanghai feminine street costume—should be treated by a New York policeman from County Clare.

The policeman on duty at Seventy-Second Street and Columbus Avenue was cogitating on the increased cost of spuds, the probable income of the Fifth Avenue 'bus which just hissed three children, and the possible menu for his next dinner, when he gave a regular policeman's gasp. This is a long drawn wheeze, ending in a sigh, and means—"Well, what have we here?"

What was had there was a slim, slant eyed young woman leading a fox terrier by a leash and a crowd of interested ones through curiosity. She wore a pink and blue striped suit of pyjamas and bronze heeled slippers and she appeared as much at ease as if she were powdering her nose in her boudoir.

"Here, here!" called the policeman, sternly, "what's this?" and he held up his hand to halt the young woman. She gave him a Chinese stare and dropped behind to permit two young women in regular costumes to step forward.

"What do you want?" one asked. "We are the Misses Madeline and Alice Liebert, daughters of the French Consul General, and this is our maid."

"Sure," said the policeman. "That's all right, miss, and a nice girl she is, too, but she can't go around with them things on. Why don't she dress?"

"That is her native dress. She is Chinese," said Miss Alice.

"They don't wear skirts," snapped the young woman.

The policeman groped for some precedent. Fly, the terrier the Chinese maid was leading, barked, and the throng guggled.

The policeman sighed, then became stern.

"Move on," said he. "What are y' gatherin' here for? Move on, I tell y'—Miss," he added. "Better take her home and put on skirts. Sure them things is all right for China, but they ain't for New York," and he gave another policeman's gasp and walked on.

The daughters of the newly appointed French Consul General, Gaston Liebert, came here a short time ago from China, where he had been stationed. The maid, who answers to the name of Ah Koo—spoken quickly—came with them. At the Majestic Hotel, where they are staying, it was said that the maid will continue to wear the—er—pants unless the Police Department rule book is amended.

"LET US EAT PET DOGS"

German Paper Says "Good, Cheap Food" Would Thus Be Obtained.

LONDON, April 11.—The Express quotes the following from the Neueste Nachrichten of Leipzig: "At the present time we have not a crust of bread, not a slice of meat, not one potato too many, and even the bones and offal are eagerly searched for. thousands have been made orphans by this fearful war, and are now almost without food or shelter.

"Yet there are still more than 10,000 pet dogs kept in Leipzig, useless luxuries, which are fed on good food, the sight of which would make the mouths of many a poor human waif water with envy.

"Let the authorities raise the dog tax. The result will be a snug little revenue. Should the owners demur at paying the high tax for their idle indulgence the dogs could simply be seized and turned over to the butchers and made to serve a more useful purpose dead than they did alive, and a cheap and wholesome food would become at once available even to the poorest."

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Tumblers that have been used for milk should be filled first with cold water and rinsed; then use a little warm water. Putting the milky glass into hot water first has the effect of clouding it permanently.

Success of a New Remedy For Backache, Kidneys, Rheumatism

Dear Mr. Editor—I suffered for years with backache. Last March I tried "Anuric" and have used this new kidney medicine recently discovered by Dr. Pierce, and it was wonderful the way it eased the pain and gave me relief in such a short time. I have tried several medicines, but "Anuric" is the only one that gave satisfaction. I feel it my duty to recommend "Anuric Tablets" to any one who suffers as I did.

(Signed) Mrs. Margaret E. Snider.

Note: Folks intown and adjoining counties are delighted with the results they have obtained by using "ANURIC," the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce, who is head of the INVALIDS HOTEL and SURGICAL INSTITUTE, in Buffalo, N.Y. Those who started the day with a backache, stiff legs, arms and muscles, and an aching head (worn out before the day began because they were in and out of bed half a dozen times at night) are appreciating the perfect rest, comfort and new strength they obtained from Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. To prove that this is a certain uric acid solvent and conquers headache, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism, if you've never used the "Anuric," cut this out and send ten cents to Doctor Pierce for a large sample package. This will prove to you that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid—and the most perfect kidney and bladder your best druggist and ask for a 50-cent box of "Anuric." You run no risk, corrector. If you are a sufferer, go to for Dr. Pierce's good name stands behind this wonderful new discovery as it has for the past half century for his "Golden Medicine Discovery," a general tonic made from roots with pure glycerine which makes the blood pure, his "Favorite Prescription" for weak women and "Pleasant Pellets" for liver ills.

A WOMAN'S WEAPON.

Men fight with deadly guns and smothering flames,
With bombs contrived to madden, maim and kill—
With all the hellish enginery of war,
Devised by savagery and hate and skill.

The man is most acclaimed who does the most
To injure some one called his enemy—
To leave him roofless, childless, sightless, marred,
To make him bonded, if he find him free.

Her prayers avail not, neither do her tears—
She of the weak, white hands, the timorous heart,
Oppressed by dull forebodings, cares and fears.

Not hers to fight with guns, to dig the trench,
Nor always to bind up the wounds that bleed.
Hers but the tender wish, the humble deed!

Mute, into garments for some unknown lad—
Heart-sick for home—she puts her work and thought,
Or fashions wraps for some strange orphaned babe,
Whose hopeless fate great Emperors have wrought.

Perchance in some New England kitchen plain
All she can do, her weapon of bright steel—
A needle! Ah, the odds! The task! The foe!

that eczema cases, which have defied all other treatment, yield to Zam-Buk? An illustration of this is found in the case of Mr. J. L. Frenette, of Nigadoo, N.B. He writes:—

The first few applications stopped the burning. Gradually the inflammation was drawn out, and before long the sores began to heal. ZAM-BUK

OFFICIALS IN A ROUGH AND TUMBLE FIGHT FOR CONTROL

BALSTON SPA, N.Y., April 13.—Heads were battered when the clash between Edgar T. Brackett and Senator George H. Whitney for control of the Saratoga county republican organization ended last evening in a free-for-all fist fight for possession of the records of the sensational meeting. The two factions, in a turmoil of excitement, elected two complete sets of county committee officials in the same hall at the same time.

Mr. Brackett held the rump convention. Both sides claim the victory. It will all be fought out in the courts. Politicians see in the result the end of Mr. Brackett's iron hand rule of his county.

Throwing out all the contentions of the Brackett faction, Senator Whitney declared himself re-elected chairman by the closest of margins. This was repudiated by Mr. Brackett and his followers and, with Harry A Holmes, the secretary, as temporary chairman, elected Surogate W. S. Ostander of Saratoga, as chairman

Mr. Brckett as Director.

Hundreds of angry, excited partisans, standing on chairs and crowding to the front of the biggest room in the County Court House heard only a few words as the rolls were called. The wildest confusion prevailed. Mr Brackett stood close by Mr. Holmes, and directed his proceedings. Senator Whitney's voice could not be heard three feet away from the big mahogany bench as he shouted the names in the burlesque proceedings.

When the roll had been called three times in about three minutes by each side electing the complete set of officials, Senator Whitney stepped quickly down to the table occupied by Mr. Holmes as secretary and picked up the records of the meeting. These included the roll calls, the proxies of several members, the figures on which the computations were made under the curious up-State law of apportionment. Then Mr. Whitney stepped back to toward the bench.

"Don't let him take these records shouted Hiram C. Todd, Mr Brackett's law partner, and leaped over the railing in front of the bench. Instantly pandemonium broke loose. Mr Holmes made a dive for Senator Whitney and Mr. Ostrander who was yelling out a speech, sprang over the desk. The fight was on.

"Where you going?" cried a small man, and grasped Mr. Ostrander around the neck. A hundred delegates and political camp followers were swarming over the railing and leaping to the judge's bench in less than half a minute. They upset tables and smashed hats. Fists were used freely. The Whitney men held the bench and drove back the assault.

Officials of the Law Clash.

In the melee that followed the records were slipped to some one who made good his escape.

Sheriff W. J. Dodge, a Brackett lieutenant, leaped from the railing to the bench across the shoulders of half a dozen scrambling republicans and seized Senator Whitney and yelled: "Give me them papers." "I haven't got the papers," shouted the Senator.

"You take your hands off him or it will go hard with you," cried L. B. McKilvey, the District Attorney, throwing himself against Mr. Dodge. The Sheriff let go. The mauling and hauling, shoving and striking continued probably three or four minutes. Half a dozen coats were torn off as those suspected of having papers concealed were pitched upon and searched. One man was thrown bodily over the bench, but as he landed on several others mixed up in free-for-all fashion he was not hurt. When it was all over the Whitney faction still had the records. Mr. Brackett made formal demand for their return to the Secretary. Senator Whitney said the papers had been snatched out of his hands and he honestly did not know where they were. The records will be turned over to the new secretary, it was stated, and that secretary will represent the Whitney faction. Possession of the papers is regarded as of great importance for the legal battle to follow.

DUG POTATOES SUNDAY; FINED

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 13. The State Supreme Court has been asked to determine whether it is unlawful to dig potatoes on Sunday. J. R., J. H. and J. M. Harris were convicted on this charge and fined by a justice of the peace in Tucker County. They appealed to the circuit court and were again found guilty by a jury. They now have appealed to the Supreme Court. The men assert they had to dig potatoes on Sunday in order to protect the crop from freezing.

You Can't Brush or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

TURKS HEAVILY PUNISHED BY THE BRITISH TROOPS IN MESOPOTAMIA

General Lake Reports That the Enemy's Advanced Lines on the Tigris Were Forced Back, the British Crossing an Inundated Belt to Accomplish the Trick---Turks Driven Out of Some of Their Trenches by Flood.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, April 14.—General Lake reports that on the afternoon of April 12 our forces on the Tigris forced back the enemy's advanced lines. To do this they had to cross an inundated belt intersected by deep cuts from 500 to 1,200 yards wide, extending from the Tigris to Umm-El-Brahm marsh. On the left bank the water from the marshes has been driven by a north-west gale into some of the enemy trenches at Sanna-Vyat. The enemy was heavily punished as he took refuge from the flood in new positions.

DENIES THE STATEMENT OF GERMAN GOVERNMENT

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, April 14.—Edwin H. Huxley, the first American survivor of the Sussex to reach New York, was a passenger on the St. Paul. Huxley said the German statement that another ship, not the Sussex, was torpedoed at about the same time and in the same waters, seemed ridiculous to him. "We were afloat for nine hours and saw no other vessel during that time," said Huxley. "It seems certain that had another steamer in the neighbourhood been sunk we would have heard about it by wireless." Other American survivors cabled to-day that portions of plainly marked German torpedo were taken from bodies of persons killed on the Sussex when the explosion occurred.

WEAK FOE ATTACK COMPLETELY REPULSED

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 14.—A weak German attack against French positions, south of Douaumont, northeast of Verdun, was completely repulsed last night, the War Office announced to-day. On the northwestern front of Verdun the Germans bombarded Hill 304 violently throughout the night, but did not emerge from their trenches for the expected attack. South of Haudremont, on the east bank of the Meuse, and in the region south of Moulainville, the bombardment was lively on both sides during the night.

Inflict Severe Defeat On Turks

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 14.—British troops advancing to the relief of the besieged Kut-El-Amara garrison in Mesopotamia, have inflicted a severe defeat on the Turks. General Lake reported to-day that the Turks have been driven back on the south bank of the Tigris from one and one-half to three miles.

No Change On the Verdun Front

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, April 14.—French attempts to attack German positions on the west bank of the Meuse last night were repulsed, the War Office announced this afternoon. Otherwise there was no change on the Verdun front.

Man Hunt Will Continue

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 14.—American troops will remain in Mexico, for the present at least. The Cabinet to-day determined upon no change of policy toward the Mexican situation. This means the hunt for Villa will proceed.

Wilson's Final Word To German Gov't

Special to the Examiner.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—President Wilson's final word of the submarine controversy with Germany has been embodied in a note and was ratified by the Cabinet to-day. It was reported after the Cabinet meeting that the note serves notice on Germany that another disaster resulting from an U-boat attack from which an American life is jeopardized will mean the severance of diplomatic relations. Germany will be informed of the President's decision within 24 or 48 hours.

TWO WONDERFUL CLOCKS.

One at San Diego Has Twenty Dials, All of Them Useful.

One of the most wonderful clocks in the world is owned by a French man, Louis Desoutter. It is mounted on a Louis Seize stand and has four faces. Besides marking the hours, it shows the tides at six different parts of the world, the mean time and the solar time, the age of the moon, the movements of the planets and all eclipses. It is also a perpetual calendar. It was made by Janvier, of Paris, in 1769, and took eleven years to manufacture.

San Diego, Cal., has a wonderful clock with twenty dials, which tell the time simultaneously in all parts of the world, also the days of the week and the date and month. It stands 21 feet high, and four of its dials are each 4 feet in diameter. It is enclosed in plate glass, so that every action can be seen, and the whole is illuminated every night. It is jewelled with tourmaline, topaz, agate and jade, and required 15 months to build, and required power months to build. The motive power is a 300-pound weight, which winds itself automatically. The cost of the clock was $3,000.

HOW "LLOYD'S" BEGAN.

"Lloyd's" has often been described, but not everyone is familiar with the varied operations of this famous institution. The great Maritime Exchange is really part of the Royal Exchange, and owes its origin to Edward Lloyd, who kept a coffee house in Tower street. This coffee house was a place where news could be obtained; and to-day Lloyd's is the obtaining maritime news. In one of the rooms may be seen the first insurance policy of which there is any record. It was taken for a ship, the Golden Fleece, which was insured for a voyage from Lisbon to Venice on January 20, 1600.

PETERBORO' YOUNG MAN SUSTAINS SERIOUS INJURIES

Harry Gilman Falls Seventy-five Feet in Erecting Steel at the Bloor St. Viaduct, Toronto

IN CRITICAL CONDITION

TORONTO, April 14.—Harry Gilman, 99 East Gerrard street, an employee of the Hamilton Bridge Company, fell a distance of forty-five feet while engaged in erecting steel at the Bloor street viaduct, about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was taken to the General Hospital in the police ambulance, where it was found that he had several ribs broken and other serious injuries. He is in a critical condition.

Mrs. John Gilman, Mark Street, Asburnham whose son was injured, received word last night that her son was in a serious condition, and in company with Mr. Robt Gilman, Sophia street, left for Toronto this morning. It was learned in a telephone conversation with the hospital, that the young man's injuries are of an extremely grave character, and he is in a critical state.

His many friends in Peterborough will be sorry to hear of the unfortunate accident.

Interesting Demonstration of Chi-namel

An Invitation Extended to Citizens to Visit Peterboro' Hardware Store Before Closing Time To-morrow Night

At this season of the year housewives begin to think of housecleaning and of methods for a general renovation at the least expense. Before commencing the annual clean-up a visit to the Peterborough Hardware Company Store is advised, where Miss Steele of Toronto is exploiting many new ideas in the line of floor and woodwork graining. Many people visited the store yesterday to see for themselves the worth and durability of Chi-Namel for graining and varnishing purposes. Miss Steele is a special demonstrator direct from the factory, who will be here until to-morrow night, and she will be pleased to demonstrate the superior qualities of Chi-Namel to anyone who is responsible for the care and good appearance of the interior woodwork of a home.

Chi-Namel is a Chinese Oil Varnish, as tough as sole-leather, waterproof, hammer-proof and heel-proof. The effects of a variety of woodgrowths, in which it is shown, may all be imitated with the Chi-Namel graining materials. During yesterday and to-day demonstration days, with the purchase of a ten-cent varnish brush, and the coupon appearing in last night's paper, in an advertisement, a twenty-cent can of Chi-Namel will be given free. This offer will be continued during to-morrow. Peterborough people should certainly avail themselves of the instruction and generous offer at the Peterborough Hardware Store before to-morrow night.

Demonstrations of this sort have been put on by the Peterborough Hardware Company for the past three years and to show the satisfaction Chi-Namel is giving in the city their sales have almost doubled every year those of the previous year. The south window of the store is now dressed with Chi-Namel products.

U. S. COURSE WILL BE DECIDED AT ONCE

WASHINGTON, April 14.—President Wilson has determined on the course of action to be taken by this Government towards Germany in the submarine issue. Announcement of the decision will be made in from 12 to 24 hours. This was the statement of a high Government official just as the Cabinet went into session to-day. He could not comment on what form this Government's action would take, but it is deemed certain the President will demand an immediate show down without equivocation on the submarine issue.

Total 3,537 all ranks.

THEIR ANXIETY RELIEVED

COBOURG, April 13.—The anxiety of almost a fortnight in many Cobourg homes has been relieved by a cable received here announcing the safe arrival of the draft from Cobourg Heavy Battery, which left here some little time ago for England. The battery is comprised almost entirely of Cobourg men, with a few from Colborne, Cold Springs and other adjacent villages. Capt. A. E. Hopper of this place is in charge.

It is published for general information that a man in uniform and wearing the rang badges of a warranted officer (crown on right forearm) and who claims to be a returned soldier undergoing treatment at a convelescent home, has passed bogus or forced cheques for small amounts at Kingston and at Napanee. Commanding officers are requested to place tradesmen on their guard. This man should be arrested and detained if detected.

A Great Record.

The news that Lance Corporal Len Williams is officially reported wounded, makes the third mishap to St. John's choir boys of 1907. In May of that year the choir as then constituted, was photographed, and the original large picture now may be seen in the vestry. Of the twelve boys in the choir at that time ten are with the colours as follows:

Allen Kingscote, bugler—Prisoner of war.

Private H. Ballard, 21st Battalion—Severely wounded.

Lance Corp. L. Williams, 21st Battalion—Shell shock.

Gunner C. Halpany—C.F.A., Bramshott Camp.

Gunner A. Horsefield — C.F.A., Bramshott Camp.

Private S. Ballard—93rd Battalion.

Private I. Simmons—93rd Battalion.

Of the other two boys Cyril Devey is certified medically unfit and no information is to hand as to Frank Halpany. Other years lists include two sons of Col. Max Denistoun, Wilfred and Reggie Stratton, Claud Bartlett, Hugh Wallis, R. Stevenson and many others who are serving the Empire, but unfortunately no picture of them in a group is on hand.

Voluntary service in cassock and surplice seems to have made it but a short step into khaki with men and boys of St. John's choir.

ST JOHN, N.B., April 13.— The Allan Liner Scandinavian arrived here last night and docked early to-day. She has been ten days on the voyage from Liverpool, and brought 113 officers and men from the several Canadian overseas units.

Of the total 113 men returning, thirty-five are suffering from gunshot wounds or had been wounded so severely that amputation of limbs was necessary. Many were suffering from a general physical breakdown, due to the great strain in watching in the trenches in the night.

Among the number were seevral returning on account of being "aged," as the military reports it, evidently having enlisted when beyond the military age, and not discovered until they had crossed the water.

TORONTO, April 13.—Stepping out of the ranks two weeks after he enlisted when volunteers were called for to go to the front from Niagara camp in June last year, Arthur Long, of the Tecumseh Lacrosse Club, was accepted on account of his good condition. Two days before he left for "somewhere in France" he played his last game of lacrosse with the Indians, when the two local teams staged a game at the summer camp. Yesterday word was received aht oir rthr ddotslw yof wyy A good defence man and one of the cleanest living athletes who ever took an active part in Canada's national

SIR SAM HUGHES' STATEMENT TO THE NEWSPAPERMEN

Canada's Minister of Militia is Glad of the Opportunity to Have Charges Fully Sifted and Exposed to Light of Day

ABOARD THE ST. PAUL

NEW YORKK, April 14. —To the newspapermen who boarded the St. Paul at Quarantine, Sir Sam Hughes made the following statement:

"I have only been informed in a general way about the statements made in the House of Commons during my absence, but let them be what they may, I am glad of the opportunity of having them all fully sifted and exposed to the full light of day. I have no comment to make on the conduct of those who, taking advantage of my absence and of the feeling of nervousness almost bordering on a panic, in the minds of the general public, on all questions since the war began, have attempted to divert to side issues the energy and time which should be devoted to the cause of the Canadians at the front and the empire in general. Such questions may be within their privileges.

"I regret the necessity of coming back at this juncture, but solely and only on account of the need of my presence in England in connection with the pressing problems concerning Canadian troops there and at the front, but, otherwise for the government and for myself I am delighted at the opportunity of having each and every fact made public in connection with all fuse transactions. It is my desire that everything should be exposed to the closest scrutiny."

Commenting on the Canadian troops in England, Hughes said:

"During my two weeks' visit I had opportunity to review the Canadian troops at Bramshott and Shorncliffe camps, and saw that the soldiers were filled with zeal and ardor for the cause. General Sir Archibald Hunter, in command at Bramshott, and General Steele at Shorncliffe, informed me that the conduct of the Canadian soldiers both in ramp and on the field of action was most exemplary."

NEW YORK, April 14.—A man who said he was Detective Carrington, Chief of the Detective Agency of Canada, met General Hughes at the pier and conferred briefly with Capt. Bassett, the aide to the Minister. He refused to tell newspapermen the nature of his call. It was not until the St. Paul edged out of the river toward her pair that Gen. Hughes braved the gloom and dreariness of the rainy morning and stood out upon the deck. Clad in gray trousers, Prince Albert coat, soft black hat and tan shoes, the big Canadian stepped down the deck with a quiet smile and cheery word for everyone. There did not seem to be anybody he did not know. He stopped shake hands with most of them, men, women, boys and girls. A young army of newspapermen crowded about the General who held up his hands as though he had come upon a crew of highwaymen. He talked with the newspapermen about this and that, but added nothing to the formal statement concerning his personal affairs.

NEW YORK CITY, April 14.— In a conversation late this afternoon Sir Sam said he had heard Colonel Allison was sick, but he had no further information to give about him. Regarding Yeakum, Cadwell and Sasick, he understood they were working hard getting out fuses. He said he would probably stay in New York a day or two having conferences, but would likely take his seat in the Commons on Monday.

NO INTENTION OF RESIGNING

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 14.—In an interview to-day, Sir Adam Beck was asked if he intended to resign as a result of the McGarry bill amending the Hydro-Electric Commission. After considering the question for a minute or two Sir Adam said he had no intention of resigning.

License to Loot Had to Be Terminated, Says Official Organ of Canadian Manufacturers' Association—Slashing Arraignment by "Industrial Canada."

THE FUSE SCANDAL

"Industrial Canada," the official publication of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, in its leading editorial this week has the following, the sub-heads being those of "Industrial Canada":

The Fuse Scandal.

The political explosion in the House of Commons caused by the disclosures made in connection with the fuse contracts was the inevitable result of the "hands off" policy which the Prime Minister, from the beginning of the war, has insisted on applying to all matters affecting the Ministry of Militia and Defence.

No decent man takes pleasure in deliberately embarrassing the Government of his country when his country is engaged in a life and death struggle for liberty and justice. In such a crisis there is a well recognized and a well obeyed call for unity of effort, for unity of action, which leads to shortcomings being overlooked and honest mistakes forgiven. No one expects that those in positions of responsibility shall prove themselves infallible, but everyone has a right to expect when he approaches the Government in a spirit of helpfulness to point out weaknesses whose existence he can prove, that he be received as a friend, and that his advice be acted upon, or at least that it be not rejected without proper consideration.

In such a spirit the Canadian Manufacturers' Association approached the Government eighteen months ago. The reception given its suggestions was not of a character calculated to invite further co-operation. In such a spirit political supporters and political opponents of the Government, privately at first and latterly in public, warned the Prime Minister not merely of possible, but of certain trouble. Their warnings were likewise allowed to pass unheeded.

There are limits to the patience of loyal citizens, even in war time, and much as we may deplore the disgrace that the fuse scandal has brought publicly home to Canada, and warmly as we may resent the effort to make political capital out of it at a time when our national energies ought all to be centred on winning the war, there is no getting away from the fact that the situation was intolerable, and that the license to loot had to be terminated.

The Prime Minister's own record precludes the thought that his refusal to intervent, was due to any desire to shield corruption. The only explanation we can offer is that, despite the evidence supplied him he accepted the denials and the indignant repudiations of his colleague as sufficient answer to the charges of his friends. Under these circumstances there was only one thing to do, and that was to smash down the barriers of reserve and uncover the rottenness that lay beyond, regardless of feelings that might be hurt, of reputations that might be damaged and of heads that might have to be sacrificed.

What Constitutes Guilt?

While it must be borne in mind that so far we have heard only one side of the story, it is hardly thinkable that an investigation of Allison's record will justify the splendid character given him by Sir Sam Hughes. Unless the original documents quoted by Mr. Kyte exist only in that gentleman's imagination, Allison, far from serving his country without a cent of compensation, bled it out of all proportion to the service he rendered.

There is, of course, nothing criminal in the taking of a commission for a deal such as Allison is alleged to have put through. His action would be reprehensible if he profited unduly, or if his greed forced the payment of YOUTH IN AGE.

This is a period when the idea gains that it is a young man's age—when the elders must take the back of the stage. But in the journalistic realm age seems, as in the case of the octogenarian British Whig, Kingston—in its 83rd year—"to renew its youth like the eagle," and keep well abreast of the advance of this hurrying time. The Whig has just issued a splendid "Prosperity Edition," and, though the prosperity dealt with is general, the way it is treated typographically and otherwise shows that the good old Whig itself is enjoying its full share of prosperity. The prosperity edition is composed of seven 8-page sections, making 56 full size pages, including two interesting illustrated sections dealing with military, municipal and judicial features. The remaining sections are devoted to national and local educational and progressive features. The liberal and well displayed advertising patronage indicates that the Limestone City is still on the alert. Altogether the Whig's "prosperity edition" is a highly creditable tribute to its enterprise and its interest and influence in its journalistic constituency. One interesting feature of it is that it was produced entirely by the "business office." The manner in which this department has handled the compilation of most interesting local and general facts, and the literary features and the general make-up of a most creditable special edition is quite an unique demonstration that all the brains of the Whig, or any other journal, are not concentrated—as is the fiction—in the editorial department.

CIVIC GOVERNMENT.

We know a good deal—altogether too much—as to the results of civic government under the present prevailing system of popularly and often-elected municipal councils. We know that, as a rule, and on the whole, civic government by municipal councils has long proved to be costly and ineffective. We have not, in the past, got satisfactory results, and some of the unsatisfactory results we have got have been inordinately costly. Through reckless and unbusiness administration—more the fault of the system than the men administering it—we have had money wasted and complex conditions accumulated, till, when we happen to have a city council inclined or forced to practice economy and business methods, we find it handicapped by the heritage of difficult conditions bequeathed by the fiscal and material mismanagement of former councils. We find our city council confronted with the necessity of economy; and with all its reduction of expenditures, it is forced to impose an unprecedented tax rate of 27 mills on the dollar. While some of our expenditure and some of our indebtedness represents good value, a good deal of both—enough to account for several mills of taxation, does not represent the adequate value that would have come from wise, well-ordered, economically conceived administration and executive action. The system has never given us a fair chance. Supposing that our present system gave us the best men—though its tendency is otherwise—their term is too brief, their apprentice ship too short, to produce efficiency and permit of cohesion, coordination of effort, to formulate or adopt some definite policy looking to definite ends and results. Such conditions make economical and effective administration, and the application of the business methods so essential to success, an evident improbability, if not a hopeless impossibility.

With all the eternal tinkering of the Municipal Act there does not come much hope that the admitted good features of the present form of municipal government can ever be made to overcome and neutralize the admittedly bad features. This argues a complete change of system; and the most promising form presented is that of civic government by commission, that is forcing itself upon our attention; and the subject of its adoption by Peterborough seems to be timely enough to suggest immediate investigation. Commission government has been adopted by some—by many municipalities. It may not have been in operation long enough to permit of the formation of definite views upon its usefulness, and the views upon this vary. But experience with it in Canada, while not conclusive, is in its favour. For instance, the city of St. John, New Brunswick, after five years' experience of commission government, has given a very practical evidence of the good working of the system. In a recent popular vote the people have decided upon its continuation by a much more emphatic majority than that which resulted in its adoption in 1911. This is proof that the citizens of St. John have received from administration of its civic affairs by a commission, the satisfactory results that theoretically must come from applying it to civic government—the management of civic affairs—the same business attention and methods that are found indispensable and effective in the successful management of the affairs of a private corporation or business concern.

TOPHEAVY WITH TORYISM.

The parliamentary and legislative representation of the city of Toronto seems to be top-heavy with Toryism. That is, Toryism as a title or libel, appears to be the sum total of the qualification demanded in a member of either Parliament or the Legislature. Toronto's interests, either managed or to be promoted by parliamentary process, are, as a rule, looked after by others, than its elected representatives or not looked after at all. When Toronto interests were at stake, in relation to the menace to its Hydro-Electric interests in connection with radial railway matters, Toronto's good Tory members, ive in number, were conspicuous by heir bodily absence, by absence of lisplay of solicitude or voting, for he interests of the city they nominally represented. When a Toronto city bill, or a feature of its vexed street railway nuisance, comes before the Legislature, it has to fight its own way, and flourish or fall without the help or hindrance of the city's eight representatives, all of one political caste. Other interests have likewise negative help. A case in point. Last night, at Ottawa, when Toronto estimates for public buildings came up in committee the elected representatives of the city were all absent. The superogatory work of looking after Toronto's interests was assumed by Hon. G. P Graham, who voiced the sentiment of the Liberal members of the House in appeal for more sympathetic treatment of Toronto in the matter of large and badly-needed public buildings.

How can one account for the contemptuous attitude of detachment of Toronto's thirteen—devil's dozen—of nominal parliamentary and legislative members? It can't be attributed altogether to natural depravity, for some of the noble and nonchalant thirteen are very amiable and excellent gentlemen in private and business life, and not capable, one would think, of facile metamorphoses of the Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde school. It seems to be because the city is supersaturated—top-heavy with Toryism. Toryism, in the abstract, may be a good thing; but Toronto is plainly a suffering fulfilment of the fact that it is possible to have too much of a good thing. Toronto is patently and obviously represented in both Houses by a couple of groups of figureheads unpossessed of a responsible sense of interest in, or solitude for, the welfare of, or their responsibilities to, their constituents. Most representatives who represent, justify the confidence of their constituents by more or less faithful service, feeling that they are to be judged on the electoral judgment day by the deeds done in their representative capacity: by the service they have been able or not able, to render their constituents. Toronto representatives, to euphemistically describe their relation, seem to be able to dispense with service as an element of justification. It seems evident that they can feel safe in applying for enthusiastic re-election if they display the proper party label or conciliate the machine and maintain good standing with lodge influence.

One can refer to these things without having hostile animus towards the Toronto members, or assuming an offendve sympathy with Toronto electors. If they can stand it the rest of the province and country can do likewise. There is, however, a principle involved. Such a state of things is contrary to the political conditions, the form of government, under which we live and rule ourselves—party government. Fancy government at Ottawa at the present time—or at Toronto, either, where the Opposition largely inspires the important and useful features of legislation the government procures—without an Opposition; and we have a picture, in view of recent revelations of fact, and tendency, that is appalling. Were the party and representative conditions of Toronto, which, in many other things, is a model for the rest of Canada, to be generally adopted by the country at large, a companion calamity to the popularly unbalanced evils of German rule, would be provided. Uncriticised an unregulated rule in politics is close kin to autocracy, and that no free people can have and still be free.

PARTIZANSHIP AND SANITY.

At Montreal recently Mr. Lavergne made a speech in favour of bilingualism. Mr. Lavergne believes that there is a great deal of intolerance in Ontario, but that some Ontario men are inclined to resist the Orangemen and Freemasons. In his praise, Mr. Lavergne couples Sir Mackenzie Bowell, once Prime Minister of Canada, and Sir George Ross, once Prime Minister of Ontario.

It is evident from his speech that he cares very little for either of our political parties. He is a champion of bilingualism. Upon these grounds we must meet him fairly and squarely. We believe that the English language is and must be the language of Ontario. We believe also that Ontario must settle this question itself, without any interference from Quebec or from the Dominion Government or Parliament.

The Toronto News invites Liberals to read Mr. Lavergne's speech. By all means let Liberals read it, and form their own judgment. Our expectation is that most Liberals will disagree with it. But that is not what the News desires. The News thinks of nothing, from early morn to dewy eve, but the Government at Ottawa and the Government at Toronto, and the men who are wicked enough to oppose Governments.

And so the News—by a crooked kind of reasoning for which we can find no parallel, except in the prayers of the Kaiser and the speeches of the German Chancellor — tries to prove that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is responsible for Lavergne. Lavergne is the trusted lieutenant of Bourassa. Bourassa is the deadly enemy of Laurier Bourassa and Lavergne did all in their power to defeat Laurier in 1911. Bourassa and Lavergne helped Borden to form his Ministry five years ago. To-day the News is trying to convince Liberals that Laurier is responsible for what Lavergne says. Could partizan insanity go farther than that?

Most men in Canada are members or adherents of one political party or the other, and are inclined to favour their own party, magnify its merits, and forgive its faults and errors. But there is a point beyond which the sane and honest Canadian, of either party, will not go. The Toronto News is trying how far it can carry the Conservative party in the direction of insanity.—Toronto Star.

TYPES OF THE EVIL SPIRIT WE ARE FIGHTING TO EXTIRPATE

An official report issued by a British government commission gives evidence which must be accepted as conclusive of brutal treatment of British prisoners in one German prison camp, and of contemptible attitude of the German people nearby. Three British doctors, the survivors of six who were sent to the camp at Wittenberg, where an outbreak of typhus carried off many prisoners, furnish testimony which explains the verdict of the American Ambassador at Berlin, James W. Gerard, who in his report last November, said the state of the camp was "even more unfavourable than I had been led to expect."

The committee condemns the retention of Dr. Aschenbach as head of the camp, and as evidence of his attitude cites an incident. When one of his staff supported the request of Captain Lauder for medical requisites, he curtly refused the request with the words, "Schweine Englander!"—English swine.

"The cruelty of the administration of the Wittenberg camp became notorious. Savage dogs were habitually employed to terrorize the prisoners. Flogging with a rubber whip was frequent. Men were struck with little or no provocation and tied to posts with hands above their heads for hours. Captain Lauder reports that many of these men went so far as to look upon the typhus, with all its horrors, as a god-send. They preferred it to the presence of German guards."

One can not imagine such things as perpetrated by any British officers or soldiers upon men in their power. It isn't done. It couldn't be done. We are not that sort.

"What the prisoners found hardest to bear in the matter of burial," says the report, "were the jeers with which coffins were frequently greeted by the inhabitants of Wittenberg, who stood outside the wires and were permitted to insult the dead." This is another thing which would not happen on British soil. The dead are not insulted among us.

All the German performance in this war dovetails. In every detail, it reveals the brutal and mean mind. Soldiers or sailors, philosophers or common people, are all 'strafers' laden up with fury and venom because other human beings have dared to come between the wind and their nobility. When they have the power, they wreak any sort of ferocity and outrage upon victims in the serene assurance that Germans have a divine right to 'hack their way through' wherever they want to go; that the more brutally they hack, the more easily they will get through; and that their God will approve of all they do because Germans have not only a divine right to get where they want, but to get there as easily and comfortably as possible. With such a people, after trouble has started, there is but one way for others to argue, namely with a club. And the argument must be kept up until the club has done decisive work.—Ottawa Journal.

SEEK MAN IN BLACK FOR CRIME

Crack Shot Hit Victim in Head Three Times

Detectives Looking Now For Woman Seen Near Alley

HAVE A CLUE

MONTREAL, April 14. — Cold blooded murder was committed Wednesday night in an alleyway which runs between the rear of the Sommer Building, Mayor street, and the rear entrance to the Brighton Apartments. The detective department, under Inspector Talbot and O'Connor, is seeking a well known man as a material witness in the case. Every indication that the shots were fired from the lane were thoroughly sifted and pieced together again, only one conclusion resulting, that murder was committed by someone who fired the shots from the lane.

Ezra Daragon, the victim, was fifty-nine years of age and lived with his wife and daughter at 205 Bleury street. He was shot to death by some crack shot, who was able to send three bullets into the victim's face. The crime was committed at a time when the occupants of the flat were unable to hear the shots on account of the usual noise coming from the streets. None of the lower tenants of the three-storey apartment house detected a sound other than the usual night noises.

Daragon fell dead as the gun cracked, shot in the head three times. One of the bullets entered the left eye, another penetrated the brain, while a third — all of 38-calibre — entered the man's mouth. The one which penetrated the brain went through the head and came out in the back. The one which entered the mouth also pierced the man through while the ball which found its mark in the left eye, took a downward course and lodged in the mouth. The last was the only missel found, and it was shattered in three pieces.

Mystery surrounds the murder of Daragon and the police are at work on several clues which are confusing, as they concern different suspects, with another pointing to a Montreal sporting man as being in touch with the events which led up to the killing of the man.

Mrs. Green, who occupies a suite of rooms at the Brighton Apartments, heard shots fired and on going to her window saw a man running through the alley way towards Bleury street. The alley is a blind one and she waited at the window until she saw the man, who was dressed in black, retrace his steps, walking rapidly towards the lane which he entered and turned toward Mayor street. She did not see the body and did not care to look out again as she was satisfied to find the man gone.

A second clue, which the detectives and Captain Gorman, of the Chenneville Street Station, are following, has a woman in the case, who was wearing a dark dress and was seen at the corner of the lane before the shooting took place. She was joined later by a man dressed in black clothes who was wearing a hard hat and spring overcoat.

Allowed to Go.

Following the inquest Thursday morning Morris Eyges, the roomer whose window looks out on the alleyway, and who was held as a witness by the detectives, was allowed to go. The adjourned inquest will be held on the 20th. The window of his room was pierced by a bullet hole, while the storm window had been broken before Wednesday night. Constable Berlinquette, No. 5 Station, discovered the fourth bullet, Thursday morning.

Trooper's Daring Ride Saved U. S. Squadron

Dashed Across Open Exposed to Fire of Villa's Bandits.

Pershing's Camp at the Front in Mexico, April 5.—By Aeroplane and Motor Car Couriers to Columbus, N. M., April 11.—The ride of Lieut. Albert Myer of the 7th Cavalry at the Guerrero fight, when Col. Geo. A. Dodd caught the Villa forces for the first time, was described here to-day by an officer from Dodd's column, who brought despatches to the headquarters' camp. Lieut. Myer is from New York, a grandson of the former chief signal officer of the United States army.

During much of the fight, Col. Dodd had a position on one of the hills which form a bowl about the town of Guerrero. A mile and a half from this hill Col. Dodd saw some Villa troops numbering one or two hundred filing stealthily through a ravine. Moving in their direction, but in such a position that they might not see the Villa men, was Major Tompkins' squadron of the 7th Cavalry. There seemed a chance for the Villa forces to take the squadron on the flank, and Col. Dodd ordered Lieut. Myer to carry word to Major Tompkins of the bandits' movement. Myer rode a horse conspicuously marked with white. Between him and Major Tompkins lay a mile of open ground. Myer made the distance at a run and reached the American squadron in time to warn them of the bandits' position.

Good Work By The Canadians

LONDON, April 13. — Details received here of the fighting for craters, in which the Canadians suffered severely, show that at one spot five mines in a direct line and close together were sprung against the Germans, whose defense consequently momentarily was completely shattered. The Canadians then rushed forward to occupy the ground thus rendered untenable. The advance was supported by artillery.

An observer declares that fire from guns so close together and working incessantly was like a terrace of houses on fire. The Canadians gained ground for the time being, after which the struggle was continued with varying success on each side, as is always the case in such engagements. If the Canadian losses were severe there is no doubt the enemy lost many more men.

This Morning's Police Court

Case of Shop-lifting Was Dealt With —Woman Had a Weakness For Boots

A couple of local women figured in a case of shop-lifting that was heard in police court this morning. Boots to the value of nine dollars were identified as the property of Charles Feinberg. The prisoners were allowed to go on suspended sentence. Magistrate Dumble gave the two women some sage advice concerning the advisability of travelling the straight and narrow way.

Was Remanded.

A more serious charge was preferred against Frank Valentine of Smith township. He was remanded until Tuesday next when in all probability the accused will appear before County Police Magistrate Langley.

Feast For a Bunch of "Yankee Grafters"

larger prices than the business warranted, but even for that it is doubtful if our laws could touch him. Neither do we attach much importance to the claim that the contracts were negotiated with "mushroom" companies, for if a commission had to be paid any way, it made little difference whether it showed in the records as a commission or as a profit to a holding company.

In our opinion, if Allison is to be reached in the way Mr. Kyte would evidently like to see him reached, it will only be by establishing the fact that he was acting for the Shell Committee, or for the Minister of Militia, in a fiduciary capacity. If that can be proven, and if the charges advanced by Mr. Kyte can be substantiated, then Allison will be in an exceedingly tight corner.

Fixing the Responsibility.

In this connection Messrs. T. A. Russell and Lloyd Harris of the Russell Motor Car Co., Limited, will probably have some interesting evidence to offer when the proper time comes.

The fuse orders had lain in the hands of the Shell Committee from November, 1914, to April, 1915, before these gentlemen heard of the business that was apparently going begging. They recived their first information about it in New York from Sir Sam Hughes, who by persoal introduction referred them to Allison in the Manhattan Hotel for details. Preferring to do business direct with the Shell Committee, Messrs. Russell and Harris went to Montreal and made overtures to the committee through General Bertram and Colonel Carnegie. At first these officials tried to put them off by expressing the opinion that the problem was too big and too intricate for men of their limited experience. On pressing for an opportunity to submit a proposition, they claim they were referred to Col. Allison, who was said to have the matter in hand with prospective contractors in the United States. The fact that tenders were momentarily expected from those contractors was alleged as a further reason why Russell and Harris could not be given a chance to make the fuses in Canada.

These gentlemen persisted, however, and in the end they were given a promise that 1,000,000 of the 5,000,000 fuses required would be held pending the receipt of a tender from them, providing that tenders were submitted within a reasonable time. It is perhaps significant that a reasonable time in their case was defined as two weeks, notwithstanding the fact that Allison had presumably been busy on the proposition for five months without being able to offer anything definite.

It was no small job to learn something of the process of fuse-making, to secure options on requisite machinery and material, to line up the necessary technical help, and to arrange for a credit from the bank, all in a period of two weeks. But these gentlemen did it, and what is more, they notified the committee when their time was only half up that their proposition would be ready on the date specified.

And now for the fact that requires explanation. On May 25, 1915, the Russell tender was turned in, offering to make 1,000,000 fuses at $4.20. On May 19, without waiting for this competitive tender, which was known to be on the way, and regardless of the promise given to hold at least a portion of the business open, the committee awarded contracts for the whole of the 5,000,000 fuses to the companies promoted by Allison and his associates, a small fraction fo them at $4.00, but the majority of them at $4.50. The loss in money is a matter of easy calculation from the records of the committee. The loss in time of delivery is also determinable, because whereas the United States contractors have fallen far behind with their obligations, the Russell Motor Car Company are now delivering ahead of time under a contract they subsequently secured at $3.70. The indirect loss to Canada and to the Empire through the sacrifice of domestic to foreign enterprise is beyond computation.

Gen. Bertram we firmly believe is a man of honour, and so is Colonel Carnegie. They gave a promise in the full expectation that they could and would keep it. But they did not keep it, and moreover, they gave no satisfactory explanation of their failure to keep it. Why? Did they find themselves under orders they had not anticipated, orders that forced them to break their word? If so, from whom did these orders emanate? Or did they find, to their surprise, that they and their committee did not have the free hand they thought they had in placing the fuse orders? In other words, were binding commitments regarding this business made over the heads of the Shell Committee? If so, by whom, and for what purpose?

There would seem to be something behind all this calling for explanation. For over five months the committee had been waiting on the convenience of United States promoters to get over $20,000,000 worth of contracts signed. At last a real opportunity presents itself of getting the business placed in Canada. For the sake of gaining only six days' time, not in the actual delivery of the fuses, but simply in the signing of a contract for ther manufacture and without waiting those extra six days to see what the competitive tender was going to be a committee of Canadian business men violate a promise, pass up honest Canadian labour in order to provide a feast for a bunch of Yankee grafters, and incidentally assent to an arrangement for plundering the British Treasury to the tune of $2,600,000? There must be a reason, and the reason should be made known.

A Judicial Investigation is Best.

The Commission of Judges appointed to investigate the Kyte charges may be safely depended upon to get at the root of things. And it is well for Canada that the investigation is to take the form of a judicial inquiry instead of a Parliamentary inquiry. The demand for the latter arose from a desire to make political capital out of a national misfortune, and was unworthy of Liberalism.

The Parliament of Canada has more important work to engage in at present than the washing of dirty linen. The termination of the war will give rise to a wide range of problems, many of which can already be forseen, and towards the solution of which our legislators should be bending their best efforts. There is the question of preparedness for the commercial and industrial struggle, by which the present military struggle is certain to be succeeded. There is the question of preferential tariffs, of reciprocal tariffs and of surtaxes, in regard to which we appear to be drifting without opinions of our own, content to take what the mother country arranges for us. There is the question of employment for the soldiers who return to us, with which must be linked the settlement of our lands by communities, and the extension and improvement of our facilities for technical education. Furthermore, there are recruiting problems, transportation problems and financial poblems, all demanding immediate treatment on broad national lines.

Issues such as these rise far superior to any consideration of political advantage or disadvantage. Wise planning of a future full of portent is an essential alongside of which the punishment of millionaire grafters is an insignificant detail. Wrongdoers of whatever rank may be safely left to our mills of justice, but there must not be, there cannot be any delegation of responsibility in matters that involve the shaping of our national destiny.

The Prime Minister is to be commended for his prompt decision in favour of a judicial investigation, and if he will now go farther and improve the time thus gained by engaging the attention of Parliament with measures of wise statesmanship, calculated to secure for Canada her place in the sun, he will doubly earn our commendations and retrieve a reputation which too much leniency in dealing with a headstrong colleague had begun to impair."

KAISER REALLY WORRIED?

ROME, April 14.—A Geneva despatch to the Agenzia Libera states that the Kaiser has returned to Potsdam Palace suffering from ill-health, believed to be due to worry over the failure of the German troops to take Verdun and the heavy casualties they have suffered.

A previous report said the Kaiser was suffering from shock due to a narrow escape from being killed by a shell.

Britons in U. S. May Be Called To War

Sir Arthur Herbert Says Empire Can "Invite" Subjects Anywhere to Go Home For Service.

Dr. Ellery C. Stowell Declares Britons May Be Summoned If No Threats Are Used.

(By Sir Arthur Herbert.)
Former Secretary to the British Embassy in Washington.

LONDON, April 13.—"In the United States there is a large number of British subjects who are anxious to return here with a view to taking up active service if their fares are paid and they are informed what provisions will be made for their wives and families.

"I made inquiries at the consulate in New York, but was told they had specific instructions not to enlist anybody.

"These instructions were given before the compulsory scheme was adopted, and I venture to point out that since the adoption of the regulations now in force conditions have changed.

"We have as much right as any other country which has the compulsory system to invite our citizens in the United States to return here for military duty.

"It is obvious that British subjects who are living in America and drawing big salaries should on their return to England after the war be subject to some such disability as are Frenchmen, Germans and Italians who have neglected to perform this military service.

"I am aware that I am opening a pretty big question, which, owing to its importance, should be settled with little delay."

Ellery C. Stowell, international law expert of Columbia University, declared last night that Great Britain would not be prevented by the United States from procuring men in this country as long as proper methods were followed.

Mr. Stowell added that communications through the mails or in the newspapers requesting British subjects to return to fight would not be frowned upon by this Government. Any attempt, however, on the part of the British Government to intimidate or threaten its subjects in this country would, he thought, be dealt with summarily.

"You will recall that thousands of Germans gathered at their consulates at the beginning of the war preparatory to sailing for the Fatherland," he said, "and nothing was done to prevent them, so long as undue influence was not used to get them to enlist. The only reason they did not sail was that transportation was not to be had.

"If we ever get into a conflict with a foreign power we will find our subjects are scattered all over the globe and we will want to recall them. On that account anything we do now to prevent the lawful enlistment of Britons may be used against us then."

Mr. Stowell cited the Crimean War case, which resulted in the recall of British Minister Crompton and the cancellation of the exjusturs of many consuls. This was caused by enlistments against the laws of the United States, he said.

"It was charged at that time," said Mr. Stowell, "that threats and intimidations were resorted to in the enlistment of the men. An investigation by this Government bore out that charge and Caleb Cushing, then Attorney-General, handed down a report that resulted in the recall of the British diplomats."

Recruiting League Delegates Object To the Word "Draft"

OTTAWA, April 13.—The fifty delegates representing 42 recruiting leagues met in secret session to-day and discussed, chiefly, the Hamilton League memorial, which suggests that the Government should appoint a commission for the purpose of (a) taking a census of all men in Canada of 18 years and upwards, specifying married or single; (b) classifying of the men according to their occupations of their fitness or preference for certain kinds of work; ((c) classifying of industries, with the view of eliminating the non-essential to the welfare of the country; and (d) it being understood that the foregoing is urged with a view to the immediate application of some just and comprehensive system of draft whereby the men necessary to complete the Canadian expeditionary force may be readily secured.

The last clause caused most of the discussion. The word "draft" was objected to by some, it being claimed that it is offensive. It was pointed out there were 1,274,697 men of between 18 and 35 in Canada who could be compelled to enlist, and it was urged that the Government introduce some such system as suggested.

Chief Justice Mather, Winnipeg said the time was now ripe for compulsory service. There were many jobs which women could take.

H. O'Brien, Toronto, said that the Government had the machinery in the Militia Act and could put it into operation. He said there were many young fellows in Toronto whom it was a shame to see doing nothing. It was that class they wanted to reach. Col. Hatch of Hamilton, presided.

Teacher—"And did you make out a list of the fifty greatest men in the history of the world, as I told you?" Willie—"Almost. I can't pick out the best bowler, though, to save my life."

STANDARD HOTELS IN PROHIBITION ERA

Municipal Council May Grant Exemptions — No Clause to Allow Leases of Licensees to Be Terminated After Three Months

Temperance hotel legislation in the Government's prohibition measure was announced by Hon. W. J. Hanna when the bill was in committee in the Legislature last night. The section applying to this was in the following terms:

License Standard Hotels

"From and after the date on which the Ontario temperance Act comes into force, the Board of License Commissioners for Ontario may license one or more hotels in every municipality for the accommodation of the travelling public and other guests.

"The board may by resolution define the conditions, accommodation and qualifications requisite for obtaining such license and regulate the hotels so licensed.

"The hotels so licensed shall be known as standard hotels.

"The keeper of a standard hotel shall be entitled to sell all non-intoxicating drinks and beverages, cigars, cigarettes and tobacco without further or other licenses.

Penalties for Non-licenses.

"The keeper of an hotel, inn or house of public amusement not so licensed, as aforesaid, shall not sell or traffic in any of the articles mentioned in the preceding section, and any such keeper who violates this section shall be guilty of an offence under this act and shall on conviction be liable to a penalty not exceeding $— and costs.

"The board may cancel any such license at any time for such reasons as to the board seem sufficient.

"The Council of any municipality may by law grant such standard hotel total or partial exemption from municipal taxation except school and local improvement taxes."

May Terminate Leases.

Another important section was the following: "Every lease of premises for or in respect of which a tavern or shop license under the liquor license act is in force at the passing of this act, shall with the written approval of the board be terminable by the lessor or lessee by giving three months' notice of his intention to cancel such lease."

To-morrow is "Trench Day"

Ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League Will Receive Contributions to Be Used in the Making of Comforts For Men in the Trenches

If the position was reversed—if you were in the trenches and the soldiers with all their experience were home in your place for the rest of the war—how do you think they would regard TRENCH DAY tomorrow?

We have read from the front and the books of famous war correspondents, have seen pictures we thought were realistic, and yet we have no conception of the true realism of the trenches. It is just as well, perhaps, but their distance and obscurity militates against the deepest sympathy for the men in khaki from those around the home fires.

We may be sure that if we had a complete realisation of the conditions at the front, of the need of comforts of the longing for remembrances from home we would be as generous as our means would allow in our TRENCH DAY contributions.

A LAST REMINDER.

What is TRENCH DAY?

As a last reminder—it has been arranged by the ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League to make a public appeal for contributions to continue the supply of socks and other comforts which the League has forwarded to the men from Peterborough since the outset of the war.

What the soldiers say.

The success of this work, the comfort and joy it has meant to the Peterborough men, is attested in their letters acknowledging the receipt of socks, scarfs, and other articles the ladies have made. This should surely be sufficient for the TRENCH DAY appeal and guarantee of its worthiness

TRENCH DAY will afford you an opportunity of showing your appreciation of the voluntary work of the ladies who have given their time and their labor that the life in the trenches might be a little more comfortable.

Some of your relatives or friends have doubtless shared in these Kitchener League packages Don't you wish that more of them may be sent? Should you not take this opportunity recognising the work of the ladies?

TRENCH DAY must command itself to you, and to the extent of a contribution to the Kitchener League

200 Licenses Have Been Issued

So far 200 licenses for automobiles have been issued in the city. Of this number 150 have been for Ford cars. Those securing licenses have apparently forgotten that the Auto Association and Mr. Fitzgerald are issuing these licenses to help the Association and are not receiving any remuneration for it. Some have implied by their remarks when receiving their license numbers and at other times that the secretary was being paid for the work, but such is not the case. The secretary thought that by issuing the licenses some members would be secured for the Association but so far only two have volunteered their $3 fee.

In spite of the disappointment the issue of licenses will continue, but those applying for licenses must see that their applications are fully made out and sworn to before being presented. It is hardly fair to expect this work to be done at the office where the licenses are issued.

WHOLESALE VENDORS TO HANDLE LIQUOR

Solution May Be Found to Meet Absurdity of Shipping Alcoholic Beverage to Montreal and Reshipping Them to Ontario

Wholesale vendors employed by the Government will dispense liquor in Ontario after prohibition goes into effect. Announcement involving this important change in the arrangement was made in the Legislature last night by Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, during consideration of the temperance bill. The Government had been hoping that this trade would be handled by wholesale druggists, but it transpired that the wholesale druggists prefer to have nothing to do with the business.

The Provincial Secretary said the question of the wholesale druggists was still open, for the reason that the retail and wholesale druggists preferred that they should not be licensed, but that their present status should be continued. They did not want to be in the category of licensed vendors, Mr. Hanna explained. "Instead, therefore, of supplying liquor through wholesale druggists it will be through wholesale vendors. There may be one, two and maybe three places in the Province where this will be done, but it will most likely be in one place only," said Mr. Hanna.

A Ridiculous Feature.

"There is one thing that is just a little bit ridiculous in this bill," said Mr. Hanna, "and here it is. The manufacturer in Ontario cannot sell to a person in Ontario, but he can ship it east to Montreal on No. 1 track and bring it back the next day on No. 2 track and deliver it to the man next door. It is an absurdity, and is so much money spent on express charges. It imposes handicaps on the manufacturers in Ontario to the advantage of manufacturers outside the Provinces. However, it is here, and it is in the Manitoba act also. We don't want to carry this into the native wine business too, or we would have two absurdities in the bill instead of one."

Mr. Sam Clarke (Northumberland) —It is a proper farce. I don't care whether it is in the Manitoba act and the Saskatchewan act, too. It is a farce.

Mr. Hanna—While talking of this "east and west bound traffic" I would say that we realize the inconsistencies of the situation, and the Commission realizes them very fully. It is just possible that there may be some different solution, although we do not promise that.

Mr. Allan Studholme asked if there was any change in the alcoholic strength of patent medicines. Mr. Hanna replied that there was not.

Mr. Rowell asked if the vendors would be required to keep the same kind of records that it had been proposed the druggists should keep. Mr. Hanna thought they would.

To Restrict Dentists.

Mr. J. C. Elliott asked the Provincial Secretary if consideration had been given the possibility that dentists and others allowed to have liquor on their premises would use more themselves than they gave to patients. Mr. Hanna said this had not been considered.

"Would it not be wise to give the Commission power to say how much they may keep for their personal use?" asked Mr. Elliott.

"No," replied Mr. Hanna. "That would be putting the dentists on the Indian list."

"What provision is there for putting them on the Indian list?" asked Mr. Elliott.

"None!" said Mr. Hanna, shortly.

"But there are some cases—" started Mr. Elliott.

"It will always be that way," interrupted the Provincial Secretary.

Mr. Elliott — But if the act provides —

Mr. Hanna—I know, but what are you going to do about it?

MUNITIONS OUTPUT GROWS IN FRANCE

PARIS, April 13.—Since the first month of the war the output of three-inch shells in France increased 30½ times, of larger shells 44 times. Twenty-three times as many 75 millimetre guns are being made as in August, 1914, and the manufacture of heavy guns has increased in the same ratio.

If curtains are allowed to dry thoroughly before being starched, it will be found that they will keep clean longer.

U. S. Traveller Says Peons Along Mexican Border Are Worst "Rats" Under the Sun

"Those Mexicans across the border are the meanest and most useless people under the sun," said a Baltimore fruit traveller at the Empress this morning. He was bewailing the fact that in trying to get a picture postcard of the Lift Lock to send to a friend in New Orleans, he missed the afternoon G.T.R. train by two minutes, and instead of getting home at such and such an hour he would be half a day late arriving there. In order to help pass the time he went out to Graham's bookstore and loaded up with a whole dozen pictures of the Lift Lock and Kawartha Lakes, addressed them to friends in various parts of the United States, including several to his wife. Then he got a cent stap for each card, carefully affixed them in the prescribed squares, only to learn that a postcard required a two-cent stamp to get out of Canada. Finally he had them all properly stamped, including two to his wife, which as an after-thought, he figured out, with a wide knowledge of railway lore, would be delivered to his wife about a day after he got home.

However, he regarded the extra stamps as a small contribution to the Canadian war fund, and let it go as an offering to a worthy cause.

But getting back to his opinions of the Mexicans, he made it clear that the Mexicans down around Vera Cruz and in the main part of the country, include a considerable percentage of real class. These people show a strong strain of Spanish. But in the no man's land along the border he describes the inhabitants as "rats and wops." According to his experience these peons or whatever they may be called, are worse than the rattle snakes that infest that part of Mexico. The peons, the rattlers and the cactus plants and jack rabbits constitute the only life in that worthless section, and in thus enumerating them he regretted to include the rabbits in such company.

These Mexicans hate the "gringo," the English-speaking people, bitterly, and with an enmity that seeks expression in such deeds as the Columbus raid. They are illiterate, lazy, in fact it puzzled the traveller to discover how they existed.

"They only exist, you know," said he, "and a miserable existence at that. They have no ambition. They eat the rattlers and the jack rabbits, which are so thin you could draw them through a key ring. That's not much of an exaggeration either. There is nothing for the rabbits to fat on. What we ought to do is put a hole through every sombrero that comes within sight of the border. The only good Mexican in that country is a dead one. They are simply bandits. I'd rather run against a rattler any day. He'll give you half a chance with his warning rattle, but these "wops" you simply can't trust them. They hate you and you know it. A few of them work on the Southern Pacific Railway as sectionmen at $1.00 a day. A white man couldn't work in that heat. You never saw anything as lazy as they are.

If I was running the War Office I'd let the Mexicans fight it out among themselves. There'd be that many less anyway. All we'd need do is shoot every one of them that comes within sight of the border. And at that we'd have to be on the job night and day.

"I know these people. They're no good, the land is no good, and it is too bad our men have gone down through the sand and heat of those hills in Chihuahua after Villa. There are other ways of getting him. If these people were worth while I wouldn't mind interfering a bit, but I'd say leave them to themselves and their cussedness. I hope there won't be trouble over those rats, they're not worth shedding good blood over."

THE LIBERALS HOLD CAUCUS

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 14.— The Liberals held a caucus this morning to consider the parliamentary situation. No official statement was subsequently authorized, but it is understood that there was a general discussion as to the attitude of the party in the event of railway legislation being introduced. It was decided to leave a definite decision in regard to the matter over until after the Easter recess, when it is believed that the legislation will be introduced. It is understood that the bilingual situation arising out of the demand for the dual lowance of the legislation of the Ontario government was also discussed. There appears to be a disposition amongst the Liberals to believe that if any resolution is introduced in regard to this matter it will be by a National member. It was decided to await developments.

TURNBULLS

Scholars at Bradley's Sunday School Got Prizes For Regularity

The entertainment and prize giving at the Sunday School at Bradley last night was a high success. The children did their part exceedingly well and deserve a great deal of credit.

A box lead went out from town and helped in the entertainment. Special numbers were given by the Corps Cadet Clam which was loudly applauded, also the tableau, "Rock of Ages" which was very tastefully arranged and carried through by the Sgt. Baggett, Mrs. J. T. Bruce and Mrs. E. Bentley.

About 30 prizes were given to the scholars by Adj. McElhiney for regular attendance at the Sunday School.

Just a year from to-day the foundation of the building was dug and its usefulness some completion for many purposes can be testified to by the whole community.

After washing decanters turn them upside down and allow water from the cold water tap to run over them. In about five minutes they will be dry inside, and if the outside is carefully wiped and rubbed they will sparkle beautifully.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

YESTERDAY'S SCORES IN BIG LEAGUES

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

CHICAGO, April 13.— The White Sox evened up on Detroit this afternoon by winning a hard hitting game that wound up with an 8 to 6 score. The game was more of a one-sided affair than the score indicates, as the Tigers were trailing hopelessly in the rear until two men were out in the ninth. At that stage Jennings' men started a rally, and five runs were scored before the side was retired. Danford hurled for the Sox and held the Detroiters to five hits in the first eight innings. Jennings started Dauss, but Dubuc and Boland finished the game. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Detroit	6	10	1
Chicago	8	9	1

Dauss, Dubuc, Boland and Stanage; Danforth and Schalk.

Mack's New Pitchers Fail to Show Much

Boston, April 13.—Connie Mack sent in three of his new pitchers in an effort to stop the champion Red Sox to-day, but it was no use. Three hits and a like number of passes gave them a four-run lead in the first inning, and the game might as well have ended right there. Shore held the visitors hitless during the first five innings. In the sixth a scratch hit by Crane, and doubles by Strunk and Oldring gave them two runs. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Philadelphia	3	4	2
Boston	8	9	0

Ray, Richardson, Myers and Meyers; Shore, Pennock and Agnew.

Eighth Inning is the Fatal One for Indians

Cleveland, O., April 13.—It looked as if Morton had a pitchers' battle won from Dave Davenport until the eighth inning, when Graney kicked Hartley's single long enough for the batter to reach third. Then, with the infield pulled in, Lavan dropped a pop double back of short. Davenport walked, and singles by Shotten and Sisler boosted the Browns' run tally to four enough to win. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
St. Louis	4	8	1
Cleveland	2	6	3

Davenport and Hartley; Morton, Coveleskie and O'Neill.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

St. Louis, Mo., April 13.—The Pirates beat the Cardinals to-day, 4 to 0. Adams held St. Louis to one hit, a bounder by Snyder over second in the third inning, which Schultz knocked down, but could not recover. Only twenty-eight faced Adams and he gave one walk, to Beck in the second. Meadows aviated in the seventh, when a single, a fumble by Hornsby and two walks gave a run. Salleo relieved Meadows with a full house, and singles by Johnston and Carey added three more. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Pittsburg	4	8	1
St. Louis	0	1	2

Adams and Schmidt; Meadows, Sallee and Snyder.

Big "Jeff" Tesreau Subdues Phillies

Philadelphia, Pa., April 13. — The Philadelphia defence broke down in the ninth inning to-day and the Giants won, 2 to 0. Doyle started the inning with a single. He went to third when Stock fumbled Fletcher's sacrifice bunt and scored when Luderus threw wildly in an effort to catch him at third. Fletcher took second on the throw and went to third on Kauff's sacrifice. He scored when Niehoff let Merkle's grounder get away from him. Big Jeff Tesreau was invincible throughout. Benny Kauff, the reformed Fed., led in the hitting with two singles.

	R.	H.	E.
Philadelphia	0	6	2

Tesreau and Rariden; Mayer and E. Burns.

Reds' Heavy Hitting Features Poor Game.

Cincinnati, O., April 13.—In a poor game here this afternoon the Reds trimmed the Cubs, 8 to 3. The pastime was retrieved only by the terrific hitting of the locals. Vaughan led off, but was driven from the mound in the third round, with a mess of seven hits and five runs. Packard took his place and was hit for three triples. Dale officiated for the Reds and held the Cubs to eight hits. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Chicago	3	8	4
Cincinnati	8	13	3

Vaughan, Packard and Archer, Fischer; Dale and Clarke.

AT LEAST $10,000,000 EACH.

Modest Requirements of the C.N.R and the G.T.P. Soon.

OTTAWA, April 13.—At least ten millions apiece, and considerably more, if it is obtainable, is what corridor gossip has it the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific are after by way of federal aid. The demands of the former are said to be the larger, though if 25 or 30 millions is obtainable, smaller contributions will be gratefully received.

Negotiations are in progress, but that no decision has been come to finally is indicated by the fact that no legislation is yet being drafted. Two years ago, when aid was last given these roads, the objections were formidable and the opposition serious. Certain prophecies then made have come true, though at an earlier date than had been expected. On the one hand, it is argued that this is all due to war time conditions, but on the other, it is pointed out that the crops have exceeded all records and the freight receipts have increased.

To repeatedly give assistance from the Federal treasury to roads already heavily subsidized, guaranteed and fattened with land grants, incurs an increasing opposition. The nationalization of the roads would be simple if, in the west, the G.T.P. and C.N.R. were not parallel for hundreds of miles. Besides such an undertaking would involve tremendous outlays.

As a case of lesser importance, the Government has under advisement the acquisition of the Quebec and Saguenay road and hitching it up to the Transcontinental.

ANOTHER CHINESE PROVINCE SECEDES.

SHANGHAI, April 14.—The Governor of Kiang-Si province to-day officially declared his independence of the administration of President Yuan Shi Kai. Kiang-Si is one of the Southern provinces of China. It has an area of about 72,000 square miles and a population of about 20,000,000.

MILITARY NEWS

game, he has joined a number of other boys who have played the greatest game of all, and gave up his life for his King and Country.

The Toronto News Says:

"For all that, some of the high salaried hockey and lacrosse stars care, the Germans could be actually invading Canada, judging from their announced plans. One Eastern star, who has been making a handsome living out of his athletic prowess for years, is preparing to make a trip to the coast, where the "pickings" are better than in this section of the country. Several others, according to report, are going to follow his example. It would suit these young men better if they were making arrangements for a longer trip, involving a sea voyage. The same thing applies to the athletes, who are headed for across the border for the purpose of coaching American colleges. If the Immigration officials turned a few more back they might come to a realization of their responsibilities.

The soccer eleven representing the 93rd Battalion Cooks had little trouble in beating Quartermaster Sergt. King's staff team yesterday. The cooks won by 2 goals to nil and on the play should have had a larger score. They scored two goals that were called back for offsides in addition to the two counters they were allowed. The Kochs mechanics pressed all the way and gave the staff defence a busy hour. Pte. Shaw scored both goals for the cooks. Lieut. Gardiner, Signalling officer of the 93rd was referee.

A reader of the Examiner and a warm admirer of the 93rd Band expresses a desire to hear that organization play "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" and the favourite of South Spican War Days" soldiers of the King or some of the Gharehouts. "They're old but good" he points out. We pass the suggestion on to Bandmaster Hughes.

Sir.—Will you be so kind as to give me a little information about the Canadian Engineers through your paper? I would like to know for instance where to apply for enlistment, or will there be a recruiting sergeant here again shortly?

Anything you can tell me will be gratefully accepted.

Thanking you in anticipation.

One of Your Readers.

A letter addressed to the Officer Commanding Engineers Training Depot at Ottawa would probably give the required information. The Examiner is unable to say whether or not there will be a recruiting sergeant for the Engineers here again. So far Peterborough has had only one visit from representatives of the Engineers.

Wednesday, when the 93rd Battalion Band went to Lakefield to give the people of that Village a concert, the music stands were left behind, and a member of the Band formed himself into a mechanical transport section with a motor cycle and sidecar, and chased out with the missing articles. Unfortunately said motor cycle had not been provided with a 1916 license, and when Lakefield was reached the lynx-eyed police force detected the omission and a summons followed. The bandsman had to appear before County Magistrate O. A. Langley at Lakefield, this morning, and pleaded guilty to the charge. Magistrate Langley made the fine as light as possible under the circumstances, fining the defendant $2.00 and costs. Major R. P. Watt and Capt. J. E. Munro of the 93rd Battalion were present in court in the interests of the bandsman, and the fine will be paid by the Battalion. It is hoped that the over-zealous policeman is satisfied.

The officers of the 93rd Battalion held a meeting last evening to discuss a number of matters in regard to the Battalion. Among other things the question of arranging for the officers' mess and other features in connection with camp life were discussed. The officers are arranging a special fund to take care of the mess expenses and the regimental fund will not be called upon, being used for the welfare of the battalion as a whole.

Capt. W. E. Swaine, the chief musketry officer for this division paid a visit to the 93rd Battalion today. He is apparently well satisfied with the progress that the Battalion is making in musketry.

The 93rd inter-platoon Athletic meet, scheduled for next week, promises to be an interesting event. Each platoon will enter a team and some exciting contests amy be expected.

All mothers of men who have enlisted for overseas service since the war began are cordially invited to occupy seats on the platform at Sunday evening's meeting at the Armouries. This prominence of position is due to women who have sacrificed much in giving sons to serve the country. It is also a tribute to the manliness of the sons who offered themselves; so please, mothers, take platform seats, and let all do honour to you and your sons. There will be ample room.

Jailed German Agent Has Dye Secrets

Ritter Claims to Know Secret of the German Process.

COLUMBUS, O., April 14. — Dr. Emerich Ritter, former German confidential agent, serving a sentence in the Ohio State penitentiary here, was granted permission by Warden Thomas Wednesday to manufacture dyes by a secret German process. If his tests are successful the state board of administration will give him its support, it was said.

Ritter asserts he is a chemist and the discoverer of "liquid fire." He was arrested in Cleveland last fall, charged with complicity in a plot to dynamite the Welland Canal. He was sentenced to prison, however, for carrying concealed weapons.

After corks have been used awhile they sometimes become so compressed that the contents of the bottle leak out. This may be remedied by putting the corks in boiling water and leaving them there until the water cools. They will then be as good as new and fit just as tightly.

The Blind Hero, Cupid, the Girl And the Incubator in Romance

Climax Comes When George Fleetwood Woos and Wins Girl Who "Took an Interest in Him."

LONDON, April 13.—Down in Wokingham, a little village nestled in the Surrey Hills, not far from London, George Fleetwood, 26, former British soldier, was married Tuesday.

Just about a year ago Friday, Fleetwood crawled over the top of a British trench near Armentieres, in Northern France, and charged with his comrades toward the German lines. Machine guns sputtered and half way across "No Man's Land" Fleetwood fell. Hours later ambulance men carried him to the rear. A busy military surgeon made a brief examination of a wound in Fleetwood's head.

"Probably blind for life if he recovers at all," was the hurried diagnosis.

Snap Verdict Correct.

A month passed and Fleetwood was sent to a hospital in London. The Surgeon's snap verdict at the base hospital was correct. He was blind for life. The patient recovered and was discharged from the hospital. A nurse led him by the arm to St. Dustan's school for blinded soldiers, the prettiest spot in the heart of London.

It took a few moments' conference with C. A. Pearson, superintendent of St. Dustans'—former editor of the London Daily Express, who also is blind — to map out Fleetwood's career. Beside the government pension of about $8 a week he owns an acre and a half of ground in the Surrey Hills. Fleetwood decided to raise chickens.

St. Dustan's chicken school is the only institution of its kind in the world. In it Fleetwood learned to tell a Leghorn from a Plymouth Rock, or any other breed, by touch; how to tell a bad egg from a good one; how to pull an incubator apart and put it together again and various other things.

Learns Many Things.

He also took a thorough course in St. Dustan's wood working school and learned to build chicken houses, fences and coops. In the basket making department he learned how baskets are made, also how to plot his chicken yard with hand rails and boards so that by touch of hand or foot he will know his exact location.

Then came Cupid. Right into the school.

Women—Some of them from fashionable London—go to St. Dustan's to talk and read to the blind men. One of these young women met Fleetwood. She liked his looks and he liked her voice. For weeks she accompanied him to the chicken school and during spare hours she read to him.

One day Fleetwood told her about the little chicken farm in Surrey, outlined his plans and bluntly proposed. The girl was so astonished she accepted.

Tuesday, in the little church at Wokingham, the romance had its climax. Among the wedding gifts was an incubator which followed behind the nuptial carriage to the little chicken farm.

PREPARING FOR LATER DECLINE ON WALL STREET

NEW YORK, April 13—Owing to the fact that a large short interest is outstanding on Wall Street for the account of professionals, there was a slight rally toward the close, but it was strictly professional and really weakened the market's technical position. The public is absent even from the investment houses, for it is waiting to buy stocks on the big break that is expected when relations are severed with Germany. Some big commission houses that have been leaders on the bull side of the market have apparently got their customers out of stocks, for they are issuing warnings against a decline that may come next summer.

To avoid the expense of having a feather recurled, sprinkle it with a fair amount of ordinary salt and shake before a fire until quite dry. The feather will be quite fresh again.

SEPPALA LEADS IN DOG RACE.

NOME, Alaska, April 14.—Leonard Seppala, driving the team of 17 Siberian wolf dogs with which he won last year's race, was in the lead early yesterday in the 412-mile all-Alaska sweepstakes, having reached Candle, 208 miles from Nome, and the point where the racers turn back. The five other drivers were somewhere along the trail early to-day, bound for Candle, all closely bunched.

A light snow which had been falling all day yesterday developed into a blizzard late last night at Candle but Seppala planned to start back toward Nome after giving his dogs a brief rest. The leader's time from Nome to Candle was 38 hours 45 minutes.

The Germans Are Preparing To Launch Another Attack

French Have Fortified Their Lines, Anticipating Attacks

But Germans Apper to Be Exhausted---Enemy Active Against British Lines, Apparently With Idea of a New Drive to Calais

LONDON, April 15.—Germans show considerable activity against British lines, apparently with the idea of a new drive to Calais.

How Four French Heroes Stopped Whole Regiment

Killed Five, Captured Seven and Then Joined Counter-Attack Which Flung the Germans Back--Russians Move on Trebizond.

NEW YORK, April 15.—A special Paris cable to the World says:

Even in stories of individual gallantry at Verdun Poilus' names are not permitted, so the four heroes of the latest anecdote being narrated in Paris cannot be identified except as infantrymen of the line. They were with their battalion in a specially hot corner of the Caillette woods, a few days ago, when, on a particularly dark night after the usual frightful bombardment, they dimly perceived compact masses of Germans rising toward them from trenches forty yards away.

The command to fall back to the second line was unheard by the four soldiers who, instead ensconced themselves in an observation post and first with two rifles apiece, then with a copious store of hand grenades held back successfully for several minutes an entire regiment of Germans.

Apparently amazed at such unexpected resistance, the German commander ordered his men to seek shelter while he despatched two patrols of six men each to reconnoitre on either wing. One of the patrols approached within a few feet of the hidden Frenchmen before the latter let fly a fusillade of bombs. Five of the six were slain instantly and the sixth begged for mercy.

The other patrol, coming from another direction saw the lone survivor standing with his hands above his head and promptly surrendered in their turn.

Unwounded and without great difficulty the four infantry men marched their seven prisoners rearward and rejoined the main body of their unit in time to participate in a counter-attack which flung the Germans far backward from the positions they occupied before that astonishing quartette stopped the advance of a whole regiment.

RUSSIAN MOVE ON TREBIZOND.

PETROGRAD, April 15.—By means of a series of counter-attacks carried out with great energy, the Turks in Armenia are straining to the utmost to defend the important City of Baibart, at the chief junction of the roads between Erzerum and Trebizond.

Since in addition to the good roads to Sivas and Mamakhatun there are several trails from Baibart through the Pontus range to the Black Sea coast, the occupation of Baibart would greatly facilitate the operations of the Caucasian armies and would establish close connection between the armies moving along the coast to Trebizond and the Central Russian army aiming at Erzingan.

The new line of attack upon the Black Sea port of Trebizond from the south, which the occupation of this junction would offer, would, it is believed, cause the immediate retirement of the Turkish forces defending the approcahes to Trebizond and lead to the capitulation of Turkey's most important Black Sea port.

Baibart itself is an important provisioning centre and formerly served the Turkish forces at Erzerum as a base for ammunition supplies.

In the Armenian theatre the Russian troops are steadily advancing in a southwesterly direction towards the Upper Tigris, where, Russian officials say, the Turks have been less successful than elsewhere in checking the passage of the Russians.

Turks Falling Back Everywhere

Being Hotly Pursued by the Russians—Last Note From Washington in the Form of an Ultimatum

PETROGRAD, April 15.—The Russians defeated the Turks in a six-day battle. The Turks are falling back everywhere, pursued by the victors.

WASHINGTON, April 15. — The last note to Berlin was in the nature of an ultimatum.

PARIS, April 15.—Germany is preparing to launch another attack on Verdun. Several new divisions have been brought to the Verdun front.

ROME, April 15.—The Italians captured Lobbia Alta summit by a daring climb, ten thousand feet.

TORONTO, April 15.—The Legislature spent all afternoon yesterday discussing the Bilingual issue and the famous Regulation 17.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The Panama Canal was reopened to-day.

LONDON, April 15.—The British raided and captured some German trenches near Lens.

OTTAWA, April 15.—Premier Borden promised consideration to the application for registration for compulsory service.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE OUT FOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, April 15.—The Tribune (Republican) editorially names Theodore Roosevelt as its choice for the next president of the United States. It says:

"We are for Col. Roosevelt because we believe the country needs him. No one else will quicken the pulse of the nation as he will quicken it. No one else will stir the conscience of the people as he will stir it. No one else will inspire patriotism as he will inspire it.

"No one else personifies the issue which the Republican party must make as he personifies it. No one else presents so effective an antithesis to Wilson as he. If we are Americans, real Americans, the colonel is our man. While timid politicians were consulting the census books and counting the German vote, he spoke and the country harkened. He is the leader in the fight for Americanism, and we don't believe in changing leaders when we are going to the front."

CROSS OCEAN IN 30 HOURS.

Great Aircraft Being Built at Lynn, Mass., for Secret Owner.

LYNN, Mass., April 15.—Work on the greatest aircraft the world has ever known, and which is expected to cross the Atlantic from New York to Liverpool in thirty hours, was commenced at the Burgess-Dunne factory at Marblehead yesterday. Before the contract is finished twenty machines will be put into commission, each equipped with an engine of 1,000 horsepower and capable of attaining a speed of 100 miles an hour.

Strict secrecy is being maintained as to where the order came from. As soon as the employees of the factory appeared for work ten additional policemen were put on duty at the factory. The plans for construction of this monster seaplane are the result of a year's study, and is believed to have come from a member of the Aero Club of America.

Officials of the Burgess Company last night said that the construction would be the greatest advance ever made in the building of heavier than aircraft.

NEW INDIAN RELIGION.

Converts Chew Peyote Plant and See Visions.

The new Indian religion introduced in Grandon, Wis., the past year by the Pottawotomies has secured its first convert among the Chippewas, in the person of Pat Monray, better known as "Broadface." Pat has always been the bad actor among the Chippewas, but judging from his talk he has reformed.

No more whiskey and tobacco for him or his squaw, and no more all night orgies on the lake shore. Like all reformers Pat wants every one to be good and not lose any time about it.

The new religion is known as the "Peyote religion." A plant obtained in Texas and Oklahoma is chewed by the converts, the effect of which puts the users in a stupor, causing them, they claim, to see visions and dream dreams.

New Public Building Here To Cost $150,000

Will Not Be Erected Until After the War However—Matter Was Discussed in the House of Commons This Week

Peterborough's new public building which by the way is not to be proceeded with until after the war was under discussion several times in the House of Commons this week. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., referred to it in the following speech:

As an instance of the impropriety of doing as suggested by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Pugsley) I would point to the item of $47,000 for the public building in Peterborough, further work in connection with which is held in suspension during the war. Arrangement had been made for the erection of a public building there A lot had been purchased. The present customs house had been sold by tender, very favourably, to the Bank of Montreal. Very favourable arrangements had also been made for the sale of the present post office. The Inland Revenue offices—weights and measures office and other offices—are in different buildings, not Government buildings, throughout the city and are very unfavourably situated.

It is highly improper to have these offices where they are now the accommodation is not at all suitable, nor are the public documents safe. This is not a very expensive scheme, and since it was launched the revenue at Peterborough has greatly increased. The customs revenue at Peterborough is now nearly $900,000 and the post office revenue nearly $90,000. It would be very improper to throw this item out and insist upon the reintroduction of the whole scheme at some after date. If the hon. gentleman would look into the matter he would not hesitate to endorse this item. While this building is a necessity, we all realize that there is a much greater necessity, and that is that we should defer such expenditures until the conclusion of the struggle in Europe, and the return of normal conditions in Canada.

Mr. Pugsley—My hon. friend did not understand me. What I said was that in respect to any public works where engagements or commitments have been made, I am quite willing to have the amount remain; but if it is not intended to proceed with the public building to which the hon. gentleman refers, and which I recognize to be quite necessary, as Peterborough is a rapidly growing and important town, the mere placing of the amount in the Estimates does not help—

Mr. Burnham—No.

Mr. Pugsley—because the vote will expire on the 31st March next, and will have to be placed in the Estimates again. Therefore, striking it out now would make no difference. A record of it would be kept in the Department of Public Works, and when the time arrived when the minister thought the particular public work under consideration should be gone on with, he could give his instructions to the deputy minister, and the deputy could place the amount in the Estimates for the consideration of Parliament. Therefore nothing would be lost in respect of the construction of the building, but the Estimates would be honest Estimates, showing what, in the expectation of the minister, will be required during the coming year.

Later when the Estimate was brought down by Hon. Mr. Rogers, the following discussion took place:

Peterborough—new public building, $47,000.

Mr. Graham—What is this building to be used for?

Mr. Rogers—I am sorry my hon. friend was not here this afternoon when the hon. member for Peterborough (Mr. Burnham) dealt with this building. It is a general public building.

Mr. Graham—Will it include the customs?

Mr. Rogers—Yes.

Mr. Nesbitt—What is the estimated cost?

Mr. Rogers—We have just put this item in as a starter. We paid $18,000 for the site.

Mr. Graham—The building will probably cost $150,000.

Mr. Rogers—Probably. Peterborough is a growing city.

CHAT WITH GENERAL ALDERSON.

(London Canadian Gazette.)

General Alderson was in the midst of official papers when we entered his sanctum. The General talked with perfect confidence and as one who, knowing his men, had no shadow of doubt of the future. As an old campaigner he was especially proud of the Canadian health record.

"We top the list in the whole British army," he said; "Not a single case of trench foot in our whole corps. How has it been done? It is all a matter of constant care. The company officers study the health and comfort of the men as of themselves. Napoleon used to say 'There are no bad troops, only bad commanders.' With the Canadian commanders, especially the company officers, it is a point of pride and duty to have no such thing as trench feet among the men. And the generals and colonels know that if they cannot make their company officers take this care of the men we must get generals and colonels who can and will."

How Fat Folks May Become Thin

Lady Colebrook Resting After Her Munitious Work

NEW YORK, April 13.—Lady Colebrook, wife of a British Government official, arrived here on the Nieuw Amsterdam for a rest, after working six months in the Vickers-Maxim munition factory in England.

Lady Colebrook who never dressed her own hair until the war came, was one of thirty titled ladies who "signed up" for six months in the munition factory. That was late last Summer. They were put to work drilling gun parts and shells.

The splendid example these women set resulted in thousands of others following in their footsteps, until to-day, according to Lady Colebrook, there are 15,000 women working in the British munitions factories.

FIFTEEN DROP OUT.

One by one, however, the titled ladies, unused to such arduous labor, dropped out. When the six months' term expired, only fifteen remained, among them Lady Colebrook. A long rest was recommended. She was bundled aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam by M. and Ms. Benjamin Guinness and brought here. At the Guinness home in Washington Square North, she hopes to recover her strength.

"It was a trying ordeal," she said when the steamer docked, "but we were glad to do something to help in this awful war. We worked eight hours a day, and the minimum wage was two shillings five pence, or 58 cents. Night work paid higher.

"Some of the women developed into expert workers and are now making good wages. If you ever have war in America, which God forbid, set your women to making war munitions. They can do the work, and do it well.

"The Young Men's Christian Association put up a great building, near the munitions plant, where meals were served to the women. At night, when the Zeppelins came, we were marshalled into this building. There for as long as four hours at a time we huddled together in pitch-darkness, fearful lest every moment would be our last.

MANY ZEPPELIN RAIDS

"There have been many Zeppelin raids upon England—many more than you hear of here. We were warned in advance. There always was much excitement. Occasionally a woman would become hysterical and begin to sob. Then some other one would start "Tipperary" and that always calmed things. But if ever a bomb had struck that building it would have been all over with us."

CHICAGO, April 14.—A dozen big American beauty roses adorned a table at the bed side of Miss Jane Addams to-day—the gift of President Wilson. With the roses came a letter, expressing regret at her illness and expressing the hope that she speedily recovers. The President wrote he had read of her illness in the newspaper. Physicians said Miss Addams was better to-day. Miss Addams is suffering from tuberculosis of the kidney.

WIFE IS "MAN CRAZY" AVERS HUSBAND IN DIVORCE ACTION

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 13.—Mrs. Hester Renwick Earle, one of the most popular young matrons in the Gedney Farms set, presented to Justice Clarke, of the Supreme Court, a petition in which she asks for $400 monthly alimony and counsel fees to defend an action for divorce begun by Theodore Langsbury Earle, and to prosecute an action against him for separation. This was the first it was known that the troubles of the young couple had reached the courts.

Mr. Earle is the son of Ellis Potter Earle, head of the Nipissing Mining Company and a director in many corporations. The son is a graduate of Cornell University and the Columbia University School of Mines. He is now with his father in his home, in Edgewood Avenue, Montclair, N.J.

Mrs. Earle is the very attractive daughter of Mrs. Clarence M. Smith, also of Montclair, and she is now with her mother. Mrs. Smith and her first husband were separated, and she was married to Clarence M. Smith last autumn. She possessed a large independent fortune. Mrs. Earle while living here became known as one of the best dancers at the Gedney Farms Hotel and a daring operator of a racing automobile.

Unjustly Suspicious, Her Plea.

Archibald R. Watson, formerly Corporation Counsel of New York City, who is Mrs. Earle's attorney, presented her petition for alimony. In the papers submitted by Mr. Watson his fair client states that Mr. Earle was unjustly suspicious of her association with F. Youlden Cowle, the young son of Mrs. Agnes Cowle, of Fisher Avenue, White Plains; that he locked her out of their home here one night last January, and that she cannot return to him "because of his cruel treatment" — treatment which physicians have advised her would be "prejudicial to her health and unsafe and improper for her to submit to." That is the way the papers read.

Mr. Watson said that substantially those are the allegations made in Mrs. Earle's petition for a separation, a summons and complaint in which, he said, had been served upon her husband.

Also in the papers submitted to Justice Clarke Mrs. Earle states that her husband was so deeply interested in his work as a mining engineer in the employ of his father that he was indifferent to her, that she enjoyed society, liked to dance and wished to go to theatres. Her husband, she said, took little or no interest in such things, and when she formally met Mr. Cowle she enjoyed dancing with him, and frequently went to theatres and to the Gedney Farms Hotel with him and his mother.

"My husband frequently said I was 'man crazy,'" Mrs. Earle stated; "he snubbed my men friends deliberately and once threatened to 'break Mr. H.'s face.' When he did accompany me to the Gedney Farms Hotel he always objected to other men dancing with me, although he did not wish to dance with me himself."

The identity of "Mr. H." is not disclosed.

Issue Over Two Children.

Mrs. Earle stated that it cost them $700 a month to maintain their home here, that her husband's father gave him $15,000 as a wedding present, that he regularly gave him $10,000 or $15,000 each Christmas and that her husband recently made about $100,000 in the stock market.

In asking Justice Clarke for an order for the custody of both their young children, Mrs. Earle stated: "My husband has informed friends of mine that he would spend every cent he possesses to get both my children and keep them away from me."

Mrs. Earl has one child and her husband the other. Mrs. Earle is twenty-three years old and was married six years ago in the First Presbyterian Church at Montclair. The couple went to live at Brewster, N. Y., and later purchased a large house adjoining Mrs. Cowle's property in White Plains.

In his complaint, upon which he asks for a divorce, Mr. Earle mentions Mr. Cowle and alleges that his wife made his acquaintance through a rear yard flirtation and that they were not "properly introduced." Mrs. Earle denies this, as she does all other charges made by her husband. He states that Mrs. Earle made such frequent trips to New York with Mr. Cowle last November, December and January that she found it profitable to purchase monthly commutation tickets.

Mr. Earle also states that his wife left him because he would not admit to his home a male relative by marriage of hers. He alleges that she neglected their children and even tied them to verandah posts while she was away with Mr. Cowle.

LEFT OUT IN SIN, HE SUES.

Because Mrs. Ellen E. Yale Webber, now living in Somerville, Mass., joined a peculiar higher power cult Byron P. Webebr, of Hartford, Conn., got a divorce in the Superior Court, Webber, who was married on March 27, 1877, told of his wife leaving him in November, 1909, because she was moved by the higher power.

"It was because of her new religion," he explained to the court. "She believed that everybody on earth was guilty of sin and would be destroyed except a dozen who were to start things all over again."

"I see," sympathized Judge Case. "And she didn't include you in the chosen twelve?"

"No, your Honour; nor any of my relatives or friends, either," replied Webber

"Paint My House, Too"

The spirit of neighborhood improvement fills the very air. The glad, bright colors of spring have replaced the somber hues of winter. Grass is green—flowers are springing into glorious bloom. Nature is providing a beautiful setting. Is your house in harmony—or do the fresh-looking surroundings only serve to emphasize its dullness? Does it complete the picture—is it well painted?

Now's the time of all times to dress up your home in fresh, new colors. The first essential in home improvement is good paint, and the paint that you can depend upon to be good is

Lowe Brothers HIGH STANDARD LIQUID - PAINT

You take no chances, you know exactly what the contents of every can of "High Standard" will do. Forty years of experience and countless exposure tests have made this knowledge definite. Chemical analysis of the raw materials and thorough machine mixing insure a uniform product.

You get in "High Standard" a paint that works easier, and spreads farther than cheaper paints—a paint that hides better and protects better the surface of your building—a paint that does not fade, that holds tight to the surface in perfectly protecting coats—that fails only by gradual wear and leaves a good surface for repainting

It actually costs less to use this better paint and get its perfect protection. It goes so much farther—and it lasts so much longer on the building that its use is true economy. Ask us for an estimate on your paint requirements.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat If You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels, removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, and flush off the body's urinous waste, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder disease.

The HOME CIRCLE COLVMAN

FOR THE BOYS.

Boys, will you listen while I speak? I think much of you, and well of you, and I want to sound a few golden words into your ears. Spend your evening hours at home. You may make them among the most agreeable and profitable of your lives, and when vicious companions would tempt you away, hear Wisdom speak: "Cast not thy lot with them; walk thou not in their way; refrain thy foot from their path: walk thou in the paths of goodly men." Also keep good company or none. Never be idle. If your hands cannot be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your minds. Always speak the truth. Make few promises. Live up to your engagements. Keep your engagements. Keep your own secrets if you have any. When you speak to a person, look him in the face. Good company and good conversation are the sinews of virtue. Good character is above all things. Your character cannot be essentially injured except by your own acts. If one speaks evil of you, let your life be such that none will believe him. Drink no intoxicating liquors. Always live, misfortune excepted, within your income. When you retire to bed think over what you have been doing during the day. Make no haste to be rich if you would prosper. Small and steady gains give competency with tranquility of mind.

An honest, industrious boy is always wanted. He will be sought for; he will always be spoken of in words of high commendation; he will always have a home and he will grow up to be a man of known worth and established character."—Aunt Prue.

If we live to any purpose it is to learn as we live, says Leigh Mitchell Hodges in the Philadelphia North American, and the learning that makes life worth while is the sort that helps us to grow inwardly—I hesitate to say, spiritually, for so many persons misinterpret that word.

As a matter of fact, to live spiritually should be the ultimate aim of every person who lives. After one has come in sight of the "40" milepost—it lies just the other side of my next year—one begins to understand what the poet meant when he said, "Life is real, life is earnest."

Yet to-day I find life more enjoyable than I did at thirteen or even thirty years ago. For all the time I am learning better to estimate things as their true value.

And the first of these lessons is one I began to learn long ago when the handle of a lawn mower calloused my hands and the early dew of the grass gave my bare feet a foretaste of the joys to be exploited a few years later in a once famous 'cure.'

It is the lesson which in a certain old primer, stands out in bold type thus:

"Work is joy for the Boy."

What pleasures follow in its train! What health attends it! What satisfaction serves it!

Of course we complain about it, and chafe under it and all that.

But when we can't get it or when sickness takes us from it—what a blessing it seems.

And what a blessing it is.

To think that we are fed on a theology which sets it forth as a "curse."

Work—and children.

Thanks be, our theology includes them under the head of blessings.

And if I had the power of the storm wind, the voice of the bell, the brain of Shakespeare and a hand which never could be tired, I could not even then tell you all I think and feel about children.

"Life is real, life is earnest," and life also is rich and enthusing, if we but do our work as well as we can and keep fresh in our hearts the faith and fearlessness of children.

These are the guide-posts which show us the way to real, earnest living.

SERGE OR SILK FOR THE EASTER SUIT

New York, April 14.

Perhaps the most fascinating thing about the fashions this spring is their seeming simplicity. Although a trifle more frilly and fussy than for a season or two back this dainty little lingerie frock from Jenny, and that summer afternoon dress of striped chiffon and taffeta, from the Maison Agnes, look, as the dainty mannequins bow and spread out the voluminous skirts before you, as if it would be the easiest thing in the world to turn them out at home. Why, the skirt is merely a double flounce of embroidered batiste on a taffeta foundation, and the sleeveless taffeta bodice is, well, just a little taffeta bodice which could be made from that strip of blue, pink or changeable taffeta left from the frock of other days. The full straight skirt on another frock is made from three straight lengths gathered at the top, the fulness evenly distributed and finished at the bottom with a quilling of the same silk. The puff sleeves are quaint and pretty, very dainty and youthful.

SERGES, TAFFETA & FAILLE

These three materials are the leaders again this spring, with here and there a quaint revival; for instance at a recent fashion show, there appeared a most attractive costume, a three-piece suit of Drecoll's, reviving etamine. Whether this is to be taken as an indication that etamine will again be modish this season or not, is a question. It is rumoured that materials are so scarce on the other side of the ocean this year, that many an old fabric is being brought out from its almost forgotten resting place and fashioned into a spring or summer costume. Etamine was a particularly satisfactory summer fabric, cool, durable and soft. It would not come at all amiss were it to be revived this year.

Serge is as popular as ever, although it is said that we have our troubles in dyeing it later on. Attractive combinations of taffeta and serge and faille and serge are seen in many of the new suits for Easter. An effective suit of Cheruit's is fashioned of mixed dark blue covert. At a distance it cannot be told from serge; and of course, for the sport suit serge is very popular. A particularly smart suit, made by Lanvin, is a light grey tweed trimmed with French blue broadcloth. There is very little of the leather introduced earlier in the season, to be seen about the late coats and suits, whether for sport purposes or the regulation tailored use. Beerlings to the notion is a novel cape coat suit. The coat is fashioned of a new waxed silk which greatly resembles leather, especially at a distance; it is dark blue and is combined with a skirt of dark blue gabardine.

Paquin shows a coat of covert for afternoon wear, trimmed with dark blue patent leather, but, except for motoring and such use, leather is not to be reckoned with to any extent. Now and then an odd leather motif is appliqued to a hand bag or trims a sport hat effectively, but for most other purposes, satin has superseded it.

Mother (looking through magazine)—Darling, I see from the statistics given here that every third baby born in the world is a Chinese.

Father (fondling his first born)—Then, thank goodness, this is our first child.—New York Globe.

JUST EGGS

As an edible the egg is unsurpassed. Its nutritive properties in several respects are unequalled, while the uses to which it can be put in the preparation of food are innumerable and variable. Its instrument of being possesses the advantage of cleanliness and cheapness in keeping. Every family with a backyard and outhouse, if the municipal regulations do not interdere, can maintain a hennery, and every family can thus have that always desirable modicum—a fresh egg. In addition it is questionable if any better way can be found of practicing the call of the day for production and thrift.

The consumption of eggs is increasing in every part of the world, and increasing too, at a rate that guarantees a fair and continuous return for any judicious investment. Abroad the demand is incessant, while at home the increase is well indicated by the fact that whereas in 1891 the consumption in Canada per capita was only 11.6 dozen, in 1911, according to the census returns, it was 17.39. That the consumption has continued to develop in this country has gone far ahead of the domestic supply, is proven by the statement made on the warranty of official figures, that in 1914 we exported only 124,092 dozen eggs, and imported the significant total of 11,274,105 dozen. Last year there was some improvement, but a vast deal remains to be done; satisfactory use is to be made of the opportunity that is offering.

Great Britain formerly imported immense quantities of eggs from Russia and from the Scandinavian countries. These sources of supply, if not entirely cut off, are seriously diminished in ability. With facilities for shipping in a fresh condition Canada has an opportunity of meeting the deficiency. To accomplish this not only must the number of poultry breeders be multiplied, but increased watchfulness be manifested in tending the flocks and in the selection of stock. The average Canadian flock produces about 50 eggs per hen. The world's record is 314 eggs laid in one year by one hen, Lady Eglantine of Delaware. Just as there are pedigreed milking cows, so there are bred-to-lay fowl. It will pay you to find out about them. A good breed of poultry is no more costly to keep than a poor breed, and is infinitely more profitable. Having the fowl, the next thing is to see that the eggs are kept fresh. Candling is a simple method of testing eggs. A candling apparatus and instructions for handling may be secured free from the Federal Department of Agriculture.

In these times when there is a marked scarcity of male labour, and production of foodstuffs is so much called for, there is no more advantageous and healthful manner in which women and children can be employed than in the care of poultry. A light and pleasant occupation asking only the application of intelligence and attentiveness, with sympathy it is in reality a pastime. If instruction is required, or information needed, either or both can be had on application to the provincial departments of agriculture, or to the federal department, for pamphlets and bulletins on poultry and eggs, and the candling of eggs. Private culture could increase, supply thousands and thousands of dozens, thus releasing quantities for the export market, and farmers and their families could, in many instances, duplicate their output several times with comparatively little additional outlay and no great amount of extra exertion.

On the one hand it is doubtful if there is any more nutrivtive and wholesome food to be had for the household than eggs, while on the other it is certain that a large increase of production will benefit and enrich the country. In the hospital the use of eggs is ever on the increase and in the camp they are ever welcome guests. They can be made component parts of numerous articles of food that can be sent and supplied ot the men in the trenches and if gathered quickly, they can be placed in cold storage and shipped fresh in quantities across the ocean.

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Raw, Damp Weather Starts the Pains, But the Trouble Lies in the Blood

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The changes from mild to cold, the raw, damp winds start the aches and twinges, or in the more extreme cases, the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism. The trouble is rooted in the blood—the changeable weather merely starts the pains. The only way to reach the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The poisonous rheumatic acids must be driven out. Liniments and rubbing may give temporary relief but cannot possibly cure the trouble. The sufferer is not only wasting time and money with this kind of treatment, and all the time the trouble is becoming more deeply rooted—harder to cure. There is just one speedy remedy for rheumatism—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the impure, acid-tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and thus root out the cause of the rheumatism. Here is strong proof of the above statements. Mr. Michael Personage, Fenlon, Man., says: "My mother suffered several years with rheumatism. We tried a number of remedies but they all failed to cure. Then we got Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after using them for some time she was completely cured and has had no sign of the trouble since."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Preparedness

Now that all nations are talking preparedness, why not discuss health preparedness. While we have been negligent in protecting our country against the enemy, we have also failed lamentably in fortifying our human bodies against disease germs.

This has been proven in the recruiting offices, where so many men have been turned down by the examining doctors. Weak heart action; diseased lungs; thin, watery blood; defective eyesight, resulting from exhausted nerves. These are among the prevailing derangements which the examining doctors find.

Health has been neglected. The blood has not been kept in healthful condition. The nervous system has got run down, and the subject under inspection is in no condition to fight the enemies of his country or to withstand the attack of disease germs.

Health preparedness means the use of preventive treatment, such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, to enrich the blood, reinvigorate the starved nerve cells and keep the health at high-water mark. In this condition you have the strength, vigor and confidence which is necessary to the success and enjoyment of life. You have the vitality to defy disease germs and thereby escape many ills which find an easy prey in the run-down system.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, by means of its blood-forming and nerve-invigorating influence, cures headaches, nervous indigestion, sleeplessness and irritability, and prevents such serious diseases as nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis.

RUSSIAN VOGUE IN LONDON

There is only one vogue nowadays for those fashionables who like vogue even better than vermouth, says the London Chronicle. That is the Russian vogue.

It appeared with Pavlova, dallied appreciately with Dostoievsky, then veered around to Votchichenko. The fair voguistes are now reveling in the Russian dresses, high Catherine the Great coiffures, and black cloth boots.

But the Voguistes are taking their Russia seriously. Many have begun to learn the language, according to the manager of a popular West End library. "There is a very great demand," he said, "not only for English translations of Russian works and English books about Russia, but for books in the original language."

The Russian vogue has even extended to eating and drinking, not to say smoking. At least one widely known restaurant is now actually offering nips of real vodka and portions of real borshtch, Russia's national soup, on its menu. But the prices, it must be confessed, are very far from the real Russian prices!—London Chronicle.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS

Never hurry your bread making. If you do the bread is very apt to be sour.

When frying fish the fat should be boiling hot before the fish are put in.

Cabbage leaves contain a great deal of gluten therefore they are very nourishing.

It is not a good plan to try to cook a small quantity of anything in a fireless cooker because it will not retain the heat.

When melting chocolate put it in a pint jar and stand in hot water. The jar may be kept for this purpose and no chocolate is wasted.

Delicious extract of either orange or lemon can be made by paring the rinds off as thin as paper and putting them into a bottle of alcohol.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7644

At this particular time, when combining materials is not only sanctioned but suggested by fashion, a child may be made to feel quite proud of a dress that is remodelled from one or the parts of two once owned by mother, if the design be one that is admirably adapted to the treatment. A splendid example of the skilful arrangement of parts and trimming is illustration No. 7644. This unique little dress has the body and sleeves in one section, figured material being employed in the making. The applied yoke is used in the front and back and given fancy outline in front with edging. The closing is made at the back and turn back cuffs finished with edging, trim the short sleeves. At the sides, front and back are seen broad straps, tacked to the dress, with pointed ends upward; edging also trims them. A ribbon belt of silk is inserted through the straps, adding not a little to the forming of graceful folds in the skirt. This pattern is cut in sizes two to eight years. For a girl of six years, 1¾ yards of flowered or figured material, 30 inches wide, will do, with one-half yard plain material, 27 inches wide, ⅝ edging and 1⅝ beading to complete a beautiful dress for the tot. Of course, if using trimming you have on hand, as well as the dress material from a garment that did not give full service, you will use your own good judgment about the manner of trimming the dress.

By sending cents to the office of this publication you may obtain the pattern.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

My catarrh was filthy and loathsome. It made me ill. It killed my mind. It undermined my health and was weakening my will. It was taxing my nerves and causing obnoxious odors to all, and my head seemed full of continual hot smoke even my food smelt and tasted horribly. My deafness in the ears and my powerless throat, I knew plainly at this time it would help me to an untimely grave, because every moment of the day and night it was slowly but surely sapping my vitality.

But I found a cure, and I am ready to tell you about it FREE. Write me promptly.

RISK JUST ONE CENT

Send no money. Just your name and address on a postal card, like: "Dear Dan: Please tell me how you cured your catarrh and how I can save my money and all you want to say. PARIS—A corporal in the French army lived for a year with a piece of shrapnel buried in the right ventricle of his heart. This was later removed and the soldier completely recovered. This case, unprecedented in medical annals, reported to the Academy of Sciences.

Kidney Trouble?

The waste material which the Kidneys are intended to remove from the blood, if allowed to accumulate in the system, poison the blood and thus produce deleterious effects.

If from over-work, exposure to cold, or some local injury, the kidneys become congested or inflamed and cannot perform their functions, the system becomes filled with uric poisons.

Whenever a dull, heavy pain is felt over the region of the kidneys for any length of time, accompanied by a sallow complexion, loss of appetite, decrease of weight, and a puffy condition under the eyes and in the ankles, a chronic inflammation of the kidneys must be suspected, and if not relieved promptly chronic Bright's Disease will certainly develop.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c which is a Diuretic as well as an Aperient, will carry out of the system the poisonous material which the kidneys cannot get rid of, and will relieve the congestion of the kidneys.

BRITAIN'S FLEET IS STRONGER THAN EVER

Marvellous But Quiet Development Since War—British Builders and Women Workers Are Supreme

A London newspaperman writes as follows of a visit to one of the manufacturing cities of North Britain. In the factories I have visited, in the huge furnace houses where the flowing, incandescent metal sparkles in the bright workshops, where endless rows of machines roar and thunder I have not met with a single surly or dissatisfied face. What surprised me more than anything else, perhaps, was to see the enormous number of women, working as hard as men, carrying shells, handling machine tools, performing a hundred difficult and arduous tasks with smiling faces, and without having lost in feminine charm. Charming indeed did they look in their long aprons and overalls, and the coquettish headgear which protects their hair from the dust. A prominent engineer told me that the efficiency of women as munition workers has been a surprise to everyone, and that in many shops they even turn out more work than men.

"This war has taught us," he said, "that under conditions like the present, the place of the men is at the front and that of the women in the factory or the hospital. When victory comes our women may proudly claim that their share in it is as great as that of their brothers and husbands." I shall remember always a charming little picture in one of those machine shops—an unusually pretty girl with raven locks and laughing blue eyes handling her complicated machine with the dexterity of an expert, though working with gloves to protect the slender hands that had never seen work before the war.

The Decisive Factor

But if the United Kingdom has created a gigantic army and is keeping it supplied with all the most perfect and up-to-date weapons of warfare, it has certainly not done so at the expense of its navy. We dined at Glasgow with the managing director of one of the largest and most famous shipyards in the world, who said to us: "One must never forget that the British navy is the most powerful arm the allies have. We are all full of admiration of her heroism and self-sacrifice of all our gallant allies, that naval supremacy is the first condition of a decisive victory.

"Thanks to the strength of our fleet, the whole world is open to us and all continents may contribute to ours success. The shipyards of Glasgow are the largest in the world, and already during time of peace their output was larger than the combined output of all the shipyards of Germany or America. To-day their capacity is greater than it ever was, and we are working exclusively for the navy. We are constructing battleships more powerful than any the world has ever seen, battle cruisers, swifter and more formidable than ever, destroyers, torpedoboats, and submarines far superior to any existing at the outbreak of the war.

Germans Will Learn

"Besides this we have created a number of new types of war vessels for special purposes, which are constantly being added to our navy and which will surprise the German fleet if it ever comes out. From time to time we are told that Germany has made wonderful new naval inventions, new types of unsinkable ships or new gigantic guns. We here do not make any announcements, but just go ahead working firmly confident that when the strengthened German fleet comes out to give battle in the North Sea, as we hope German public opinion will force it to do, it will suffer the greatest naval defeat in the history of the world.

"Germany, we hear, is making the most of her time, but you may be quite sure that we have not been idle either. Every day that passes, every hour that has passed since the war began has added to the strength of the British navy. I cannot, of course, tell you anything of the new types we have built, but we are ready to show them to the Germans the moment they will take the trouble to leave their garage in the Kiel Canal. I am absolutely convinced that the war will not end without a test of naval strength, and we are waiting eagerly for that moment to come, for it will sound the signal of final and decisive victory."

SOLDIER AND PEASANT

Tommy and Frenchman Fraternize Behind

It is as far a cry from the English village to the battlefield as from Pall Mall to the bath house; and no one so enjoys his period of rest in billets as the countryman. He is at home at once among the good French peasants with whom he is billeted. His small French and their little English seem to suffice for all communication. May we take it as an omen of fruitful co-operation and long friendship that the one universal French word among British soldiers is "bon" and the Frenchman's English chiefly consists of "good?" Every day behind the line in France "Very goo-ood" and "Tray Bonn" are said a thousand times. And in either accent the words are very pleasant to hear.

ALL CHILDREN LOVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give it When Feverish, Cross, Bilious, for Bad Breath or Sour Stomach

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food, and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Everybody At Salonika Goes To "Floca's"

SALONIKI, April 13.—(British Official Eye-witness)—Floca's has become the social focus of the Entente armies in the Balkans. Some such rendezvous comes to be associated with almost every expeditionary war. The bar of Shepherd's Hotel in Cairo was the place through which everyone passed sooner or later in the time of the Sudan campaigns; the Rand Club at Johannesburg fulfilled a similar function in South Africa. Here the same unexpected greatness has been thrust upon Floca's, so that its name will always remain in the memory of those told off to spend this tedious winter at Saloniki.

Floca's in peace time was just a commonplace cafe, with no more than the modest distinction of being the best of such establishments in Salonika. Here on an ordinary weekday were to be found a sprinkling of Levantine gentlemen drinking Turkish coffee while they discussed with fluent gesture the latest political rumors from Athens.

Its fortunate proprietor who, like so many others here, is making a small fortune, has to thank two of the most cherished Allied institutions—the Englishman's afternoon tea and the Frenchman's afternoon apertif or appetizer. From four o'clock in the afternoon until eight Floca's is more densely populated than any spot in Saloniki. It is filled with officers, camp officers, embarkation officers, staff officers, flying officers, French, British, Serbian, Greek—such a varied collection of officers of every rank and corps that Floca's might be the animated fashion book of a military tailor of international clientele.

But Floca's would hardly be a success in fashionable London. Its interior is gloomy and often foggy. Its green waiters of sinister aspect, only condescend to serve when their attention is attracted by a series of sharp hand-claps. But in Saloniki men count themselves lucky to find a table free, and for those who have lived for months on a barren mountain side, it is a shadowy and distant reproduction of the institutions of home.

When washing blouses or handkerchiefs put a small lump of orris root in the rinsing water. It gives a perfume of violets which is as lasting as a sachet placed among the clothes.

NEED NOT KISS THE BIBLE TAKING OATH

LEGAL COMMITTEE DECIDES.

Only Necessary to Hold Bible in Hand in Future—Law Stops Collection of Commission.

TORONTO, April 13.— In future it will not be necessary for a witness taking an oath in court to kiss the Bible. The Legal Legislature this morning passed an amendment to the Evidence Act, which provides that a witness shall be sworn by administering the oath while he has a copy of the Old or New Testament in his hand. The amendment was contained in a bill by Mr. McCrea (Sudbury), and he also provided that the right of appeal to the Privy Council only apply to cases which originated in the Supreme Court. This would mean that no county court action should be appealed to the Privy Council or no ruling of the Ontario Railway Board could be taken there either. After City Solicitor Johnston had protested against this feature, the committee decided to allow the clause to stand for the time being without any decision.

Real Estate Deeds.

An act which amends the Statute of Frauds and which will go into effect on January 1 as the result of being passed by the committee, provides that no action shall be brought to charge any person for the payment of commission or remuneration on the sale of real property unless a writen agreement has been entered into and signed by the owner of the property to give that commission. This will prevent real estate agents and brokers suing in court on verbal agreements and in order to collect commission they will have to produce a written agreement. The Hon. L. B. Lucas, Attorney-General, told the committee that it would do away with a lot of old-fashioned perjury.

POLYGAMY IN ELEVEN STATES

NEW YORK, April 14.—"Polygamy is practised by Mormons in eleven States," said ex-United States Senator Frank J. Cannon to the Men's Club of the Hamilton Grange Dutch Reformed Church.

Mr. Cannon said: "The Mormon Church conducts a system of plural marriages which has become such a part of the social and religious life of the Mormon kingdom that the victims find themselves unable either to denounce the system or to free themselves from the moral lepers who hold them in eternal bondage."

HER LITTLE BOY HAD PNEUMONIA

NEARLY LOST HIM.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP SAVED HIM.

The slight cold, the irritating cough, the tightness of the chest, if not attended to, will sooner or later develop into some serious lung or bronchial trouble, and our advice to you is that on the first inception of a cough or cold "GET RID OF IT."

Mrs. H. Washburn, Gaspereaux Station, N.B., writes: "I thought I would write and tell you just how much I appreciate Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for I would not be without it in the house. Twice my little boy, now four years old, has had pneumonia, and nearly died, but since using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I have kept him clear of even a cough. I often say that if it had not been for "Dr. Wood's" I would have lost him."

"My little girl, ten months old, is subject to bronchitis, but when she seems to be stuffed up and has difficulty in breathing I give her a few drops of Norway Pine Syrup every two or three hours, and in a very little while she is all well, in fact, on the first signs of a cold or cough we all fly for 'Dr. Wood's'."

You can procure Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup from any druggist or dealer, but be sure and get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, as there are many imitations on the market.

The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

(By Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

Golden Text: There is no distinction between Jew and Greek; for the same Lord is Lord of all, and is rich unto all that call upon him. Rom. 10:12.

1. Verses 1 and 2. What reason is there to believe that a devout Roman in those days, was as well pleasing to God as a devout Jew?

2. Can you give any reason why God to-day, is not as well pleased with a God-fearing Roman Catholic as he is with a God-fearing Protestant?

3. Cornelius was not only a devout man, personally, but his household also; to what extent is a good man responsible for his family following in his footsteps?

4. What degree of proof is it of a man's standing with God that he "gave much alms to the people?"

5. When a man is stingy and close fisted, is that proof that he is a rebel against God? Why?

6. Verse 3. What reason is there for, or against, the idea that revelations and visions were given to devout men of all nations in those days, as well as to the Jews?

7. Verse 4. Have you ever been visited by an angel from God, or do you know of any person who has been, and do you believe that angels visit devout people to-day in a similar manner as in the case of Cornelius?

What specific merit does God accord to those who devote themselves to much prayer, and give liberally to the poor?

8. Verses 5, 6. Does God to-day give to anyone such specific and direct instructions as he here gave to Cornelius?

10. Verses 7, 8. What is the benefit when we have had special instructions from heaven, in telling our experience to other devout souls?

11. What encouragement can you give to one who leads a life of faith and who believes that God directs him in all things, as to the absolute safety of obeying what he believes to be God's voice?

12. Verse 9. Is it wise and profitable to have certain set times for prayer, or is it better to be always in the spirit of prayer, and let our needs, or the Holy Spirit, direct as to special seasons for prayer?

13. Verses 10, 11. Which are the more likely to get revelations from heaven, and why, those who seek them, or those who while they pray, yet, never expect anything supernatural in their lives?

14. Peter's hunger no doubt influenced the nature of the dream in which his instructions were contained, but is that any reason to discount the value of the revelation he received?

15. Verses 12, 13. The eating of the flesh of those animals, or most of them, that Peter saw in his vision, is forbidden in the Old Testament how do you account for it that in this instance, "the word of God" and the Spirit of God do not agree?

16. Verse 14. Peter, in the first instance, stuck to his creed, and refused to obey the direct voice of God; was he right, or wrong, in so doing and why?

17. Must we in thought and act, be bound by the written words in the Bible, and refuse to obey any directions which the Holy Spirit may seem to give us to the contrary?

18. Verses 15-18. Does God blame us, or commend us, for not acting upon what seems to us a revelation, until we have tested it? Why?

19. Verses 19-23. When we get a revelation from God that is not unmistakably clear, may we depend that He will arrange circumstances or give another revelation, to clear up the doubt, even this case? Give your reasons.

NEGRO KILLS 7 OTHERS

Jealousy Crazed Him and He Used Gun and Razor.

STUTGAART, Ark., April 11. — A posse to-day was searching the nearby country for Arthur Akers, a negro, who, crazed by sight of his wife talking to another man, ran amuck here last night, killing seven persons, all negroes, and wounding two others with a double-barrelled shotgun.

With a razor in one hand and a gun in the other, Akers entered a negro church after killing his wife and her companion. There he fired one barrel, killing four more negroes instantly. He then went to the railroad station, where he stabbed a negro porter and cut the throats of a horse and a dog.

SOAKED

"SOAKED" without knowing it is the condition of the man who boycotts his HOME TOWN. He SUFFERS, whether he KNOWS it or NOT. Every time he sends his money away he knocks a shingle off his neighbor's roof and two off his OWN. Start this habit ONCE, and it grows—and grows—and grows. Home values begin to suffer, and, after a while, DOWN comes the DELUGE. But OUR duty is clear. Our COMMUNITY'S duty—by all the rules of humanity and brotherhood—is to put this man WISE. If we FAIL to point out the way, our community goes BACKWARD. Saying nothing, doing nothing, is NOT progress. Progress for ACTION. Let us then declare the TRUTH.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

AN ESCAPE

(By F. A. Mitchell.)

A country place in England. The season is spring, when the leaves are beginning to bud. The time of day is soon after dawn. Nothing could be more quiet than this scene just emerging from darkness, the old Queen Anne mansion and its surroundings. A door opens slowly, and a woman slips out, closing it cautiously behind her. She flits down the walk to the gate, opens it, passes through, closes it behind her with the same care as she had closed the door, takes one glance at the somber mansion and walks away with a quick step, which soon increases to a run.

The morning light broadens, a red spark appears in the eastern sky line, the spark developing into dusk. Smoke begins to curl lazily from a chimney here and there. A man emerges from a rear door of a house and goes back toward a barn. The escaped woman calls to him. He stops, turns and goes back to the fence on the other side of which she is standing.

"Are you married?" she asks.

"Married?? Why, no." Naturally the question surprises him.

"If you will marry me I'll give you any price you ask."

"Price?" Why a lady —a girl—comely, should pay a common farmer to marry her was unintelligible.

"Yes. But I wouldn't want you to live with me. I'd want to leave you as soon as the ceremony was performed. Will you?"

The matter having become a commercial transaction, the man's mind fell upon the possible gain to him. He asked how he would be benefitted. She asked him to name a price. He named £100. She doubled it.

"Where can we find a clergyman?" she asked.

"Come," she said, "make haste."

Climbing the fence, he walked beside her toward the spire till they came to a little church nestling under the trees and knocked at the door of the rectory beside it. A man, 28 or 30 years old, in canonicals, came to the door.

"Marry us, quick!" said the girl.

"Come in," said the clergyman, astonished to see a lady and a farm-hand asking to be wedded. They were shown into a living room, and the clergyman said:

"I cannot marry you without some information concerning such a singular case."

The girl gave it hurriedly. She was an orphan and an heiress. Her guardian, a man of 50 and a rascal, was trying to force her to marry him before she became of age, which would be in a few months. He had represented that she was not of sound mind, and he was keeping her under guard. She had escaped despite his watching, but would doubtless be overtaken and carried back, the law being on her guardian's side. As a married woman, through her husband, she could claim her freedom. The rector listened to her explanation, pondered a few minutes, then said:

"I fancy I can get you out of your trouble without this marriage, which will bring complications difficult to unravel. Suppose I hide you?"

"Can you? Will you?"

"I can."

The girl told the man she had come with that if he would stand by her and not reveal her whereabouts she would give him the money she had promised him to marry her. He was an honest chap and said that he would stand by her without being paid to do so.

As soon as he had gone the clergyman took the girl into the church and placed her behind a curtain in the chancel. Then he went back to the rectory, where he found breakfast waiting for him. It was not long before a groom, mounted, rode up to the rectory and, throwing himself from the horse, knocked at the door. The rector answered the summons and questions as to whether he had seen the escaped girl. Lying not being in keeping with his sacred office, he excited suspicion. The groom rode away leaving the rector convinced that he would report his suspicions, and the church and rectory would be searched. Going into the church, he informed the girl of her danger. She was beside herself with terror.

"I will take the place," he said, "of the man who agreed to marry you, but without price, and will consent to an annulment at such time as you may desire."

The girl was only too glad to avail herself of his offer. A servant was sent post haste for a Methodist minister who lived a short distince from them. He came, the servants were called as witnesses, and the two were legally married.

The ceremony had scarcely been finished when a gentleman was driven up to the rectory and demanded in the name of the law to search the premises for his ward. The rector led her forth and presented her as his wife.

When shown the marriage certificate, the guardian acknowledged himself beaten, and that was the end of the persecution.

Some months later, when the lady had become of age, the rector offered to arrange for an annulment of the marriage. The annulment, however, was never applied for, and the marriage was accepted by both the parties. But that constitutes a love story in itself.

HUN ATROCITIES PERSIST

Brutalities Practiced Upon Unhappy French Justice of Peace

The story of a French justice of the peace in a French town now occupied by the Germans is a tragic one. He was a man of 55, and remained in the town with his family when the Germans arrived. He was soon taken as a hostage, and was motored round by German officers to every bank or wealthy private house, with orders to open safes and deliver money to the officers. The latter appeared to think that a justice of the peace had power to order banks or private persons to give up any valuables when required.

He repeatedly refused to carry out this mission, was twice court-martialled, and finally sentenced to six months' imprisonment, or an alternative fine of $1,200. The fine was paid by his friends. Thereupon the German authorities kept him prisoner all the same, on the ground that "he might become a dangerous person." For months he was kept a prisoner, either in invaded French territory or in German towns, where in one case he was shut up in a cell for forty-five days, although suffering from an advanced stage of heart disease.

One day a German officer took him out and said he would be conducted to the frontier, instead of which he was conveyed to the concentration camp, where he remained several months, this time mostly in the camp hospital. He wrote: "I have undergone every imaginable suffering since my imprisonment." At last he was discharged, and allowed to pay his fare and that of the German escorting him to the Swiss frontier. His health now finally shattered, he died four days after his arrival in Paris.

John Bull in Kilts

Englishmen comment with glee on the fact that German cartoonists now almost invariably depict John Bull as wearing Scotch Highland garb. It apparently is not known in Germany that the English Parliament forbade the wearing of the kilt 170 years ago. The Scotchman, however, enjoys the German idea still more, for he sees in it a kind of tribute to the kilt wearers as the fighters most conspicuous to German eyes.

Bringing Sunshine to the Darkest Day

LOSS OF SHIP TRADE ALARMS ENGLAND

SHIPOWNERS COMPLAIN OF THE SMALL PROFITS DESPITE HIGH RATES THEY CHARGE.

LONDON, April 13.—Grave concern is being felt in British shipping circles regarding the future of British shipping. Already over 25 per cent. of British owned tonnage has been requisitioned by the Admiralty in connection with the war and the great dearth of tonnage is reflected in the present high rates of freight.

Shipowners have been subjected to a large amount of criticism owing to the high profits which they are making but a prominent shipowner in London has pointed out that the present condition of affairs is far from satisfactory from the shipowner's point of view.

"True," he said, "we are earning big profits now, but we have the future to think of. There are not enough ships to go around, and while we are having to pay extra wages and war bonuses to the crews, increased charges for bunker coal, and delays in port owing to congestion, the neutral is stepping in and getting the carrying trade which was formerly in the hands of the British.

"Then there is another vital point: At present nearly all the ship repairing and building yards are full up with work for the Admiralty, and we cannot get our boats overhauled, much less place orders for new vessels, for there is not a single shipbuilder in England to-day who will guarantee delivery. Consequently we cannot possibly replace losses caused by submarines and mines, so that the position of the shipowners of England is anything but pleasant. The losses due to the war have been much greater than is generally realised, and scarcely one of the lost boats has been replaced.

"Again, there is the question of licenses. While we in England have to obtain a license to carry certain goods and trade between certain ports, the neutral owner can step in and take the trade from under our noses, and there are merchants anxious to guarantee delivery of shipments who are only to ready to send the goods in neutral bottoms, simply because these neutrals are free from requisition.

"One of our cargo boats recently was chartered to sail from London, and we had almost completed the loading when she was requisitioned. We had another steamer sailing from Liverpool, and the cargo of the boat loading in London was unshipped and forwarded to Liverpool by rail, and upon delivery there our Liverpool boat was also placed under requisition, and consequently the cargo was in the end shipped in a neutral steamer.

"The majority of the boats which before the war were engaged in the coal trade are under requisition, and in consequence neutrals have stepped in and are benefiting by the high rates paid from the Tyne to London, and Tyne to the Mediterranean. As much as 60s. a ton has been paid for a voyage from the Tyne to Genoa with coal, against the average of 7s. 6d. per ton for the same voyage two years ago.

"If we could obtain guarantee of delivery we should be quite prepared to place orders for new steamers, despite the high prices prevailing for all classes of building material. Unless the government takes action very soon the outlook for British shipping will be most critical.

Representations have been made to the government by a deputation of shipbuilders and shipowners with a view to taking men of "war work" and placing them upon ordinary merchant work, but owing to the great scarcity of skilled labor and the urgent requirements of the British Admiralty there seems little prospect of any great transference of labor taking place.

While the shipbuilding yards on the Clyde are working day and night very little merchant work is being turned out. During last month only two vessels were launched for the mercantile marine, and these were small craft, the building of which, it is understood, has been pushed forward with the consent of the Admiralty authorities so that room could be made for new war work.

Since January 1 only three merchant vessels have been launched on the Clyde, representing a total of 6,000 tons, which is the smallest output ever experienced since the Clyde became a shipbuilding centre.

If you want plenty of POWER—economical power—this is the car!

Isn't another SIX on the market at any price that begins to equal it for PERFORMANCE power. By that, we mean power that is so exactly adapted to the car, to its weight, to what it has to do on the roads that it's economical, not wasteful.

And it's that nice balance of POWER and ECONOMY that has made this new Studebaker SIX famous as the POWER Six of 1916. No other SIX within hundreds of dollars of its price gives as much power.

As a matter of fact, this new Studebaker motor is one of the most wonderful productions of the year from the efficiency side. Not a new and untried experiment—not a radical change—but simply a marvelous refinement of the Studebaker design that has been envolving for years. And it's a motor that is a pleasure to sit back of—with its flood of power flowing like liquid. Come in today and let us give a demonstration of this wonderful "Made in Canada" Studebaker SIX that has been the hit of the year.

"EARLESS PETE," RUSSIAN GUERILLA, TERROR TO GERMANS IN THE EAST

Winter, the difficulties of the campaign on the eastern front in Russia and the knowledge of the impenetrable Pinsk marshes have made a Russian national hero out of a daring peasant, who is known throughout the Tsar's domain's as "Earless Pete." This man, according to a writer for the Novoe Vremya, a Petrograd newspaper, is the grimmest of all Germany's enemies and is feared by the German troopers to such an extent that his name is one to conjure with. Just how much the guerilla leader is feared is ascertained from German newspapers that have been found in the trenches and make much of the daring exploits of the man.

"Everywhere along the eight hundred mile front," says the Russian writer, "German outposts are being attacked, sentries are being sniped, convoys raided, trenches pestered at night and every day a toll of death is being taken and a still greater toll of terror. One of 'Earless Pete's' latest exploits was when he crept with his band between two disconnected German trenches on the Pinsk-Baranovitch section and came back with the headgear of thirty slaughtered Germans whom he had slain from ambush with a loss of only seven of his band.

"These volunteers of ours are either local peasants, disbanded soldiers or young men from remoter parts belonging to the 'educated' classes. Our peasants are now awake. By encroaching on wholly Russian soil the invaders have rendered us a special service. The Poles could be coerced or terrorized into submission. Today the Germans are fighting among men of the Russian race and faith who feel that they are defending their hearths and their homes. Neither bribes nor threats avail.

"It is this fact that gave 'Earless Pete' his name. In reality he is not earless and can hear a German sneeze a verst away. He is 'earless' because he has no ear open to our country's foes. 'Pete' slays no unarmed or disarmed man, but in battle he neither gives nor expects mercy. He has never commanded more than seventy men but he has killed or put out of action at least 300 Germans. 'Pete' wins because with all their technical perfection the Kaiser's battalions lack the scouting, sparting instincts needed for coping with the guerillas.

"'Pete's' allies are the winter snows—still more the winter thaws. He operates only in marsh land. In the Pinsk marshes, once a thaw sets in, malaria comes. 'Pete's' men are inured. They know the country and are familiar with the narrow lanes of traversible land in the illimitable marsh. Here is a sample of the way 'Earless Pete' works to confuse and terrorize the Germans.

"'Pete' made a faint attack on a strong German outpost and pretended to be alarmed at the strength of the enemy and to flee. The enemy pursued. 'Pete's' men took the longest, narrowest path through the swamp. When the pursuers were crowded on the main road, bordered with swamp land with rotten ice, 'Pete' turned and attacked. Simultaneously others of his men appeared on the flank. The Germans could not deploy. Those who left the road crashed through the melting ice. A terrific rifle fire cut up the Germans. Thirty out of a hundred got away. The rest perished.

"Yard deep snow, which has hampered the German movements, is the friend of 'Pete.' Swathed in white sheets, moving silently on skis, the guerillas approach and snipe or pour volleys into the German trenches. The Germans dash out, shooting wildly. They try to charge and only flounder in the snow. In the darkness these attacks have succeeded again and again in causing the Germans large loss of life and spoiling their nerve. 'Midnight snow ghosts,' is the name which 'Pete' has for his followers."

RUSSIAN NOBLES SENT TO SIBERIA BECAUSE THEY KEPT HUN NAMES

PETROGRAD, April 13.—Premier Sturmer is about to change his name. He will adopt his wife's — Panin. Sturmer is a German name; Panin is Russian. That's why. Many Russian nobles with German names have been sent to Siberia because they refused to change them.

Ex-Procurator of the Holy Synod Sabler recently made a similiar change. So did Councillor of the Empire Neidhardt. So have many other Russian dignitaries, civil and military, who bore German patronymics.

The anti-German wave throughout Russia is not purely a war sentiment. The war just gave it a chance to manifest itself. It is a popular reaction against a German tutelage which has lasted for generations and is generally held to have been largely responsible for the government's severity.

It is not known that pressure was brought to bear on Sturmer, Sabler and Neidhardt to change their names but this actually has been done in many other cases and possibly, secretly, in theirs, Barons von Brummer, Stempel and von Rennenkampf lost government posts not long ago because they declined to make the required change.

Baron Hahn and Count Fahlen, who were marshals of nobility respectively at Malta and another Courtland district, have been asked to resign their positions and leave for districts not in a state of siege.

Baron von Mirbach, marshal of nobility at Dvinsk, Mayor Pfeiffer, of the same place, Count Kayserling, Barons Meyendorf and von Heyking, who held high posts under the Czar, and many other noblemen of the Baltic provinces have actually been sent to Siberia for the duration of the war.

All business either wholly or partly owned by Germans, and in some cases by Russians of German descent, have been closed, compulsory wound up, or placed under government control.

Land ownership or tenancy by Germans or Austrians have been prohibited, and even in cases where such ownership has continued for generations, the land is to be disposed of voluntarily or at public sale.

ALLIES TO AID POLAND

LONDON, April 14.—The "Daily Chronicle's" Rome correspondent says that in response to appeals by the Centra Committee for the Relief of Poland, the Pope has approached the representatives of the allies in Rome, asking that facilities be given for the importation of foodstuffs into Poland.

A favorable reply has been given, but yith the reservation that an effective guarantee must be provided that the foodstuffs will reach the suffering Poles and not be confiscated afor te benefit of German troops.

The Vatican is endeavoring to organize in Poland some reliable neutral organization similar to that existing in Belgium for the reception and distribution of relief.

GERMAN GIRL WRITES, "WE ARE LOSING WAR."

A note of despair is struck by a letter found on the body of a dead German sergeant of the 231st reserve infantry regiment of the Firty-fifth division. The letter comes from the sister of the soldier and was written at Stettin shortly after the first of this year. The letter, which evidently was an answer ot an appeal for money, says:

"I hasten to forward you the money. It is all that we possess now. It is, of course, very little, but I trust you will be satisfied. In order to send even that we must restrict ourselves. To support mother, Franz and myself I have made the sacrifice of going into service as a barmaid. At present life is very sad here. There is no work at all, money is very scarce and no food supplies. We all pray that the war may soon be over. We know that we are losing the war. It is all the fault of the English, who are starving us, and God will punish them."

NEAR LIMIT OF RESERVES.

Germans Have Almost Every Available Man in Verdun Fight.

LONDON, April 14.— The military correspondent of the London Times writes:

"The Germans have some eight and a half divisions (about 120,000 men) engaged in the attack on Verdun on the left bank of the Meuse, and twenty-two divisions (about 320,000) on the right bank of the river, including the third and eighteenth army corps, which have been withdrawn temporarily for repairs.

"Excluding those two army corps, there are only two divisions at the disposal of the German staff in reserve on the front from Vanquois to St. Mihiel. All the others have been drawn into the fight, and also have been severely mauled. No less than twelve divisions have been taken out of line, hurriedly patched up, and sent in again.

"The source from which new divisions can be drawn is not apparent, unless they are taken from the British front or from distant theatres of war. At a pinch the three German divisions remaining south of the Danube may be transported west, with the risk, of course, that Bulgaria may become more unsteady in the cause.

"One or two more divisions may be brought from the Russian front while the thaw still impedes important movements, but little can be taken from other quarters, and unless new formations on a large scale appear from the interior—and of these there is as yet no sign—no other formed divisions are at the Germans' disposal."

When it comes to work many men feel like crying. "Women and children first."

Easter Fashions

A Visit of New and Beautiful Versions In COSTUMES, SUITS AND COATS
FOR THE EASTER PROMENADE

FASHION is more a matter of information than of income. Refinement and art in dress are easily cultivated. But the sources upon which one may draw for grooming to one's taste are not numerous, particularly if expenditures for wardrobes are limited. Therefore to the woman or young woman of fashion who recognizes the importance of a correct appearance on Easter Sunday our will be of particular interest as they are priced in keeping with average clothes allowances; yet they are superbly pretty and indistinguishable from the costly creations displayed in shops that cater exclusively to the elite.

These garments are now ready in a splendid selection of models suitable for women and misses.

Your eyes are certainly worth more to you than the price of a pair of glasses.
Weak eyes in spring can be protected by proper lenses. If you indulge in the pastime of motoring or bicycling get a pair of glasses to protect the eyes from dust and wind.

DE LAVAL Cream Separators

Buying a Cream Separator is a good deal like hiring a man to work on your farm. A hired man that does poor work, and is lazy, is an expensive proposition, no matter how little you pay him. A cream separator that is hard to turn, hard to keep clean, and doesn't skim close would be expensive, even if you got it as a gift.

CREAMERYMEN AND DAIRYMEN ALL OVER THE WORLD RECOGNIZE THE SUPERIORITY OF THE DE LAVAL.

About the only reason why any one ever buys any other cream separator is because they can get it a little cheaper. Then they soon find out they have lost ten times as much from separator inconvenience, poor skimming, and a machine that quickly wears out, as they saved in the beginning.
Remember that a De Laval will soon pay for itself, and if you have no separator now, or an inferior machine, you can buy a De Laval on such terms that it will pay for itself while you are using it.
The best cream separator is the cheapest. Let our nearest agent call and prove it to you on your own farm, or write us direct.

SOONER OR LATER YOU WILL BUY A DE LAVAL.

LULL AT VERDUN CONTINUES

A LULL IN THE INFANTRY FIGHTING CONTINUES ON THE VERDUN FRONT

Heavy Artillery Actions on West Bank of the Meuse Last Night But Germans Have Made No Attempt to Follow Up the Bombardment--French Guns Were Active Throughout the Night.

HARD FIGHTING BY THE CANADIANS

PARIS (French Official) April 15.—Heavy artillery actions occurred on the west bank of the Meuse last night, but the lull in infantry fighting on the Verdun front continued, the War Office reported to-day. The Germans directed a rather violent cannonade against French works between Malancourt wood and Hill 304, but made no attempt to follow up the bombardment with infantry charges. French guns were very active throughout the night, particularly in the region west of Corbeaux woods, and at the crossings of Forges Brook. East of the Meuse and in the Woevre, only intermittent bombardments occurred. French troops repulsed German reconnaissances in the region of Parvilliers, north of Roye and south of St. Marie mines, in the Vosges.

CARDINAL DEFIES HUN GOVERNOR-GENERAL

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, April 15.—Cardinal Mercier, threatened by the German authorities in Belgium with restriction of his privileges because of his alleged "political activities," has openly defied Gen. Von Bissing, German Governor-General, according to advices received here to-day.

In reply to Von Bissing's recent threat, the Cardinal wrote that he was answerable only to his conscience, and though paying that silent homage which was due to strength, he nevertheless retained his full liberty to judge and express himself. "It was not without thorough consideration that he denounced to the world the frightful evils with which our brothers and sisters are overwhelmed," wrote Cardinal Mercier. "But had we not done so we should not have felt ourselves worthy to be the successor of the Apostles." The Cardinal further stated that when a civil ruler sets aside justice, it is no longer the duty of a prelate to obey him.

FINAL TOUCHES ON THE NOTE TO BERLIN

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The final touches are being put on this Government's communication to Germany to-day. The affidavits forwarded here by American Consular agents at Paris and London reached the State Department last night, and early to-day Secretary Lansing was hard at work going over them. Most of the evidence contained in the affidavits had already been sent to the State Department in summarized form. The affidavits themselves will be used as "exhibits." Additional information, tending to support that already in the President's hands on the Sussex and other recent U-boat attacks, is being drawn up by Lansing for incorporation in the President's statement to Berlin.

Speeches Hailed As Signs of Peace

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, April 15.—Two leading English weekly newspapers, in current issues, hail Premier Asquith's recent speech in reply to the German Chancellor's Reichstag address, as an important step toward peace. The Economist, whose editor, Francis W. Hirst, is one of the leading financial writers of the country, declares that unquestionably Asquith's speech has advanced the end of the war. The Nation is of the opinion that the Asquith reply to Von Bethmann-Hollweg marks the beginning of what may be considered "Peace soundings" through public speeches. The German Chancellor, the Nation says, may now be expected to reply to Premier Asquith.

LONDON, April 15.—The British steamer Shenandoah, 4,000 tons, struck a mine and sank. Two of her crew are missing.

Aberdeen Barge Sunk By Gun Fire

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The Aberdeen barge Inverlyon, from Portland, Ore., to Lime Rick, Ireland, was sunk by gunfire April 11, but two Americans aboard her escapel safely. Some of the crew were lost.

The Position of Caretaker Open

Chance for Place to Be Filled by Returned Soldier

The position of caretaker of the Gannon's Narrow Bridge, is open, and it is desired, if possible, that the place be filled by a returned soldier. Even if partially disabled the life in the open, and with duties not necessarily onerous might well suit some one. Possibly a man from the ranks, who has endeavoured to do his share and who may have been let out as being medically unfit for service would suit. Applications can be made to the Patriotic Fund office. The place must be filled at once. The office will be open this evening, (Saturday), so that word may be forwarded promptly

IMPORTANT MATTER HELD TILL MONDAY

Owing to pressure on the space of to-day's issue of The Examiner, it is compulsory to hold over much matter, including Rev. F. A. Connor's sermon on "Verbal Inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, and Mr. Cowan's reply to Rev. Dr. Workman. They will appear on Monday.

SHOULD INCLUDE LOCAL VETERANS OF LANGEMARCK BATTLE

Fourteen of the Peterboro' Men Fought in Famous Stand of Canadians Are Now Home and Should Be Feature of Celebration

MIGHT HAVE A DINNER

Any celebration in connection with the first anniversary of the Canadians' gallant stand at Langemarck and St. Julien would be incomplete without the presence of the Peterborough boys who took part in the big battle, and who have since been invalided home from the front. Probably the committee in charge has already taken steps to see that all these men are present, but this reminder will do no harm, as some of the men are at the Convalescent Home at Kingston or elsewhere, and if anything is to be done to have them home for the Langemarck celebration it should be done at once. Peterborough citizens now back in Canada who were in the Langemarck battle include the following, who should all be on hand for the celebration:

Sergt.-Major Geo. W. Allen, 40th Battalion, C.F.A., Toronto, formerly a sergeant in the 10th Battery, C.F.A.

Sergt. Cooper, 4th Battery, C.F.A.

Corp. W. King, 4th Battery, C.F.A.

Gunner Mordie McGill, now with the 32nd Battery, C.F.A., formerly with the 4th Battery, C.F.A.

Pte. N. H. Clarke, 2nd Battalion, now at Convalescent Home, Kingston.

Pte. H. Fitzclarance, 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., now at Convalescent Home, Kingston.

Pte. Sam A. Mills, 2nd Battalion.

Pte. Ernest Mesley, 2nd Battalion.

Pte. T. A. Parrington, 2nd Battalion.

Pte. A. W. Phipps, 2nd Battalion.

Pte. C. Stenson, 2nd Battalion, now at Convalescent Home, Kingston.

Pte. J. Wilson, 2nd Battalion, now at Convalescent Home, Kingston.

A pleasing tribute to these heroes might take the form of a complimentary dinner, at which the formation of a St. Julien Veterans' Association along the lines of that recently organized at Toronto.

MOTHERS SHOULD TAKE SEATS ON PLATFORM

All mothers of men who have enlisted for overseas service since the war began are cordially invited to occupy seats on the platform at Sunday evening's meeting at the Armouries. This prominence of position is due to women who have sacrificed much in giving sons to serve the country. It is also a tribute to the manliness of the sons who offered themselves; so please, mothers, take platform seats, and let all do honour to you and your sons. There will be ample room.

ANOTHER MEMBER OF MOUNTED RIFLES KILLED IN ACTION

Pte David James Who Left Here With Draft for the 8th C. M. R. Last Summer Met Death April 1st---Recruiting March for the 93rd Battalion--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Word has been received that Pte David James, who left Peterborough last summer to join B Squadron, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles at Barrie field, was killed in action on April 1st. The news came to Mrs. John Fennel of this city, who, although not related to Pte. James, was a friend of her husband, and had been given as next-of-kin. Pte. James had been employed by Mr. J. Morrison, at Ida, and came in to Peterborough with his friend, John Fennell, and both enlisted with the Mounted Rifles. He was only nineteen years of age and had no relatives in Canada.

Through some mistake Mrs. Fennell first hear that her husband had been killed. Later however, the word came that it was not her husband, but her husband's friend, who had given his life for Canada and the Empire.

The 93rd Battalion will parade down town on a recruiting march, this evening, falling in at 7.45 o'clock.

A boxing, wrestling and bayonet fighting tournament, under the auspices of the 93rd Battalion, will be held at the Armouries on Wednesday night, April 26th. Entries should be made before Wednesday next, April 19th, to Lieut. Gillham, who wishes to get the different classes arranged as soon as possible There is a lot of good talent in the 93rd and the tournament should be an interesting one.

The residents in the neighbourhood of the Armouries were awakened at 6.30 o'clock by the sweet strains of music. The 93rd Battalion were working an innovation by having the band play during the early morning physical drill.

To-day was pay-day for the 93rd Battalion. Needless to say the cheques were appreciated.

The Lindsay Post says: On Thursday Lieut. Light, bandmaster of the R.C.H.A. band, Kingston, visited Lindsay on official business, and while here inspected the brass and bugle bands of the 109th Batt. The officer was surprised at the efficiency and excellence of the two organizations. In connection with the brass band, Lieut. Light complimented Bandmaster Hefferman on possessing such a well balanced organization. The bugle band was, in his opinion, one of the best of the overseas organizations, and he had never heard a band play with more perfect unison.

TORONTO, April 14.—Shades of King's Regulations, Otter's Guide, and all and sundry official and unofficial text books of military etiquette and tradition, a British soldier—and an officer in embryo at that — was seen crossing the intersection of Bay and King Streets at 8.25 a.m. to-day with an umbrella elevated to protect his young and gallant shoulders from the soft, caressing rain!

The youth wore the uniform of the Provisional School of Infantry, though the red coat was hidden under the khaki greatcoat. He changed from a King to a College car, and was apparently on his way to the school on College Street.

"Thank God we have a navy," remarked an officer who had recently taken a course at the school and knows the drastic emphasis placed against such incongruities as a soldier with an umbrella. "Say, I'd just give a five-dollar bill to see that fellow walk up the steps of the school with his umbrella up and meet Col. Lang, the commandant, on the spot. Gee whizz—good-night!"

The Standard, of Kingston, says: There will be ten bands at Barriefield camp this summer, and each band is doing its best to come into camp with the finest organization.

The Lindsay Warder says: There was a martial stir on Kent Street when the officers and soldiers of the 109th Battalion, under the commanding officer paraded to the C P R.

CAPT. E. BIRDSALL HOME FROM FRONT

THREE MONTHS' FURLOUGH

Capt. Everett Birdsall, son of Lt.-Col. Birdsall, of Birdsall Station, one of the gallant band of Peterborough county boys of the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., was in Peterborough for a few hours this morning, on his way home to Birdsall. Capt. Birdsall, who was with the 2nd Battalion through the three big fights at St. Julien, Festubert, and Givenchy, and in the trench fighting all last summer and autumn, coming through without a scratch, was badly wounded on December 14th last by a bomb from a trench mortar. He has been in hospital for some time in England, sailing on the Scandinavian for Canada. His mother went to the Old Country when he was wounded, and accompanied her hero son home.

The Examiner found Capt. Birdsall at the Snowden House this morning. He was looking well, a bandage around his head being the only visible evidence of the wound that nearly cost him his life. Like many of those who have come back from the front, the wounded officer was modest in his references to his exploits at the front.

"It was a trench mortar bomb that got me," he remarked.

"That's one of those things that fall into a trench and lie some seconds before they explode, is it not?" asked the reporter.

"Usually they act that way," replied Capt. Birdsall, "but the trouble in this case was that it exploded in the air."

Speaking of the 2nd Battalion, Capt. Birdsall said that of the staff of officers who left Salisbury Camp with the unit, only two were now serving with the 2nd Battalion. These were Capt. Hugell, of Sault Ste Marie, and Capt. O'Flynn, of Belleville. All the others were gone, although some of them are serving in other units. It was hard to estimate how many of the rank and file were left.

Capt. Birdsall is on a three months' furlough. He left for his home on the 8.20 G.T.R. train this morning.

"It's good to get home after over twenty months away," he remarked. "And this is beautiful, this Canadian weather," added his mother.

THE WAR MUST GO ON TO ITS BITTER END, SAYS FRENCH

Visit of French Members to the Franco-British Parliamentary Committe Was the Big Feature of Week, Says T. P. O'Connor

"NO DOUBTFUL PEACE"

Copyright, 1916, Central News.
(By T. P. O'Connor.)

LONDON, April 15.—In spite of the existence of such big issues everywhere, in spite of the vigorous persistence of the Germans in the attack on Verdun; in spite of the renewed attempts to overthrow Mr. Asquith by small groups of intriguers in the House of Commons the visit of the French members of the Franco-British Parliamentary committee occupied most of the public's attention this week.

Beginning quietly against some suspicion and opposition, this body has become one of the leading European factors to-day, and may eventually bring profound changes in international relations and also in Parliamentary systems. Its London visit ended in a visit to Westminster Abbey under the guidance of Lord Bryce, who as chairman of the British section made frequent speeches and always said the right thing. Then tired but delighted the French and British delegates started by the night train for visits to Glasgow and to the fleet and munitions factories of England, and to attend innumerable public meetings.

All of One Note.

The speeches, though eloquent, were all of one note, that the war must go on to the bitter end, until the attempt of Germany at the military domination of Europe be brought to an end. There must be no compromise, no doubtful peace, no separate peace. If possible the Frenchmen are more resolute than the Englishmen. One Catholic deputy told me that he had six sons in the war. His son-in-law already had been killed. "But we shall go on," he said, "to the last Frenchman and the duty must not be left to our children of slaying this monster, which attacks liberty and civilization everywhere."

I mentioned to one deputy, who before the war was a pacifist, that a prominent French politician was of the opinion that peace should be hurried up. "If he dared to say such a word, "the deputy replied with blazing eyes, "I will drag him from the tribune, and the inkpots will fly at his head from every side of the chamber."

Take it from me then, that France and England are more allied than ever, that the resolution of each country is more iron now than at the beginning of the war, that self-confidence has risen to certainty and that no attention will be given even to a whisper of peace.

Conduct of the War.

Our own differences, which come to the surface at every session of the two Houses of Parliament, concern themselves constantly not with the question of settlement, but how to conduct the war most efficiently. It is to be expected therefore that Lord Kitchener will continue as war secretary to be the storm centre of the various groups who find themselves at variance with the Coalition government on questions of war policy. While the contest for Verdun rages, the government forces are being held closely together by the plea that it is a duty to preserve the national unity while this life and death struggle is being made by the French, and thus to inspire them with confidence in the firmness of their Allies. There are predictions, however, that the ending of the Verdon battle, no matter what the result will see a concerted effort in England by the forces of the dissatisfied to overturn the ministry headed by Mr. Asquith. Attacks scarcely veiled, have been opened in several influential newspapers on the Premier as well as on Lord Kitchener. The Morning Post borrows from the Scotch novelist Ian Barrows to call Mr. Asquith "The Maclaren to call Mr. Asquith "The Backit Minister." His friends retort that the newspaper is one of many sticks and straws in the hands of conspirators, who seek to overthrow the government.

Conferrd on a Canadian Soldier—Stuck at His Post Though Wounded

OTTAWA, April 15.—Corporal Richard Miller of the first Western Ontario battalion, received the first Military Medal bestowed on Canadian soldiers. This is a new order recently instituted. Miller, although wounded, remained at his post in command of a support party during a heavy bombardment and returned to his post through several hundred yards of heavy fire after his wounds had been dressed. Pte. D. S. Schwan of the nineteenth Western Ontario battalion was given a Distinguished Conduct Medal for bringing wounded men in under heavy fire. Sergt. Ashby and Corp. Weir, both of whom had won a D.C.M. before, were given the new Military Medals also.

SATURDAY, APRIL 15, 1916

PALM SUNDAY.

In the Church calendar to-morrow is rubricated as Palm Sunday, commemorating the triumphal entry of Jesus into the metropolitan city of Palestine. The multitude greeted Him with a royal welcome. They strewed His path with their garments and with branches torn from the palm trees. They hailed Him as the son of David, and joyously shouted their hosannas. And when Jesus had passed into the temple they sought the side streets, and returned to their homes. On that day the prophet of Nazareth was the subject of general discussion in Jerusalem. On that occasion and during the days that followed, not the least dramatic element in the Passion was surely the multitude. They had acclaimed Jesus as with one great voice, but when their excitement had subsided and they followed their daily round of duties, they heard strange whispers. The money-changers had begun their insidious slanders, and with them the Pharisees, the elders, the chief priests and the scribes joined forces. They accused Him of blasphemy, they suborned false witnesses, they whispered questions doubting His authority, their spies followed Him, seeking sayings they could twist and use against Him, and finally they charged Him with treason. Though the people had seen Him perform miracles, they did not believe. Many among the chief rulers believed, but "because of the Pharisees they did not confess Him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue."

Truly a dramatic figure the populace of Jerusalem, and so human, volatile, inconstant, open-eared to gossip, accepting the hearsay, and swayed by their passions. What a sorry figure that throng, in its transformation from the day it strewed the thoroughfare of its city with palms and lavished greetings on the scion of the royal line of David, contrasted with the scene at the court of Caesar, when in their passion they cried with blind braggadocia, "His blood be upon us and upon our children."

Public opinion seems ever to have been built upon sands that shift with the lightest winds; even the whispered breath of slander could close the eyes of the Jerusalem multitude to the miracles they were privileged to witness. False report was accepted as truth even of Jesus Christ, and those who might have combatted the calumnious falsehoods feared the Pharisees' power and their own position in the synagogue.

Probably all of us could find ourselves in that Palm Sunday throng, but how many of us see ourselves in the courtyard of Caesar?

"SAFETY FIRST" AND PLUMBING.

If there is one thing more than another in the construction of a dwelling house, that should be absolutely perfect—above suspicion of defect in the way of leakage—it is the plumbing installation. In the first place the vital or (in case of defect) mortal, parts of a plumbing system are concealed, and not easily accessible, making it difficult to see or remedy defects. Defective plumbing is an insidious danger, working like a thief in the night, intruding poisonous sewer gas into homes—both while the inmates wake and sleep.

Since good plumbing means safety and comfort, and bad plumbing involves danger of disease and death, the subject is of vital, or, as the case may be, of mortal significance. In another column is found an article upon some features of Peterborough's plumbing, which should be read with attention by, and enlist the interest of, the civic authorities. It is written by Mr. Edwin Newsome, editor of the "Sanitary Engineer," and should be, if any can be, an authoritative and dependable pronouncement. We are spending hundreds of thousands to provide adequate sewage disposal; and it would seem illogical if not idiotic and criminal to neglect means to prevent sewage, in the form of gas, penetrating and poisoning the air of our homes. If plumbing is in the slightest way defective a sewerage system, as a protection against unsanitary conditions is a vain thing, and a wicked waste of money.

THE GABS OF SPRING.

The mounting sun of April knocks the fetters off the frost-bound earth, the grass comes forth to meet him, and the smile of the green earth, the waking of growth, the bursting buds, the opening leaves, the springing of early flowers and all washed with cleansing showers, clothe the whole land with the new garb of spring. Even the happy birds preen their feathers of a brighter hue—"a brighter iris gathers on the burnished dove," "the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," and the "old man's" fancy should seriously turn to thoughts of paint. The dingy paint on the woodwork of his house or verandah should get the brightening touch of paint, in harmony with the sprightlier tone symphony of the earth and all nature, rejoicing in the new glory of springtime regeneration; and also in aesthetic, if not conjugal, harmony with the touch of spring, the housewife gives the inner home in the dusty and delightful processes of house-cleaning. We are encouraged to enjoin the renewing and transforming use of the paint brush and the paint pot by the fact that we have the strictly confidential assurance of the assessment commissioner that the transforming improvement a new coat of paint will give your premises, will not be made an occasion of raising your assessment. You won't know till you have tried it, how immensely a new coat of paint will brighten your house and fences, in keeping with the surrounding glory of bud and flower breaking bounds, and transforming the smiling face of all nature. By doing this you will become a better citizen in contributing your share to the beautifying work of others. Not only a better citizen in the aesthetic and broadly altruistic way, but you will be a better neighbour, by gladdening the heart of the paint merchant with a generous order and lifting the shadow of winter idleness that has hung over the painter. But before you do this, call on the carpenter whose hand, though it, too, has grown soft by a winter's idleness, has not forgotten its cunning. Have him knock things together that need repairing. Then slap on the paint. In those ways you will not only have the satisfaction of having helped business and given employment, but the satisfaction of feeling that your house and premises, in their spring garb, will not be ashamed to look in the face the house of your neighbour across the street. Meantime, while all this is going on, get out your rake and clean up your grounds; make them spick and span and sanitary; roll your lawn while it is soft and will get the most benefit; pour some coal oil over your rusted lawn mower and in every way make things as ship-shape for a happy summer as you make things snug for a comfortable winter. If every citizen or nearly every citizen does a little of these things the look of the city, as a whole, will be improved a hundredfold.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS FIRE ESCAPES.

The Examiner's attention is called to what many consider a defective if not dangerous condition in connection with the equipment of our public schools with what are considered life saving appliances, known as "fire escapes." Inquiry shows that none of the school buildings are equipped with outside iron ladder-ways reaching from each floor to the ground:

From a popular point of view, such conditions are a natural cause for anxiety. But there need be no anxiety felt in regard to fire protection at the school buildings. While there are no outward and visible signs of fire escapes in the form of iron ladders, there are ample equivalents inside the buildings.

It is stated by Mr. Inspector Mowat, from whom inquiry was made, that there are no outside fire escapes, from the simple fact that the Board of Education taking advantage of the experience of the Toronto Board, had decided that it would not be wise to instal outside fire escapes. The Toronto board had found that these narrow outside fire escapes, in the winter became covered with snow and ice and were likely to be as dangerous, if not more so, to the life and safety of pupils using them, as a fire itself. It is claimed that two or three hundred children rushing to use these narrow ladders would be, some of them at least, meeting with disastrous accident. The Inspector further stated that in every public school in the city there are fire escapes in the form of wide stairways on both sides of the buildings, one for the boys' side and one for the girls' side. It had been proven by actual test that, by means of these stairways, any school building can be emptied of all school children in, between, 45 and 50 seconds. At the worst, in case of one stairway being blocked by fire the other could be used. It is not probable that before discovery of a fire both stairways would be made impassable.

The danger of an outbreak of fire and the protecting of the children, are respectively obviated and insured by the presence in the buildings at all times of either the teachers or the janitor. The latter leaves the building for luncheon between eleven and twelve —while the teachers are present— and returns in time to be in the buildings during the noon hour when the teachers are absent.

It will thus be seen that we have the assurance of the Inspector, that every reasonable precaution for insuring the safe exit of pupils in case of fire have been adopted in planning the buildings and that they are thus much better protected than by trusting alone to fire escapes, which could easily be a source of another form of danger. Outside fire escapes, while they would afford a safe means of escape for a limited number of persons, would obviously be not only inadequate, but a source of danger, especially if they were coated with ice, if required to suddenly accommodate a rush of two or three hundred school children. Inspector Mowat is a gentleman of good judgment, and as careful of the observance of his responsibility and of the protection of his reputation as he is solicitous for, and careful of, the protection of the children in all other ways, as well as in case of an outbreak of fire. If, as he says and shows, the fire escape facilities provided by wide stairways on each side of the buildings—reaching from the highest floors to the ground; and wide doors opening outward, are preferable to, and less dangerous than, narrow iron ladders clinging to the outer walls at dizzy heights, we have reason to be at ease regarding the efficiency and sufficiency of fire escape means in connection with our public school buildings.

Kut-El-Amara Case To Be Regarded As A Triumph of Strategy

There has been a lot of criticism of British strategy in connection with the force which is now besieged at Kut-el-Amara. It has been referred to as "sending a boy to do a man's work," and as an example of lack of foresight and preparation. Most people will be surprised to know that this expedition i same looked upon as a masterpiece of strategy. The Rev. Canon Parat, a noted Turkish authority, advances two reasons for the claim—firstly, the diversion by this expedition of a proposed attack upon Egypt; secondly, a diversion of Turkish forces which allowed the capture of Erserum, a triumph of the first magnitude.

In regard to the first point, the Canon says there is no doubt a magnificent assault upon Egypt and the Suez Canal was planned. Elaborate preparations were made, at enormous expense, and the new railway has been completed through Palestine to Beersheba and right across the Egyptian frontier. This is the one expedition that is of supreme importance to the Turks. Egypt was to be Turkey's reward for its aid to Germany, and the Turks were anxious for Germany to hurry up and help them to secure their coveted prize. January and February are the two best months of the year for an army to cross the desert that separates Egypt from Palestine, and the submarine activities in the Eastern Mediterranean, together with the outbreak of hostilities under Noury Bey on the Western frontier, looked like the prelude to a determined attack on Egypt and the Suez Canal. The opportunity has been lost, and the expedition which might at least have damaged the Canal and seriously interfered with our most important lines of communications, has been postponed sine die. "If our forces in Mesopotamia had been content to remain in the vicinity of Busrah the expedition to Egypt would most probably have been carried out; but the rapid advance up the Tigris that threatened Bagdad was too serious a menace to be ignored, so the troops prepared for Egypt were diverted through Aleppo to Bagdad, and the land of the Pharaohs may never see them no more."

As to the second point, Canon Parat has translated captured Turkish documents which prove that the Turks who ought to be resisting the Russians in the north were hurried down to Bagdad to check the advance of our "rash little army" towards the capital city of Mesopotamia. The Germans, he holds, were taken in splendidly, for they proudly pointed to the investment of Kut as a proof of the impossibility of the Allies being able to help each other, since the Russians could not save us from being surrounded. In point of fact, it turns out to be one of the clearest proofs we have had of the successful co-operation of the Allied armies, for whilst our enemies were attracted to Ctesiphon by the bait of a small British army, the Russians behind their backs were scaling the snow-clad mountains of Armenia, and sprang a surprise upon the depleted forces of the strongest stronghold of Asiatic Turkey. What the Germans think of this may be surmised from the fact that Moltke said long ago that whoever held Erzerum would control the whole of Mesopotamia. While we are all hoping for the relief of our forces in Kut-el-Amara, we have, it seems no need to be ashamed of the strategy which resulted in their being so long beleaguered. General Townsend and his battalions are true British heroes who have risked much, and have already won the day.—Montreal Herald.

Rev. Robert Pogue's Reply To Rev. Dr. Workman's Explanation

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have no desire to carry on a controversy in the public press with Dr. Workman on the subjects touched upon in his lecture and in his letter of recent date. The results of such controversy are always unsettling in the extreme to the faith of many. None should know this better than Dr. Workman. I wrote you the brief note which I did after the lecture simply that I might dissent from the views so eloquently advocated by the lecturer. I have since seen that the place to have registered my dissent was in the meeting itself, in Dr. Workman's presence. A false sense of what was due to Dr. Workman as our guest was partly responsible for my silence. A social gathering was not the place for heated controversy, and heated it might have been had I spoken at all. However, whatever lack of courtesy such action on my part might have revealed it would not have been any more discourteous than the action of an invited guest in attacking in the home of his host his most sacred beliefs, and in attempting to rob him of the comfort and strength which they give. It was certainly my impression when Dr. Workman was invited to address us that his subject was not to be of a controversial character. Dr. Jackson, a few years ago, was invited to address us on a similar occasion. He had the tact and the good taste ot speak on a subject far removed from the controversies which, at that time, were giving him a reputation that was anything but enviable. He spake on "The Great Preachers of Britain, Past and Present."

I am sorry that Dr. Workman did not make clear to us that the views which he expounded with such eloquence and fervour were not his own views. Certainly the majority of those present thought they were. When a man expounds the views of another, argues in their defence, and does not utter a word of criticism of them, surely it is the logical thing to conclude that the views which he is expounding are his own views. Dr. Workman cannot deny some things, however. I took fairly full notes of what he said. He cannot deny that he tried to show that belief of the historic fact of the physical resurrection of our Lord is not necessary to a Christian experience. He cannot deny that he argued that even if Jesus were not an historic character our religion would still be Christianity. Nor can he deny that instead of regarding the sacred Scriptures as the inspired word of God he said that the writers simply gave us the best beliefs they had about the matters of which they write.

Now it would be a very simple matter to point out the weakness of Dr. Workman's theology. That has been done again and again for the last thirty years by leading scholars in his own denomination, and he ought to be thoroughly convinced by this time that his teaching is regarded by the mass of Church members as both heterodox and dangerous. It would require much more space than you have to give to write a full reply to the matters touched upon in his lecture and letter. I shall refer to but one point. The main implication of his lecture was that certain historic facts, of a miraculous character, were not necessary to a Christian experience. I ask: Who is to be the judge of what constitutes a Christian experience? The critic himself? What if his experience is not the experience of historic Christianity? Is not the Christian experience itself a miraculous thing? Professor Workman will be acquainted with Wendland's "Miracles and Christianity" in which he urges with much earnestness and force that belief in miracles is indispensable to our apprehension of a real living God, and to our trust in His saving work in our own souls, and that the work of grace in the heart is all miraculous. Another scholar, Wace, says, "It is an extraordinary mistake to suppose that the evidence of our faith would not be damaged if the miraculous were set aside." It was because Dr. Workman made the extraordinary mistake of contending that our faith would not be damaged, if we set aside the fact of the resurrection of Christ, and that if "Jesus were not an historic character our religion would still be Christianity," that I feel constrained to write these few words dissenting from such teaching. If Dr. Workman says I have not rightly stated the views which he expounded then he can easily set the matter right with the public by giving you the manuscript of his lecture for publication in the columns of your paper. The public can then judge for themselves whether his critics were faithful reporters or not. As I have a distaste for public controversy, and as the work of a large pastorate demands all my time, I shall not trouble you again.

ROBT. POGUE.
Yours truly,

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefit.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weakness? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in ¼ glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmoa Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituents are such as would prove of material eye benefit and widely prescribed by them. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."

The Warren Drug Co., fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions and will gladly fill yours.

Have you a small kitchen?

And have you big meals to prepare, too?

Surely that is a double problem worth simplifying right away. You should see what an abundance of cooking you can do on our style E.S. range in a small corner of your kitchen.

McClary Gas Ranges

The main top has three regular, one giant and one simmering burner; and there are two long burners on the oven and the broiler. The broiling oven has also a large round burner. That means you can crowd on pots, kettles and pans to your heart's content. And you needn't worry about the gas. Every inch of gas turned on is earning every cent you pay for it, for McClary burners don't waste, and every bit of heat in the oven does work.

No matter how many stoves you may have seen, you should see McClary's Style E.S. before you decide. It combines all those features of convenience, capacity, compactness and good appearance you want for a small kitchen. Ask your nearest dealer to show you McClary's Style E.S. CREATORE'S FAMOUS BAND TO VISIT PETERBOROUGH

Date Has Been Changed From May 18th to May 19th—Proceeds for 93rd Battalion Fund

The treat of the season, as far as musical attractions are concerned, will be Creatore and his band of fifty musicians, which will appear here under the auspices of the 93rd Battalion in the Armouries on May 19th.

Sig. Creatore, as usual, has been holding large audiences under his wonderful spell en route to Peterborough. From the reports received at times his audiences are all but moved to tears, roused by the tender sympathetic strains, while at other times they seem ready to stand on their feet and shout to relieve the pent-up something produced by the thrills from the wonderful crescendos which peal forth from his band.

During one of the band's long sojourns in New York the "Herald" gave the following as part of a very lengthy notice: "Seldom has such enthusiasm been seen in a New York theatre. After the sextette from 'Lucia,' the applause was deafening, and the people climbed upon their chairs to cheer. The 'Tannhauser' overture, and several other numbers evoked equally exuberant signs of approval."

This concert is given in Peterborough in aid of the 93rd Battalion Fund, and it is expected the Armouries will be crowded on this occasion.

ENCOURAGE PHENOMENAL HOME TALENT

Those who on Monday attend the piano recital of little Miss Agnes Logan, the phenomenally gifted and surprisingly proficent pianiste, will be doing a double good — delighting themselves with the enjoyment of a display of most remarkable musical talent and executive ability; and doing something much greater, encouraging the beginnings of a musical career that will, fortune favouring, be the pride of Peterborough. We had one splendid musical girl pianist and artist of whom we were very proud; but disease has laid her aside and now we have another rising to take her place. Encourage home talent such as is so finely expressed in Agnes Logan's wonderful work. Applaud her and praise her. There is no danger of spoiling her, if she has real genius; for genius does not live upon and work for praise, but for achievement.

Washington Pastor Says He Has No Recollection of Dying.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—In a recent issue the Matchet, student publication of the George Washington University, announced that Rev. Dr. Leech, 70, a graduate of George Washington, had died at his home here. Dr. Leech has written the following note to the editors of the Hatchet.

"In a recent issue you announce my death. I celebrated my seventy-ninth birthday on March 17, but to be perfectly frank with you, I have absolutely no recollection of dying on that date. I appreciate the kind obituary notice, but trust that you will never have the opportunity to reprint it. Please be kind enough to say, at any rate, through your columns, that it is alleged that I am still living."

Of Lord Kitchener it has been revealed that he is drawing two salaries while serving as War Minister. The government in reply to an interpellation in the House of Commons recently admitted that Lord Kitchener was receiving $30,000 a year as British agent and Consul General in Egypt, on leave of absence, and that he accepted the portfolio of the War Office with the understanding that his salary for the Egyptian office would also be continued as long as he remained in the cabinet.

In addition to the $30,000 Lord Kitchener is receiving $25,000 a year as Secretary of State for War, besides a free residence at York House.

"How," asks his critics, "are you to preach to the public the need for economy, when ministers, however illustrious, at the head of the government are "scooping in" the coin from the country at a rate which is almost indecent." It is urged that these are purely personal matters, that men in high place are expected to set examples to the lowly, and yet it is declared that there is no sacrifice which the highly placed in the government have made to bring home to ordinary less fortunate the need of economy. Such sacrifices they declare to be essential and that it cannot be evaded.

Decreasing Authority.

A further proposal that seeks to decrease the authority of the War Secretary is that a separate Department of Supplies and transport be created with an army officer at its head. This follows the resignation of the director of supplies and transport, Major General Long, who is the officer proposed for head of the independent department. Munitions already have been taken from the control of the War Office so far as manufacturing is concerned and entrusted to a separate department under Mr Lloyd George, as a result of the complaints that followed the battles of the early part of the war and the failure of the War Secretary to respond to the call from the trenches for more high explosives instead of shrapnel. To strip the Department further would no doubt greatly decrease the prestige and influence of Lord Kitchener, which is the object sought by his critics.

Further Troubles.

To further add to the troubles of the cabinet the electors in recent bye-elections have been again reminded that the Premier and Foreign Minister were members of the ministry that held office before the war which persistently ignored the warnings of the late Earl Roberts, urging preparedness to meet the tremendous increase in Germany's military armaments aimed at England. Opposition speakers declared that as members of the before the war Cabinet, Mr Asquith and Sir Edward Grey should be held responsible for having incurred commitments to France as allies and then having made no adequate preparations to meet these new responsibilities. Yet the correspondence with Belgium, the critics declare, shows that the British government for several years before the beginning of the present struggle had secret knowledge of the designs of Germany, yet took no steps to make ready for "The Day," which was before them.

To the electors is being propounded the question whether it is the part of wisdom and prudence to entrust the conduct of the war to men, who are charged with responsibility for the unprepared condition in which the nation entered it. An echo of this sentiment comes from the Antipodes in the recent speech of the Australian Premier while here. "Think of the holocaust of lives," he said "the fearful sufferings, and then think that had Britain taken heed of Lord Roberts' warning voice, had we been as well prepared on land as on sea, the peace of the world would in all probability have been unbroken."

Butter and Eggs Were Cheaper on the Market

Supply Was More Plentiful and Early Quotations Eased Off—Maple Syrup Seemed Plentiful

Market Prices To-day.

Maple syrup per qt.—40c. and 45c.
Eggs, per doz.—30c.
Butter per lb.—30c. to 33c.
Potatoes per bag—$2.

Butter and eggs slumped in price this morning as the result of supplies that were more than ample for the demand. Butter opened at 33c. but by eleven o'clock had sold off to 30 cents and there was a considerable quantity remaining. Eggs were plentiful at 30 cents. Poultry was scarce and sold at 75c. to $1.00 per hen or chicken as the case might be.

Out on the market potatoes were quoted at $2.00. Most of the farmers were offering them, but there was no activity. With some local dealers offering them for $1.80, it is unlikely that the farmers can expect to get much business at the two dollar mark. Maple syrup was fairly plentiful, selling at 40 and 45 cents a quart. Young pigs were $11 a pair. A few years ago you could buy all you wanted of them at $6 a pair.

PALM SUNDAY

To-morrow is Palm Sunday, and here is the history of its genesis and a hint of its significance.

On the next day much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, took branches of Palm trees and went forth to meet Him and cried, "Hosanna: Blessed is the king of Israel, that cometh in the name of the Lord."

Here we have the triumphant forecast of the victory achieved six days days after on Golatha's shameful hill, and the rejoicing over the coming of Jesus to Jerusalem, was a type of the rejoicing when "the King of Israel" comes into the lives of men.

When using a gas or electric iron get a ten-cent bird cage spring. Hang it either on light fixture or on the wall near your iron, so it comes above the ironing board; loop cord through hook. The spring gives when you iron, also saves wear and tear on cord.

"A PAIR OF SIXES"

"A Pair of Sixes," the farce which New York critics declared to be the funniest play ever seen on the New York stage and which ran for an entire year at the Longacre Theatre, New York, will be presented at "The Grand" for matinee and evening performance on Good Friday, April 21, by a company of well known actors, each of whom has appeared at one time or another in the New York production. It is in three acts. The author is Edward Pepple, who has already won a high place among American dramatists by his other great successes, "The Prince Chap" and "The Littlest Rebel." He has written an amusing story and developed it through three acts of the most amazing comic situations and in a spirit of humor that never lags.

The plot deals with two partners, who disagree as to the relative importance in the conduct of a prosperous patent medicine business, and they decide, after much squabbling and irritation, to sever their business interests. But their partnership agreement does not provide for any method by which they can end their relations. Their lawyer is called in, but they decline his various business ideas and he finally suggests the inexpensive method of playing a show-down poker hand to see which of the partners will have control of the business, as well as the direction of the other partner's affairs. A pair of sixes wins and the winner obtains the services of his partner as a butler in his household for one year, under an iron-clad agreement by which not a word of explaantion shall be made nor an order violated, without the payment of so many fines that the loser would be bankrupt. After the butler is installed in his menial duties, he is almost driven fratuic by a homely old cook-

He cannot explain for fear of the fines which would sacrifice his interest in the business, and the wife of the winner sympathizes so openly with the unlucky partner that her husband becomes jealous. This amusing condition of affairs develops the most hilarious fun and twisted situations, which are finally straightened out through the cleverness of the loser's sweetheart, who ultimatey plays the winning hand

Peterborough Lumber Co. Opens With Staff of 90 on Monday

Large Supply of Logs on Hand in the Little Lake and a Drive in the Water Above Lakefield—Early Indications of An Active Summer—The Company's Mill on Burnham's Point Received Repairs During the Winter and is in Good Condition.

The Peterborough Lumber Company's mill at Burnham's Point recommences operations on Monday morning, April 17, with every expectation of a very busy season. The Company has quite a large number of logs in Little Lake, and also a drive that is now in the water above Lakefield, and which is due in Peterborough within the next month. These logs are composed of mixed material and are of good size and dimensions. Not only is there the local business, but the Company is experiencing a brisk demand for building material from outside points, and look forward to a very active summer. The mill has been undergoing repairs during the winter and is now in splendid condition for the manufacture of the season's lumber supply. The Peterborough Lumber Company will begin work with ninety men engaged in the mill, and will thereby contribute not a little share to the city's business and prosperity this year in the employment of that number of men, which, as the season develops, will likely be increased to one hundred.

Aeroplane Raids Almost Daily Feature

With a Zeppelin Raid as a Monthly Event Writes Lieut. E. V. Frederick of Peterboro in An Interesting Letter From Salonika

A member of the Examiner staff has received the following interesting letter from Lieut. E. V. Frederick, the Peterborough physician who is now at Salonika:

Salonika, March 20, '16.

There are a thousand and one friends to whom I wish to write, but time and circumstances do not permit.

Judging from the amount of space devoted by the papers we get to Salonika it is of great interest to the public. We have now been in four corners of the great war, France, the Dardanelles, Egypt and the Balkans. I heard a very nice compliment to our hospital a few days ago. On mentioning to an officer there that we are attached to No. 1 Canadian Stationary Hospital, he replied that he had heard us mentioned as the crack hospital of the British army.

We are comfortably situated on a platform between the hill, surrounding the city and about two miles from it.

It is a wonderfully interesting place and is called the Coveted City because from its earliest history every strong power has desired it.

Imagine the river as Salonika bay, with Armour's hill much prolonged, the whole face crowded by eastern type of houses and surrounded by an ancient stone wall, the top of the hill crowned by an ancient fortress. While scattered throughout the city rise about 40 tall snow white minerals of Turkish mosques and you will have a general idea of the city.

The streets are narrow, only wide enough for two waggons to pass, with narrow sidewalks. Imagine these crowded to an almost impassable degree by a truly Babylonic mass of humanity, Spanish Jews, Bulgarians, Turks, Greeks, civilians and soldiers in a mostly number of types of costumes, French soldiers of all types, Zouaves, Senegalese, Alpinos, Entrassiers, British in all types, Hindus, Gurkhas, Highlanders and ordinary, and Serbians, in new, smart uniforms, women in green silk with their hair in a green silk bag three inches wide and two feet long, with a fringe on the end, others in Turkish pantaloons tied tightly about the ankle, long turned up shoes with a big tassel on the toes, suffragette lady doctors and nurses in long leather or rubber boots, Stetson hats and a mannish attire between, striding along, other Turkish women in dark crown cloaks and thick black veils, and contrasted with all, smart British nurses in grey and red, or smarter still Canadian nurses in Alice blue, and you will have an idea of the crowds.

Through these crowds motor cars and lorries, horses, mules and ox transports work their way. Outside the city it is equally interesting. A short time ago only mud roads and cattle trails existed in which all transports were in trouble. Now in every direction wide macadamized roads are built or building. On these are two endless processions, one going out, the other is composed of army transports, waggons with two to sixteen horses or mules. Hindu pack mule trains, artillery trains, while dodging along in the centre the big motor lorries, or ambulances go tearing along, raising clouds of dust which almost obliterates all the rest from sight. Plodding along obstructing all go Turkish buffalo teams drawing farm produce, hides or Greek army supplies. These oxen are huge and different from ours, having long horns sloping back over their neck and long, thin, thoughtful faces. Keeping safely to the side of the road or ditches other natives with little jackasses carrying big loads and baskets on each side, while the owner sits serenly between, add interest to the scene.

Along the road near our hospital are large numbers of brick, one-storey buildings occupied by Serbian refugees. All the men are busy helping build new roads toward home. They seem happy. As in every other part of the campaign one meets a good share of Peterborough people here. They include Capt. B. Boucher, Lieut. A. G. Howson of Edinburgh street, Nursing Sisters Doig and Blewett. According to my contract with the Royal Army Medical Corps, my time when I may return home will be up before you receive this. But while there is the urgent call for medical men I do not feel that I can leave here.

We have eight wards in our hospital of sixty beds each. Six of them are medical and two surgical. Of these Capt. Vipond is in charge of one and I am in charge of the other. Naturally one's field of usefulness is wide and interesting.

At present there is no fighting here except what goes on in the air. Aeroplane raids are a daily affair, with a Zeppelin visit a monthly event. Suddenly one hears the boom of anti-aircraft guns and looking up into the sky one sees a cloud like like a huge sheet of absorbent cotton appear like magic and then another and another, and straining one's eyes in that direction what looks like a small white bird is discerned. Then the interesting duel and flight begins and after one got safe away yesterday, I counted one hundred new white clouds in a row.

Two nights ago we were awakened by the bursting bollbs frne an Zeppelin which was about six miles away. Searchlights and aeroplanes which went up immediately, drove it home.

The weather here is beautiful. Fruit trees are all in bloom and the hills are covered with wild flowers, hyacinths, anemones, Jorgel-menots and crocus.

The army is in the highest spirits and awaits with impatience the hour when the enemy visits us or we visit him.

Kindest regards to all inquiring friends.

Yours sincerely,
Ernest Frederick,
No. 1 Canadian Stationary Hospital,
Salonika Army.

MANY FARMERS WERE IN THE CITY TO-DAY

Our country cousins were with us to-day in large numbers. Apparently they had been waiting for just the congenial mixture of sun and wind, had set an ambuscade in its path, and then as soon as it appeared, had all tumuled upon it. Thus it seemed that nearly everyone was in the city this morning, at any rate the adjoining townships were well represented.

CANADIANS FOUGHT COOLY AS VETERANS

Official Eye-Witness Report Says They Behaved Magnificently Throughout in the Mine Crater Fighting at St. Eloi

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 15.—Official eye witness in report to-day on recent actions in which Canadians were concerned at St. Eloi, says Canadians behaved magnificently throughout. They fought with the coolness of veterans in mud and rocks that surrounded the mine craters. Such trenches as existed were knee deep in water. The Sixth Canadian Infantry Brigade, being composed of Western battalions, and especially the 27th Winnipeg and the 31st Alberta battalions, distinguished themselves.

British Attacks Were Repulsed Say Berlin Official Report

Suffered From Nerves

Could Not Sleep

To the thousands of people who are tossing on sleepless beds night after night, or who pace the floor with nerves unhinged, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber.

They restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres, thereby producing peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep, and will cause you to get up in the morning feeling that you have the strength and vitality to go through your day's work.

Mrs. Hollas Knox, St. John, N.B., writes: "I suffered greatly with my nerves, I could not sleep at night, nor work, and the least little thing worked on my mind and bothered me. Last winter I thought I would go out of my mind, I would screech out, and my mother really thought I was going crazy with my nerves. It was so terrible I would hold my head and cry. I tried two doctors, but they did not do me any good. I thought I would tell you that to-day I am perfectly cured by using three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I can recommend them to all sufferers from nervous troubles. You can tell everyone that they are the only thing that did me any good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for nearly a quarter of a century, and are universally known as the best remedy for all heart and nerve troubles.

An Expert Communication Upon Adequate Plumbing Inspection

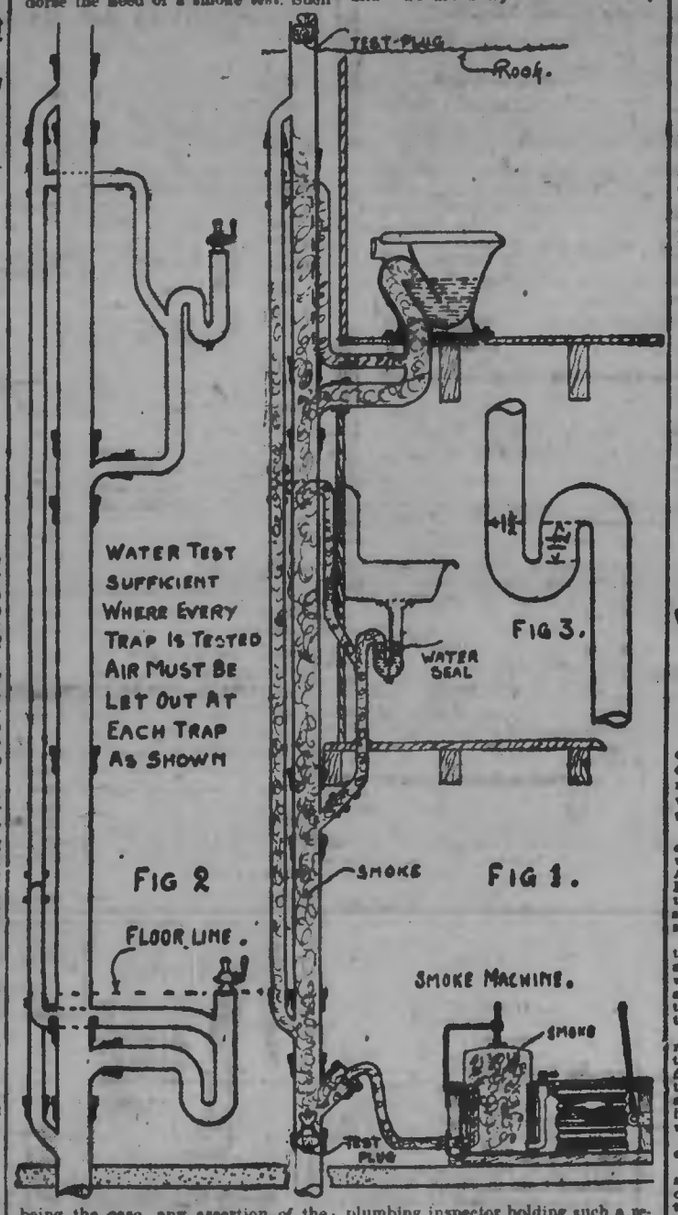
The "Smoke Test" Explained and Insisted Upon as a sine qua non of Proper Plumbing Inspection

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—While on a visit to Peterborough some time ago I called upon several members of the sanitary engineering and heating trade and heard some very strange stories regarding the way plumbing is being inspected. And, if half the reports given to me are true, the citizens of Peterborough are living in a fool's paradise.

To ascertain whether these rumours were true I called upon several citizens not interested in the plumbing business. I procured for them a copy of the plumbing by-law now in force in your city, and I found that the by-law is not in all cases being carried out or enforced by your plumbing inspector. Now, what can this mean to the citizens of Peterborough? Simply this, that while some members of the trade live up to the by-law, others do not. I found, too, that quite a quantity of light weight lead waste pipe, traps and bends are being used in your city, which certainly does not reflect any credit upon your plumbing inspection; and that seldom, if ever, a smoke test is applied to finished installations.

This is not only deplorable and dangerous to the health of the citizens of Peterborough, but it is not in accordance with the plumbing by-law of your city. I was also informed that your plumbing inspector does not endorse the need of a smoke test. Such being the case, any assertion of the kind from an inspector only proves his failure to appreciate the importance of the responsible position he is holding. I was also informed that he does not enforce the smoke test on finished work. If this is so, he is not enforcing the by-law. Further, no by-law or section of a by-law can be overridden while such a by-law or section of a by-law is in force.



Smoke Test Explained.

Next, for your information I might explain a little about this smoke testing of plumbing. This question of smoke testing has always been a very contentious matter amongst two classes of craftsmen— those, in the first place, who do not know anything about the trade, and those who don't want to know anything about it except as a means of making money. Both classes are dangerous, and will never make a real success of the business. One of these classes argue as a matter of fact very little smoke testing is done, simply because the smoke is not made to travel through every terminal, thus ensuring that the whole area of pipes under test is filled with smoke. Thus they claim that the test is not a "smoke test" test. To a certain extent this argument is true, but here is where these men err in their condemnation of the smoke test, and the reason too, why they err. These men think that the smoke test is simply to find out leaks in the piping of a system, and they argue that the water test has already sufficiently tested this part, and that the only joints to test them are those made at the floors or the walls wherever the traps have been fitted. Such, however, is not the case. The smoke test is necessary after every fixture has been fitted up, and all the traps or w.c. seals have been filled with water, as well as the joints properly made at the time the water test is put on. Last year in different parts of Canada reports came in to us that certain w.c. bowls were being found that were defective. In one case fourteen w.c.'s were proved defective as a direct result of the smoke test, and many times a poor workman has been known to "pull" the bath trap to such an extent as to damage the seal, and in most cases this trap is under the floor out of sight. Now as regards the smoke test not "being a real smoke test." Such is often the case, but let us not lose sight of the principles of the test, which are clearly illustrated in the accompanying drawing. Fig 1.

If a system is under test and there are no defects, which is proved by the bell at the testing machine remaining stationary, there would be no apparent evidence what kind of test the fixtures were being subjected to. But suppose there were some defects, the smoke would penetrate through the defect, and would be detected easily, because not only of odour, but also the presence of the smoke would be seen. This test, whether it be air or smoke, is necessary without a doubt, and we are sorry to hear of any plumbing inspector holding such a responsible position yet not knowing why a smoke test is essential.

When Smoke Test Can Be Dispensed With.

There are, however, certain cases when a smoke test is not necessary (see Fig 2). This is part of a sanitary installation where only lavatories and urinals are fitted up. The piping and traps are all installed, each trap is capped, and a small air vent placed on each trap to let the air out and fill the traps and all piping with water. It will be seen that no joints have to be made on the sewer side of the traps, and a water test would be a much more severe test. In such a case, however, all the traps would have to be examined and the seal proved by measurement, and it might be well to state here that up to 3 inch traps all traps should have a seal the same depth as its diameter. Fig 3 shows the true definition of a seal.

In conclusion, "The Sanitary Engineer" fully endorses what is popularly known as the smoke test. Such test to be made after all fixtures are installed; and before the fixtures have been fitted to any soil, drain or vent, pipe, such piping must have been subjected to either a water test or an air pressure test of not less than 10 pounds. A smoke test, however, would not, in our opinion, be sufficiently rigid if that were the only test to be made.

Yours very truly,
Edwin Newsome,
Editor The Sanitary Engineer.

A definite announcement will be made in the course of a day or two.

See "Higher Up" Men In the Bomb Plots

Dr. W. T. Sheele's Bank Accounts Furnish Clues—Disappeared Apr. 1

NEW YORK, April 15.—Clues which will lead to the identity of the men "higher up" who furnished the money for the alleged conspiracy to manufacture and distribute bombs to destroy munitions ships, for which eight men are under arrest, are expected by the Federal authorities to be revealed through the examination of the bank accounts of Dr. Walter T. Scheele, who is now being sought. A National Bank examiner will come here from Washington, tomorrow, Assistant United States District Attorney Roger B. Wood said to-night, to investigate six accounts carried by Dr. Scheele in Hoboken N.J.

If anybody handled the big sums it was Scheele, and we hope to be able to find where he got them," Mr. Wood said. Scheele was the head of the New Jersey Agriculture and Chemical Company at Hoboken where it is alleged the explosive materials were placed in the bombs after they had been constructed aboard the North German Lloyd liner Friedrich der Grosse, interned at Hoboken. He disappeared from his apartment here on April 1. The authorities also were interested in locating his Secretary, Miss Ruth Foss, whom they wish to examine.

Five Fake Confessions.

Five of the eight men under arrest have made confessions. Mr. Wood said. Captain Otto Wolpert, Superintendent of the Atlas piers of the Hamburg-American Line, accused of receiving the completed bombs; Captain Enno Bode, Superintendent of the Hamburg-Ameridan Line piers at Hoboken, both of whom were arrested Wednesday, and Carl Schmidt, chief engineer of the interned German liner Friedrich der Grosse, arrested yesterday, have refused to make any statements to the Federal authorities.

"The silence of these three men," Mr. Wood said, "indicates they are probably the most important prisoners of the eight we have arrested."

Voice of, The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Having noticed the comment in your Wednesday's issue of one who signed himself "A witness of the Act" in regards to a little affair which happened at the Lift Lock on Sunday afternoon, I wish to draw his attention to some very big mistakes and untrue statements he made regarding the same.

The act was done accidentally and when they saw what it meant they treated it as a joke although this may have been wrong, but two wrongs never make a right and the boys who did are not made of the kind of stuff Mr. Witness would like to make the public believe.

He says that the prisoners were left to risk their lives crossing the ice; well then there was a crowd of civilians and soldiers standing around enjoying the joke there could not have been much danger, and the criminals lingered in the vicinity until they were sure the caretaker was located.

As for not seeing heels for dust, I would advise him to consult his optic doctor at once for he is seeing things, it just took the guilty parties twenty minutes to climb to the brow of that hill, some dust alright.

This witness would paint these Bandsmen blacker than they are by telling a few lies about them, if they did do wrong its no reason why he should make it worse.

As for being afraid of Germans I would say he is in a trance, these boys enlisted to fight Germans, not to run from them and if he wants to see proof of this statement let him bet a "quatsee" to some of our little transactions in France and he will have a chance to judge.

We may be guilty of practical jokes but we are willing to take our chance at fighting the Hun.

Thanking you for your valuable space,
I remain,
"One Afraid of Germans"

TREATMENT FOR TUBERCULOSIS

JOHN A. THIBTYACRE.

TESTIMONIAL.

I confinved a large tent in April, 1910, and it lodged in my lung. This developed into tuberculosis. Four doctors treated me but I gradually became worse. Then my sister learned of Nature's Creation and got the medicine for me. When I began taking Nature's Creation, I was having night sweats continually, pains in my chest and both lungs. Several physicians said I could not live over 30 days. After taking the first bottle of Nature's Creation, a wonderful improvement was noticeable and I continue to improve. Weighed 107 pounds; now 138, and never have had any return of the old trouble.

An Extravagant Doctor Or a Wise One?
Ambitious Dr. Lydgate of "Middlemarch" may have been extravagant with his 3 horses, and servants and plate, and Policy of Life Insurance Most people now-a-days, however, would at least have called the Life Insurance Policy a necessity. The horses were sold, the servants dismissed, and the plate taken by the bailiff. The Life Insurance Policy alone stood at the last between Rosamond and penury. RAIDER WAS THE "PEN WING"

Captured American Sailor Says Periscoped Mines Were Distributed.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The German raider, which returned recently to Wilhelmshaven, after sinking a number of allied ships and capturing the Appam was not the Moewe, but the Pen Wing, according to John Brennan, an American sailor who was a prisoner aboard the raider.

Abaft the forecastle head the Pen Wing mounted two six-inch guns, he said. "I had never seen nor heard of guns like these two. They could be collapsed, telescope-like."

He was a sailor on the Saxon Prince, which was sunk while bound for Africa. Telling of the loss of the British ship he says:

"We were only 700 miles west of Ireland. Those Germans were about as much worried as if their little raider was the only ship in the world that mounted guns. They talked about returning to Wilhelmshaven with the air of men who didn't know there was a British fleet."

Telling of the cruise he said: "With her guns hidden, her tanks filled so she lay low in the water like a heavily cargoed ship, she ran north-east until she sighted the Lizards, where she was in plain view of England.

They jacked half a dozen periscoped mines out of the hold and placed them overboard. All of the mine that we could see after they planted her in the water was the fake periscope. On the face of things there was nothing to indicate it was anything but a submarine. They told me they had planted a dozen or so around Ireland.

"The Pen Wing returned to Wilhelmshaven within two and a half months after she left. They told me she left Wilhelmshaven, where she was fitted up as a raider, without any apparent effort to avoid the British fleet.

"Whether she returned north of Iceland or got in between Iceland and he Shetlands, God knows. Afterward I asked them how they did it. They grinned and replied:

"My friend, we ran past them while they were having tea."

RUINOUS TO INDUSTRY.

To Compel Enlistment of All Single Men Before the Married Ones.

LONDON, April 15.—Lord Derby, director of recruiting, presided yesterday at a meeting of the Association of Municipal Corporations.

Replying to a demand that all single men be enlisted before the married men are called up, he said he did not believe anything could be more foolish. To do so, he added, would have caused much trouble and would have brought his task to a speedier end, but such a step would have been absolutely ruinous to the industries of the country.

STOLE KISS; GETS YEAR

Man Thinks Girl's Beauty and Highball Caused Fall.

Just because he hugged and kissed pretty Miss Anna Pragnor, a domestic, Frank Lozaro, of Passaic, N.J. went to jail for one year. He was sentenced by Judge Thomas P. Costello.

Miss Pragnor went for a stroll at 10 o'clock in the evening on Pennington Avenue. Lozaro approached and, after calling her "lovey," threw his arms about her neck, and hugged and kissed her. A police man heard her cries and caught the kisser.

"I did it," Lozaro said, "but she was so pretty and besides, I had just taken a highball. Maybe that had something to do with it."

"A year in jail, or $175," said Judge Costello, when Lozaro was arraigned before him.

Lozaro went to jail. None of his friends offered to pay his fine.

TWO GIRLS DROWN IN MIMICO CREEK

Sisters Aged 8 and 6 Years—One Tried to Save the Other

ISLINGTON, April 14. — Two young girls, Matty and Louie Kyle, six and eight years respectively, were drowned in the Mimico Creek here this afternoon. Little Mary Appleby, a playmate, also fell into the creek, but was fortunately able to clutch a clump of grass and pull herself to safety.

Pathetic circumstances surround the tragedy which has cast a shadow over the whole village. Mrs. William Kyle, the mother, was just recovering from the effects of a serious operation, but is now prostrated with grief.

According to Mary Appleby, who was the only spectator to the occurrence, Louie Kyle, the elder girl, went to her death heroically endeavouring to save her younger sister from an untimely end. Matty Kyle and Mary Appleby were standing holding hands on the edge of the bank near the latter's home when they stumbled into the water.

EDWARD FOLEY.

The death of Edward Foley, a former resident of this county, occurred at the family residence, 52 Lorimer street, Rochester, N.Y., on the evening of Friday, the 7th inst.

Mr. Foley was born in Limerick County, Ireland, on July 12, 1844, and came to Canada with his parents in 1858, settling in the vicinity of Lakefield, where he resided until he removed to Rochester, with his family, six years ago. He took an active interest in municipal affairs, being a member of the Township Council of Douro, for nearly twenty years, and on different occasions represented his township in the County Council as Deputy-reeve.

In 1876 he was married to Miss Mary Anne Moher, who passed away three years ago. He is survived by five sons, John F., of this city, and William J., Thomas E., Michael H., and Leo, of Rochester; five daughters, Mrs. J. J. SIGNALLER F. E. WISE
A Peterborough Boy With the 19th Battalion, who is reported slightly wounded, and invalided to England. He is a son of Mr. Frank Wise, and left here with the 39th Battalion.

Station at 11.30, where they welcomed back to town a former member of the 45th Regiment in the person of Corp. H. M. Godard.

Corp. Godard, who by the way is a native of Toronto, left home without the consent of his parents when he came to Lindsay and enlisted in the 45th Regiment. On May 8th he was one of the lucky soldiers to be drafted for a trip across to England with the 24th Battalion, and Lindsay citizens will remember the hearty send-off given these stalwart young men at the Grand Trunk Station. Among the members of this draft was Pte. Howard Coneybeare. While in Lindsay Pte. Godard had lodgings at the home of Mrs. Ralph Crum.

Mrs. J. A. Sharpe, 537 Homewood avenue, has received the following from Pte. Bruce R. Blanchard of the 21st Battalion:

Dear Friend,—Received the parcel which you were so kind to send about a week ago, for which I was very glad to receive. I think it was intended for Christmas but a little late in arriving, but better for it, as I received such a lot at Christmas.

I would have answered sooner but have been quite busy as we have had a lot of work to do lately. We have been in the trenches six months today and it only seems like yesterday when we landed in France. The weather is beautiful this week and quite a change from the last six months. I think I never saw so much rain as we had out here and the mud and water was something to remember in days to come.

We come into the trenches here for 18 days and then back to billets for six days' rest. They call it rest, but I would not like to recommend it to anyone who does not like work. I would far sooner stay in the trenches all the time than go out there. One good thing, we get a bath. All the boys are fine now that the good weather has come, but it may snow next week as it did last. Little Scotty Rogers was shot the other night, and we all felt sorry to lose him. He was one of the best boys out here, all full of fun. He is the first Peterborough boy to be killed in the 21st, so we have not done too bad. There was a little scrap on here last night, but it did not amount to much. A lot of bombs were thrown, machine guns were going and the artillery was firing some big stuff. It ended up in a lot of cheering and yelling, so I guess we won what little there was.

Thanking you once more for the parcel. Hoping you are enjoying the best of health, as it leaves me at present.

Yours truly,
Bruce R. Blanchard.

OTTAWA, April 14.—National registration with a view to some form of conscription was urged upon Sir Robert Borden and members of his Cabinet by a large delegation representing Ontario, the Maritime Provinces, and the West, at a gathering in the Premier's Office at noon to-day.

It was urged in support of the substitution of the compulsory for the present voluntary system that, first, the latter was not getting the men; and, secondly, that those who were coming forward were precisely those citizens whom Canada could least spare. There was too large a proportion of married men when it was considered that every married soldier cost the country $37 more per month than a single man.

The reply of Sir Robert Borden did not, of course, commit the Government to any expression of views as to the merits of compulsion or the voluntary system. The Premier, however, reminded the delegation that there had so far been no lack of recruits since men were coming forward at the rate of 1,000 a day. He also pointed out that even when men had been enlisted from six months to a years' training was necessary to fit them for service.

However, the Premier admitted that there were loopholes for economic waste in the system of voluntary enlistment. In an informal way, however, the Government had been coping with this, and had been endeavouring to arrange that men be drawn as far as possible from the industries which could afford to spare, and as little as possible from those that were essential.

The Premier also told the deelgation that it would be the future policy of the Militia Department to organize few units until the present ones had all been brought up to strength. As for conscription itself, he could not commit himself before conferring with his Ministers, but promised earnest consideration of the delegation's representation.

Private Charlie Stenson has received his final discharge from the army and returned this morning from the convalescent home in Kingston. He is once more an ordinary civilian, with this difference, that he has done his bit and released from further military work by the medical examining board at Kingston.

Gunner Mordie McGill, formerly of the 4th Battery, C.F.A., who was invalided home some months ago, will shortly leave for the front again. He re-enlisted with the 52nd Battery and is transferring to the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, leaving with a draft in the near future. It is understood that three other Peterborough boys are going with this draft.

Mr. K. Denne has received a letter from Mr. Richard Reid, representative of the Ontario Government in London, stating that Lance-Corporal Charlie Darnall, who was wounded with a gunshot wound in the right shoulder, is resting well and on the way to recovery. He is in the military Annex Hospital, Norwich, and was visited on March 24th, by Mr. J. M. Clark of the Ontario Government Office. Lance-Corporal Darnall was engaged with Mr Denne four years previous to enlisting.

Mr. Frank Wise, Superintendent of the Little Lake Cemetery, received a cablegram to-day to the effect that his son, Signaller Francis E. Wise of the 19th Battalion, had been slightly wounded and was lying in

Mr. Robt. Jones, 238 1-2 Simcoe Street, has received the following note from Capt. Geo. O. Fallis, Brigade Chaplain, 2nd Battalion, C. M. R.:

Dear Mr. Jones—You will see soon or before now that your son, Pte. Jack Jones, is a casualty. This is a hurried note to tell you not to worry as he is quite strong. His escape is really miraculous, as the bullet entered, apparently, just to the right side of the heart and ran around the body and out behind, making a clean flesh wound only. He left our advanced aid post very fine in spirit, and the doctor says he will be all right in a month or six weeks. I came out with him in the ambulance and seven miles back of where he was wounded. He was never more cheerful. This note is just to say "Don't worry, but be very thankful."

The Elementary Graded Union of Sunday School teachers will hold its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening, April 18th, in the Charlotte Street Methodist Sunday School. The members are reminded that the meeting commences at 8 o'clock. All are invited to be present.

Two hundred pounds of honey stored by bees between the ceiling of the first storey and floor of the second was taken from the home of Mrs. Catherine Houk, in Carey, Ohio. The bees found a small opening in the brick wall and made the space their winter home for many years. The honey they had stored up filled a space the depth of the rafters and sixteen inches wide by six feet long. It was of the finest quality. Neighbors feasted.

"JUDGE, I'VE HAD ENOUGH."

Frank E. Sage, of Kansas City, was granted a divorce. Sage is about 75 years old. He testified that he had married his third wife after an acquaintance of fifteen days. She said she was a good cook and housekeeper, and he was a very lonesome old man, he said.

"I don't know whether to give you a divorce or not," the Judge told Sage. "Here you are, an old man, supposedly experienced. Are you sure you won't rush off and get married again if I give you a divorce?"

"Judge, 've had enough," he said, "I'll never marry again."

FEW FOLK HAVE GREY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its colour and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart colour and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Decisive Steps By Allies Have Forced a New Crisis In Situation at Athens

With a Possibility That Greece May Find Herself Thrust Into the War Against Her Will---Transporting Serbian Troops

LONDON, April 17.—Decisive steps by the Allies have forced a new crisis at Athens, with a possibility that Greece may find herself thrust into the war against her will.

Over-riding the objections of the Greek Government, the Allies have begun transporting Serbian troops overland by rail from Corfu to Salonika.

The Austrian and German Governments, according to Athens despatches to-day, protested several days ago that they would regard it as a deliberately unfriendly act if the Greeks permitted this troop movement.

French correspondents at Athens reported to-day that King Constantine is incensed at the action of the Allies and may attempt to stop transportation of Serbian troops by a show of arms.

AUSTRIAN AND GERMAN MINISTERS DISCUSS POLAND

BERLIN, via London, April 17. — The Polish questions are understood to be chiefly responsible for the visit of Baron Burian Von Rahjecs, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, who arrived in Berlin to-day for a conference with Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg, although a discussion of the general situation is naturally involved. Although Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg was able to announce last August that the central powers did not propose to return Polish territory to Russian domination and amplified this declaration in his latest speech to cover the occupied lands between the Volhynian swamps and the Baltic, inhabited by Poles, Lithuanians and Letts, no decision regarding the ultimate disposition of these territories appears to have been reached.

Austro-German politicians appear to be agreed only in the decision that the Russians must be pushed back far from the present frontiers, without determining whether to provide for the autonomy or the annexation of adiyasin or combination of these non-Russian nationalities. The problem of arranging a food supply for the civilian population of occupied territories is also pressing for solution.

The Balkan problem probably will be one of the minor subjects in the discussion.

ENGLAND IN COPPER DEAL.

Is Exercising Options for 100,000 Tons of Metal.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Domestic consumers of copper were considerably disturbed when news came to the general trade that the British Government had closed contracts for the greatest tonnage of the metal ever sold in this country. It was learned that English agents, after canvassing the copper situation carefully, had exercised options for between 200 and 300 million pounds at a price reported to be twenty-seven cents. Expressed in tons, the order called for one hundred thousand tons at least, against the preceding high record purchases made last autumn of sixty thousand tons.

It was learned that the options closed were with the American Smelting and Refining Company, the United Metals Selling Company and the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company.

Roumania Reported To Be Feeding The Enemy

ROME, April 17.—The latest news shows a rapprochement between Roumania and the central powers much greater than was at first suspected, as it includes pourparlers with Bulgaria and Turkey for a commercial agreement.

Terms of Agreement.

Paris, April 17. — The statement that the German Government concluded on April 7, a new arrangement with Roumania is confirmed. The details are not fully known, but Jean Herbette states in the Echo de Paris that its chief purpose is to remove two obstacles to the purchase of Roumanian grain by the Central Powers.

The first obstacle lay in the fact that other States were free to exhaust the market; thus a British group last January bought up 300,000 tons of wheat. The second consisted in the fact that the Roumanian Government might require that exported cereals be paid for in German or Austrian products, which the Central Powers might not want to liberate.

It is believed the new accord removes these two obstacles. Roumania promising Germany all the produce she does not herself need, and abolishing the exchange system. She also undertakes to permit the transit of traffic to and from Constantinople. The importance of this matter will be seen from the fact that the Roumanian harvest last year amounted to 6,000,000 tons, which is just the quantity of cereals Germany and Austria together had to import in time of peace.

Who Owns Revolver Found In Hip Pocket of Victim Of Fatal Alley Murder?

Latest Police Theory is That it Was Placed There by Gunman After Killing Deragon—Clues Still Fail to Indicate Assassin of the Workman.

MONTREAL, April 17.— The mystery surrounding the murder of Ezra Deragon, who was deliberately shot to death in a lane Wednesday night, is still as baffling as ever. A night of activity by the police and detectives, who have been at work on the case in relays ever since the bullet-riddled victim was discovered, has brought no solution of the crime yet.

Theories advanced following the discovery have failed to materialise under the dissection process adopted headquarters. Meagre description of a man and a woman seen in the alley have added confusion to the work of the police. The lane, which connects Ontario and Mayor streets, is patrolled by the night policeman regularly, and he uses his electric flash light in passing from one end to the other. It is dark at all times.

They are seeking the owner of the revolver found in the dead man's pocket. The discovery that the weapon was of no use added a new phase to the murder. Deragon was helpless against an armed man, although carrying a loaded revolver. The detectives have a big problem on their hands to solve the mystery surrounding the useless weapon found on the dead man. That it was substituted for another for a purpose is a theory now being thoroughly investigated by members of the Detective Department who have been detailed to unravel the tangled case.

Girl A Nervous Wreck At Eleven Years of Age

Was Tired Out, Pale and Sallow—Would Tremble Till the Bed Would Shake—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured Her

In the school of to-day there is found an alarming proportion of weak, nervous children who have little chance of developing into healthy, useful men and women. Nature requires the assistance of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help them over a trying period and set them on their feet.

There would be fewer wearing glasses if the nerves were invigorated less irritation in the school and home, more robust health and a greater pleasure in the school tasks.

This letter bears a cheering message to parents whose children are weak, puny, and nervous. It shows you what may be expected from the use of this great restorative.

Mrs. Stephen Hartman, Italy Cross, Lunenburg Co., N.S., writes:

"My little sister at eleven years of age became nervous, irritable and seemed all tired out. She had no appetite; was lifeless and drowsy, and her complexion grew pale, and sallow. Finally she had to keep her bed and had somebody with her all the time. She was afraid of everything, would get excited and tremble till the bed would shake. As she seemed to be getting worse under the doctor's treatment, mother decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. After she had used about four boxes improvement was noticeable, and it was wonderful to see how much brighter and stronger she grew week by week. She used ten boxes altogether, and they cured her. She got fat and rosy, and went to school every day with an ambition that she never seemed to have before. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone, for it was indeed wonderful what it did for her."

EXCITEMENT AT BRACEBRIDGE.

Ten Who Were to Be Employed at Tannery Figure in Fire, Strike and Exit.

BRACEBRIDGE, April 15.—Ten Austrians from the New Ontario internment camp arrived here about three o'clock yesterday morning to work for a local tannery, but met with such a hostile reception that they left town on the first outgoing train.

About the time of their arrival the fire alarm sounded, and the building in which the men were to be lodged was found to be in flames, and was burned to the ground. The cause of the fires is at present unknown.

At seven a.m. the employees of the tannery where the men were to work went on strike in protest against the employment of the aliens. The employees of another tannery joined them in sympathy. Finally the Austrians were escorted to the station under police protection, and left for Acton on the ten o'clock train.

WAS A GIFTED SOLDIER

All France is resounding with the praises of Lieut. Col. Emile Driant who fell on the first day of the battle of Verdun at the head of his chasseurs. Besides being a gallant officer and one of the deputies from the Nancy district, he was a gifted writer on military subjects and combined the qualities of thorough acquaintance with technical strategy and the fanciful genius of a Jules Verne.

Under the pen name of "Captain Danrit" he wrote many serious works as well as novels in which he used the latest discoveries to embellish fiction. Among his better known books are "War in the Twentieth Century," "The War of To-Morrow," and "The Fatal War." Like the German Emperor, he was impressed at one time by the "yellow peril," and one of his books bears the title "The Yellow Invasion," while he has also written "Above the Black Continent," and "The Black Invasion." That he was fully modern is shown in his "Robinsons of the Air," "Submarine Robinsons," "The Aviator of the Pacific," and "A Dirigible at the North Pole." Grim warnings are contained in his works, "Strikes of To-morrow," and "The Revolution of To-Morrow," and "Toward a New Sedan." Others of his writings are "Jean Lapin," "God-Children of Napoleon," "The Ugly Little Fellow," "From Samarcand to Lhasa," and "The Emperor's Escape." Urged by his friends before the war, he had consented to have his name presented as a candidate for one of the vacant seats in the French Academy.

Captain Driant fell while fighting a rear guard action between the Caures Woods and the village of Beaumont, a bullet having pierced his temple. His immediate comrades jumped into a hole that had just been made by a German shell and were taken prisoners a few minutes later. He was buried at Beaumont, north of Verdun, a German officer marking his grave.

He was 60 years of age and leaves one daughter and three sons, the eldest of whom is now fighting on the French front. His wife was Mlle Boulanger, daughter of the famous French general, once the Minister of War.

SUNDAY'S BACK YARD A BAR

Revival Crowds Must Get Off Cars at Saloon Entrance.

When Billy Sunday begins his attacks on "the Demon Rum" in Kansas City, he can start work in his own back yard.

The Billy Sunday tabernacle covers almost the entire block between Independence Avenue and Admiral Boulevard, and Virginia and Lydia Avenues. And, addly enough, the only other building in the block is the saloon of George A. Gilbertson.

Gilbertson's saloon was there long before Kansas City worried about Billy Sunday and "being saved."

The person who wants to go to the Sunday tabernacle on the street car will alight in front of the doorway of Gillespie's saloon.

Suffered No End of Pain FROM BACKACHES.

If a pain attacks you in the back you should stop and think what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in nine cases out of every ten they are—you should attend to them at once, as it is impossible to have a well, strong back unless the kidneys are performing their functions in a proper manner.

Anyone with a bad back should appreciate how to get a good one. It is a very simple matter. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist.

Mrs. E. J. Graves, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "My complaint lies with my kidneys. I have suffered no end of pain with them, and with backaches. I had tried everything, so I thought, until a friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I did try them, and out box helped me fine, so I got another, and now feel that I cannot recommend them too highly to anyone suffering with kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitutes put up under similar names. Always see that our trade mark "The Maple Leaf" appears on the table and wrapper.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

SOLDIER AND NOVELIST.

The Romantic Career of Mr. Vachell, a Successful Dramatist.

Perhaps the most prominent characteristic of Mr. Horace Annesley Vachell, the most successful dramatist of the moment, whose plays in London — "Quinneys'," "The Case of Lady Camber," and "Searchlights" —have now been supplemented by a fourth—"Who Is He?"—is his optimism.

"The circumstances of this terrible war," he remarked to the writer recently, "do not, of course, permit of jubilation and excessive enjoyment, but I am sure that our soldier boys do not wish us to be more gloomy than is necessary. 'Tommy' likes to think that while he is doing what he can for us, we at home are carrying on as well and as happily as circumstances will permit. Therefore I say let us have plays that will interest and amuse the boys home from the Front and the girls who work and wait."

Talking of his early days, Mr. Vachell confessed that he dreamt of writing plays even when he seemed likely to settle down to a military career. But the latter was brief, for after passing through Sandhurst and serving for a short time as a lieutenant in the Rifle Brigade, he proceeded to America and purchased a cattle-ranch in California, where he stayed for some seventeen years.

Like many other popular authors, it was some time before Mr. Vachell's ability with the pen was discovered. He made his first literary ventures during the long winter evenings in California, when he wrote for amusement and pastime, and at last attracted considerable attention by producing that stirring novel, "The Procession of Life."

Talking of his methods of work, Mr. Vachell told me that it is in his plan to work on his manuscript from nine to one every morning, typing his work direct on the machine, and using very few notes. In the case of his popular play "Searchlights," he typed the play night and day in a brief space of days, making only a single copy of it. And thereby hangs a tale.

Mr. Vachell felt that the script was too precious to be entrusted to any other hands but his own, and brought it up to town, hailed a taxi-cab, and left the manuscript behind in it! There being no other copy available, Mr. Vachell found himself confronted with the very formidable task of dictating the whole play over again from memory, and when the original script turned up four days later at Scotland Yard, Mr. Vachell was interested to find that he had made very few errors in his feat of recapitulation from memory.

Cool.

At the beginning of the football season a member of Parliament, well known for his generosity to junior football clubs, received a letter from three lads in the district, informing him that they had started a football club and had elected him president, concluding with the hope that he would send them a subscription, and signing themselves respectively ab captain, secretary, and treasurer.

The M. P., in accordance with his invariable custom, sent the boys a sovereign, and thought no more about the subject. Imagine his surprise, then, on receiving a second letter a fortnight or so after the first, worded as follows:

"Dear Sir,—We are sorry to tell you we could not keep our club going, as we could not get a ground, but we thought you would not want your pound back, so we took a trip to Manchester with it. We went to Belle Vue Gardens and the theatre, and enjoyed ourselves very much, but the expense for the three came to 1s. 6d. over your sovereign; so will you please send the eighteenpence by return post so that our club will not wind up in debt?"

Waiting for the Gallows.

Prisoners under sentence of death are never left alone for a moment. In England two warders are in attendance both day and night to prevent the possibility of suicide or escape.

Three clear Sundays of life are allowed to the murderer after his sentence. Usually he is hanged upon the Tuesday after the third Sunday.

Some visitors are allowed, but not even the most intimate relative may kiss, embrace, or even take the hand of the prisoner. During the awful three weeks of waiting, the condemned man may choose any food within reason, may smoke, and may read what he likes. Just before execution he may have a drink of brandy. A man about to be hanged is the only person who can hear his own burial service read.

CUSTOM HOUSE FLAGS.

Having No Legal Existence, They Are Not Protected by Law.

Tradition is responsible for the flying of the revenue flag over the custom houses of the country, according to a high ranking member of that department.

The flag which floats from the roof of the custom house has not only no legal existence, but is not protected by law from popular use on land and sea nor from advertising, as is the national flag.

The revenue cutter service was established under authority of an act of congress of Aug. 4, 1790, as an armed force. It soon became evident that the vessels of the service should have some distinguishing flag or mark to indicate their employment and authority, and under an act of congress of March 21, 1799, the marker was provided for. This act set forth that "the cutters and boats employed in the service of the revenue shall be distinguished from other vessels by an ensign and pendant, with such marks thereon as shall be prescribed by the president."

As is apparent from the act of congress mentioned and various revisions of later date, the revenue ensign was intended especially for the cutters and boats of the service, but it has long been displayed over custom houses.—Baltimore Sun.

A Get Beautiful Quick Scheme.

"If you have a hurry call to be beautiful without the time to work up to the permanent affair," said Mildred Holland, "here's your chance. First wash your face with warm water and almond meal. Make a sort of paste of those things and wash off with warm water and dry lightly. Then apply your skin food lest there be any reaction from the drastic treatment to follow. Now take a piece of lemon and rub it over the face till the skin smarts. Rinse again, this time with water that is gradually brought down from cool to cold. You are then ready for the final ceremony. Hold a good sized piece of ice in a towel and iron your face with it. Then look in the glass. This has been found an absolutely reliable recipe before asking for the coveted new bonnet."—New York World.

Canvasbacks on the Wing.

If you have any doubt as to the swiftness of the canvasback on the wing where business calls just fire at the leader in a string some time when you have the chance. Duck shot when propelled by the proper quantity of powder travels pretty quickly itself, but if your charge brings down any member of that string of ducks at all it will be the fifth or sixth bird back of the leader, and I'll bet a farm on it.

"If you would have a chance of dropping the leader you will have to aim not less than ten feet ahead of him. Then he will more than likely run plump against your shot. When he drops it will be a quarter of a mile or so farther on, for he can't stop short of that distance even after he is dead."—New York Sun.

His Striking Feature.

He was butler at the British embassy, and he was very English. He was at the telephone, and the society editor of a Washington newspaper was asking him about a distinguished Englishman who had just arrived as a guest at the embassy.

"Tell me," said the editor, "what he looks like. Give me some striking feature by which I may recognize him."

"Well," replied the butler in awe and admiration, "'e 'as a most hintelligent face."—New York Tribune.

Appreciation.

A good story comes from London about a lawyer who engaged a new boy. As he had suffered to some extent from the dishonesty of his former lad, he determined to try the new boy's honesty at once. So he placed a five-pound note under a weight on his desk and walked out without a word. Upon his return, half an hour later, the note was gone and half a crown in silver had taken its place. "Boy, when I went out I left a five-pound note under this weight!"

"Yes, sir, but you see you hadn't gone five minutes when a man came in with a bill against you for £4 17s. 6d. I believe the change is correct." "You paid a bill?" "Yes, sir; there it is, all receipted. The man said it had slipped your mind for the past four years, and so"—

The lawyer showed his appreciation by discharging the boy at once.

His Early Reputation.

When Lloyd-George was a young solicitor in Wales he was riding home in his dogcart one day and came upon a little Welsh girl trudging along so wearily that he offered her a ride. She accepted silently, but all the way along the future statesman, although he tried hard to engage her in conversation, could not get her to say anything more than a timid "Yes" or No."

Some days afterward the little girl's mother happened to meet Lloyd-George and said to him smilingly: "Do you remember that my little girl rode home with you the other day? Well, when she got home she said, 'Mamma, I rode from school with Mr. Lloyd-George, the lawyer, and he kept talking to me, and I didn't know whatever to do, for you know Mr. Lloyd-George charges you whenever you talk with him, and I hadn't any money!'"

Retrenchment.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador at Washington, said at a dinner: "The new English war loan has had a success surpassing all expectation. It can be subscribed to in amounts as low as five shillings. The poorest have taken it up. Thus, by their economy, the English people are helping to end the war. "In England, in fact, they who can't help by trenching, help by retrenching."

Films for Russia.

To familiarize the Russian public with the working of the naval and military organization of Great Britain, arrangements are being made to despatch for exhibition in the principal centres of Russia films of the photographs lately taken of the army and navy, by arrangement with the British War Office and Admiralty.

Australia's Munition Work.

Large crowds recently assembled at Perth, Australia, to witness the official opening of a fully equipped factory for the turning out of shell cases. The work to be done there at present will be supplemented by various outside agencies, and all material used will be of Australian production. During the last six months a considerable quantity of copper ore has been imported into England from Western Australia under the auspices of the State Government, and is being disposed of by the Agent-General. The increased activity in this direction will no doubt result in the huge deposits of this mineral in the State being worked more extensively than before.

Conscience Money.

The British Chancellor of the Exchequer has just received $615 in one amount as conscience money. That is nothing compared with the $70,000 which the Chancellor received in 1861 from a person who stated that he had made that much in several years' smuggling.

SOME GEIKIE STORIES.

The Anecdote of How a Sentence Explains the Telegraph.

The death of that accomplished woman, Lady Geikie, wife of Sir Archibald Geikie, former President of the Royal Society, reminds one that the latter is famous not only as an eminent geologist, but also as a raconteur, as all will be aware who have read his entertaining "Scottish Reminiscences." Two of Sir Archibald's favorite stories, however, are against himself. When the honorary degrees were conferred at Durham the Chancellor asked, "Is it the pleasure of the house that the D.Sc. degree be conferred upon Archibald Geikie?" and promptly came a chorus of students, "Archibald, certainly not!"

A similar incident occurred at Liverpool when Sir Archibald was being presented with the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Suddenly a student's voice rang out, "How came Sir Archibald?" Back came the answer, to the huge delight of the audience, "By degrees!"

It is Sir Archibald who tells the story of the Highlander who had been to Glasgow and seen that wonderful invention, the telegraph. "What's it like?" his neighbors asked him. "If I trod on ma cettie-deg's tail in Oban," said Jock, "and it squeaked in Tobermory, that would be a telegraph."

Another of his stories is that of the minister's prodigal son, who returned home one evening and found his father giving a Presbyterian dinner. "Where have you been, sir?" asked the father, sternly. "In hell," quoth the son. "Ah, and what did you find there?" "Much the same as I find here. I couldna see the fire for moonisters."

Sir Archibald's stories of the humors of Scottish Sabbath-keeping are, perhaps, among his best. There is one concerning a nurse who was overheard stilling a child in this fashion: "Whist! whist! my bonnie lamb; it's the Sawbbath or I wud whussle ye a sang, but I will sing ye a paraphrase."

Sir Archibald tells how Donald was one Sabbath hammering away on the bottom of his barrow, when his wife came to the door. "Mon," she said, "you're making much clatter. What will the neebors say?" "Never mind the neebors," said the busy Donald. "A man got ma barra mendit." "Oh, but Donal', it's very rang ta work as Sawbbath," expostulated his wife. "Ye ought ta use screws."

Sir Archibald once suggested that the questions put by school examiners were not always judiciously worded, and gave as an example the examiner who asked, "If Alfred the Great were alive now, what part of our political system would he be likely to take most interest in?" "Please, sir," replied a harassed pupil, "if Alfred the Great were alive now he'd be so old he wouldn't take any interest in anything."

And one may conclude with the holiday story which Sir Archibald tells of a Scotsman who, much against his own judgment, was persuaded to take a holiday. He went to Egypt and visited the Pyramids. After gazing for some time at the Great Pyramid he muttered, "Mon, what a lot of mason work not to be bringing in ony rent!"

Couldn't Fool Him.

She hailed from a remote country village in England and had traveled by rail on a visit to friends who resided in a distant town. While entering the railway station for the return journey she found to her dismay that she had lost her handbag, which contained her return ticket and cash.

After a fruitless inquiry and search a lady to whom she had spoken of her loss very kindly offered the suggestion that the old dame should wire to her husband at her expense, and ask him to telegraph a money order, also telling him the circumstances in which she was placed. She assented to this, and the telegram was sent and duly delivered to the old dame's husband. He tore the missive open and read it.

"Any answer?" asked the messenger.

"Na, nor brass neither," said he. "They'll find they nobbut get a noodle this time. They'll not hoodwink me; that bain't Mary's writin' I could tell 'ers from hundreds."

Called His Guest a Counterfeiter

In his book, "My Harvest," Richard Whiteing tells of a night at the Friars' club when Max O'Rell was in the chair and Rapson, the great orientalist, who was then at the British museum, the guest of the evening.

At the museum Rapson belonged to the department of coins and medals, and O'Rell wanted to say something nice about him as a numismatist. With his imperfect knowledge of the niceties of our tongue he could manage it only in this way: "Gentlemen, we are honored to-night with the presence of a well known coiner."— The rest was lost in an inevitable roar, with Rapson as the loudest contributor.

Reach Berlin by 1950.

Mr. Lloyd George has been at the front several times. The story is told that, when an officer who was showing him round pointed out the position his particular men were occupying, the Munitions Minister asked:

"Where were you this time last month?"

"In those trenches over there, sir," said the officer, pointing to a position a few yards to the rear.

"I see," said the Minister, facetiously. "At that rate you will be in Berlin by 1950."

Bombarding "Charlie."

A wooden effigy of Charlie Chaplin, looted from the door of a picture palace, has been taken to the front by a draft from one of the Yorkshire camps and is daily being hoisted above the trenches, to the great fury of the Germans, who subjected "Charlie" to two hours' bombardment in the course of a recent afternoon.

Patriotic Youth—Yaas, rejected me, they did just because I'm six months under military age. It'd be a blinkin' nice thing if the war was over by then, wouldn't it?—London Opinion.

Bringing Up a Dog.

A writer in Country Life in America gives some advice on the bringing up of a dog. As he tells it, the process looks easy enough. The first and most important lesson for a pup to learn is to stop anything he may be doing when you say "Stop" and to continue when you say "All right." If well learned this will explain to him all future commands. After this comes the lesson to lie down when you command "Down" and to stay down while you leave him. For this latter it is best to tie him to something and then if he does not drop when you call "Down" from a distance return quickly and, scolding, push him down forcibly. A caress and a taste of food should be his reward if he does right.

Old Time School Hours.

In Scotland, up to the middle of the eighteenth century, the usual school hours were from 6 a. m. till 6 p. m., with two breaks of an hour each. Some schools opened an hour earlier and worked so long as daylight lasted. No alteration in the hours was made on Saturday, and even on Sunday a certain amount of school work was done. The holidays were restricted to a day at Candlemas and at Whitsun, and a fortnight in the autumn.

Good Time Coming.

"I tell you, Binks," said the millionaire, with great gusto, "talk about your fun! There's none to equal that of earning a million dollar by dollar."

"By ginger," said little Binks, "what a lot of fun there is ahead of me!"—Harper's Weekly.

A SHIP IN A STORM.

The Peril When Wind and Water Rage in Opposite Directions.

In a storm at sea, with a gale blowing in one direction and the sea running in the opposite direction, it takes a stanch ship to stand the water pressure on one side and the contrary wind pressure on the other.

Stability is one of the greatest problems to the constructor of a steamship. Naturally the center of gravity should be low. The hull must be of such a form that when the vessel rolls to one side the center of buoyancy shall move sufficiently far to that same side for the forces of buoyance acting upward to right the vessel.

A badly designed ship is liable to many dangers. If light in the stern the screw may come out of the water, race and be damaged off. If too low in the stern when running before a storm breaking waves may fall on board and so tend to swamp the vessel. A ship may be topheavy; there comes a moment when the upward force of buoyancy no longer tends to right the ship, but instead exerts its force in pushing the ship still farther out of perpendicular, with the result that she capsizes.—New York World.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

PASSOVER IN TYPE AND IN ANTITYPE

First-born of Israel Type of the Church.

Only First-Borns in Danger of the Destroying Angel—Passing Over of Antitypical First-Borns Full of Meaning for the World—First-Borns the Blessers of Their Brethren—Eating the Lamb With Bitter Herbs—Jesus Our Passover Lamb—He Instituted a New Feature Not Shown in the Type—Partaking of Jesus' Blood — Church to Be Broken, to Shed Their Blood, With Christ.

(The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.)

New York City April 16. — Pastor Russell lectured here today, at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd St., near Broadway, on the subject of the Passover. His text was, "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." (1 Corinthians 5: 7, 8.) We give a condensed report of his discourse:

The Passover ceremonies, the first institution of Divine favor with the nation of Israel, prefigured the first institution of Divine favor inaugurated by our Lord Jesus Christ in the Eucharist, or Holy Communion. As the Apostle indicated in our text, the Jewish Passover was a foreshadowing, or typifying, of the better things, the real Passover, with which we Christians have to do. We are not wholly dependent upon the Jewish type of our information, however; for we have clear, Divine statements by our Lord and His Apostles respecting the relationship between Christ and His Church and respecting the special salvation of the Elect. Nevertheless, we find in the Passover type many details which assist us greatly in the understanding of the Antitype.

First of all we should notice that the Passover directly affected only the first-borns of Israel, although it indirectly affected all the remainder of Israel. That is to say, the last plague upon Egypt was the death of all their first-borns; and the Passover celebrates the fact that the first-borns of Israel were spared, or passed over, by the destroying angel in that night. As the younger children of the Egyptians were not endangered, neither were the younger children of the Israelites. Hence the latter were not passed over. Yet they were certainly interested in the passing over, or sparing, of the first-borns, not merely because of their relationship, but because in the Lord's providence those first-borns became leaders and deliverers of the people on the next day, as they went forth from Egypt.—Numbers 8:17,18.

Furthermore, those first-borns of Israel, exchanged by Divine direction for the entire tribe of Levi, were thereafter represented in them; and they, as the sacrificing priests and the teaching Levites, became the ministers of the Law Covenant for that nation. The antitype of this was distinctly pointed out by the Apostle Paul; namely, that the elect Church of this Gospel Age is "the Church of the First-borns, which are written in Heaven." These are to be the "able ministers of the New [Law] Covenant."—Hebrews 12:23; 2 Corinthians 3:6.

These first-borns alone are being dealt with during this Gospel Age, or "night." These alone are in danger of a death penalty. As the Apostle declares, if we sin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the Truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for our sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour us as the adversaries of God and of righteousness. (Hebrews 10: 26, 27.) Nevertheless, the whole world of mankind is certainly interested in this Church of the First-borns, in its successful passing over, its attainment of everlasting life; for these are the Royal Priesthood and the instructors of the New Covenant, which is shortly to be sealed, and by the terms of which all the families of the earth are to be blessed. All mankind will receive the blessing of reconciliation to God through the knowledge of the Truth and through the blessings of the Millennial Kingdom, associated with the New Covenant.—Jeremiah 31: 31-34.

Jesus the Passover Lamb.

Having noted the first-born class, we should discern clearly also the Passover Lamb, through the merit of whose blood the passing over of the first-borns was effected. The lamb is a peculiarly innocent animal, wholly unprepared for defense or resistance, and thus a suitable picture, or type, of our Lord, who was non-resistant and who fully and freely surrendered His rights and His earthly interests on our behalf—on behalf of the First-borns. True, others than the First-borns will ultimately profit by His sacrifice, but these especially and peculiarly so. Thus far God's only dealings during this Gospel Age are with this class. These alone have an Advocate with the Father—Jesus Christ the Righteous. (1 John 2: 1, 2.) These alone thus far are reconciled to God.

All of God's blessings to the unbelievers must come in the future, under the New Covenant; for only believers can be justified by faith and receive the blessings of the Faith Covenant—the Abrahamic Covenant. "The Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," first saves, or passes over, the Church of the First-borns, and later in the Millennium will bless all who become Abraham's seed.

There are pictures of the Church which represent her as participating with the Lord in His sacrifice; but this Passover type is not one of these. The Passover lamb represented our Lord Jesus Christ as "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." (John 1:29.) But the sin of the world has not yet been taken away. Our Lord has not yet applied His merit for the world, but only and expressly for the Household of Faith. In another sacrifice, which represents our Lord and the Church conjointly sacrificing, as Head and members, the body of the animal was cut into various pieces and laid with the head upon the altar, thus typifying Christ Jesus as the Head and the Church as His members. (Exodus 29: 15-17.) But provision was made that the Passover sacrifice was not to be divided. It was to be eaten whole—not a bone was to be broken. It represented, not Christ and the Church, but Christ alone in His sacrifice. — Exodus 12:46; John 19:36.

"In That Night."

Be it remembered that the passing over took place in the night, not in the daylight. When the morning arrived, the Israelites went forth out of the land of Egypt to liberty, to freedom from bondage. But during the night they were still in bondage, waiting for the deliverance which could come only after the passing over of the first-borns. That night of the type represented this Gospel Age.

This same thought is given by our Lord when He says, "Let your light so shine before men:" again, "Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house." (Matthew 5: 15, 16.) The Apostle Peter expresses the same thought, saying, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the Day dawn and the day star arise in your hearts." (2 Peter 1:19.) Again, the Prophet, speaking of the Church, says: "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."—Psalm 119:105.

Numerous other Scriptures refer to the new Millennial Dispensation as the Morning in which the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams, and in which the shadows of superstition and works of darkness shall flee away. The appropriateness of this figure must be evident to every reasonable mind. God's people are children of the Day in the sense that their hopes and sentiments belong, not to the darkness of sin, not to the night-time, but to the Day, to the Reign of Righteousness, for which they are praying, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, even as it is done in Heaven."

Eighteen centuries ago our Lord said that He had come as a Light into the world, but that men loved darkness rather than light. (John 8:12; 3:19-21.) Only a few yet recognize Him as "the true Light." But eventually He will "light every man that cometh into the world." (John 1:9.) Indeed, His Church are invited to become associated with Him as lamp-bearers; and if faithful in permitting their light to shine now, they will by and by be parts of that great Sun of Righteousness which shall heal the world with its beams. Our Lord pointed this out in the parable of the Wheat and the Tares. He declared that in the end of this Age He would gather the wheat into the barn; and that then should "the righteous shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father." (Matthew 13:43.) Alas, that so few have "an ear to hear" and accept the wonderful teachings of the Divine Plan!

Blood on the Doorposts All Right.

The Israelites were instructed that the blood of the lamb must be sprinkled on the doorposts and the lintels of their houses that night. This indicated that all who would belong to the Household of Faith must believe in the precious blood of Christ, and thus be "justified by faith" irrespective of denomination. To believe thus would make us members of the Household of Faith; but it would not determine whether or not we would be of the First-borns. The Very Elect, the Saints, the Royal Priesthood, have this place of seniority in the Household of Faith—not by reason of natural years, but by reason of spiritual development. They are priests, elders, in the sense of their primacy of development in the character-likeness of their Redeemer, which also indicates their faith and obedience.

We cannot emphasize too strongly the fact that this is the Scriptural teaching. We are not merely to believe that Jesus lived, that Jesus died. We are especially to believe that He died SACRIFICIALLY, "the Just for the unjust," and are to accept our share of the redemption which He secured by His precious blood. The sprinkling of the blood upon the doorposts in the type implied public confession of the precious blood of the Lamb of God, in His death and in its efficacy for us, which is thus signified.

It will be remembered that the Israelites were enjoined against going out of the house during the night; for when the Lord would pass through to smite the Egyptians, He would see the blood upon lintels and doorposts, and would not suffer the destroying angel to come into their houses. (Exodus 12:1-13.) The injunction that those under the door sprinkled with blood should not go out from under it during that night has special application and force with respect to the first-borns. Antitypically it signifies that if any of us who are of the First-borns should go out from under the blood, in the sense of denying the merit, the efficacy, of the blood of Jesus, the penalty of such a course would be death—the Second Death—hopeless extinction.—Hebrews 6:4-6; 10:26-31.

Eating the Lamb.

As the blood of the lamb marked the household of faith, not merely the first-borns of that household, so the eating of the lamb was not merely for the first-borns, but for all the household. So our Lord said, "My flesh is meat indeed;" and again, "This is the Bread which came down from Heaven; he that eateth of this Bread shall live forever." (John 6: 55, 58.) In other words, not only was it necessary that Jesus should die, a meritorious Sacrifice, but it is also necessary that all who would have profit through His Sacrifice must feed upon Him—must appropriate the merit of His sacrifice.

The eating of the lamb pictured, or typified, the appropriation, by the Household of Faith, of those earthly rights and interests which were forfeited by Adam's disobedience and redeemed by Jesus' death. In other words, it signifies our appropriating justification from sin. We eat by faith, and therefore are said to be "justified by faith." By faith we are permitted to count ourselves as fully reinstated in God's favor through the merit of Christ's sacrifice, even as we were debarred from Divine favor through the demerit of Adam's sin. The eating of the lamb signifies the appreciation of these things and the appropriation of them to ourselves. The more we eat, the greater is our feeling of satisfaction in respect to our freedom from condemnation and our reinstatement in Divine favor through the merit of our Passover Lamb.

The Blood of the New Covenant.

Year by year for more than sixteen centuries the Jews kept the Passover by Divine decree—not merely the sacrifice of the lamb and the eating of it on the same night, after the doorposts had been sprinkled with blood, but additionally a feast of seven days following. That Passover feast represented the joys and rejoicings, the blessings and favors of reconciliation to God, based upon the merit of the Passover lamb—the sacrifice and the eating thereof. Yet the Jews understood not the meaning of what they did. It was not necessary that they should understand. When God's due time came, the explanation would be granted.

That due time came on the night in which our Lord was betrayed—the night of the fourteenth day of the first month, the very night of the typical killing of the Passover lamb. The Master gathered about Him His twelve Apostles. They had their usual Passover supper of roast lamb; and afterwards our Lord introduced what we familiarly term "The Lord's Supper"—a new symbolization of the antitypical Passover.

What our Lord introduced was to take the place of the Jewish ceremony with His followers, to carry out the same thought, but on a higher plane, as representing a clearer, better understanding of the matter. Instead of the lamb would be the unleavened bread, representing our Lord's flesh. This He distributed to His Apostles, saying, "This is My body, which is given for you; this do in remembrance of Me." (Luke 22: 19.) The eating of that unleavened bread represented their appropriating to themselves of the merit of Christ's sacrifice—their justification by faith.

Then our Lord added a new feature—"the cup." For while all believers might partake of the bread, might realize justification through the merit of His sacrifice, yet only a certain class of believers were invited to partake of the blood. The cup represented death. Ordinarily, under the Jewish Law, the partaking of blood would represent blood guiltiness, or responsibility for the death. (Leviticus 17:10-14.) But our Lord gave His disciples fruit of the vine as symbolic of His blood; and He urged upon them its appropriation, saying, "This cup is the New Testament in My blood, which is shed for you," and "for many." "Drink ye all of it."—Luke 22:20; Matthew 26:27, 28.

This invitation to drink of His blood signifies a participation with Christ as His members in a sacrifice of earthly life, earthly interests, hopes, aims, ambitions—everything. All who accept this invitation to drink of His blood thereby pledge their lives in the same service for which He gave His life. This thought is entirely additional to anything in the Jewish Passover type. There is no intimation that any of the household were to partake of the blood of the slain lamb. Nevertheless we who now accept our Lord's proposition to share in His blood and lay down our lives with Him in defense of the Truth, thereby mark ourselves as elder brothers in the Household of Faith, members of the First-borns with our Lord, our Redeemer, and as prospectively the Royal Priesthood.

"As Ye Are Unleavened."

The Apostle Paul points out these items to which we have called attention. He says that the Lord's consecrated followers are counted as members of the Body of Christ, the Church, under Jesus the Head. He indicates that the broken loaf represents primarily our Lord Jesus, who was broken for us; and that secondarily it represents the Church of Christ, those who willingly and joyfully yield themselves for the sake of the Lord's Cause. He also points out that the cup of Christ's blood, of which we are invited to partake, signifies to us a communion with in the sufferings and sacrifices of Christ.

Therefore, whoever intelligently partakes of the Memorial Supper thereby indicates two things: (1) his faith in Jesus as the Passover Lamb, and his appreciation and participation in the merit of Jesus—his justification by faith; and (2) his membership in the Body of Christ, all the members of which agree to be broken—membership in that "little flock" whose faithfulness is manifested by drinking of the Master's cup—sharing with Him in His sacrifice, suffering with Him in order to reign with Him.—1 Corinthians 10: 16,17; 2 Timothy 2: 11, 12.

Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Plumweacop, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skilful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

See Bagdad From Afar.

Like most oriental cities, Bagdad looks her best from a distance. You miss the filthy, narrow streets where two horses can hardly walk abreast and behold a vision of luxuriant date groves, out of which rise little islands of green domes and graceful minarets. In the days of its splendor the East India company maintained in the city of the caliphs a resident, with a generous establishment. Nowadays we are content with the usual modest consular service.—London Spectator.

WROTE LOVE LETTERS.

Thomas Hardy Practiced as Secretary for Village Girls.

There is a story told to the effect that the greatest of living English novelists, Mr. Thomas Hardy, who recently celebrated his seventy-fourth birthday, was asked on one occasion by a friend how he came to have such an extraordinary knowledge of the English peasant girl. "How did you get it?" was the question put to him. "When I was a young man," was the answer, "I used to write love-letters for the village girls to their soldier sweethearts, and that naturally gave me an insight into their natures and characteristics."

The three dairymaids in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" had their originals in three of the lasses for whom he wrote love-letters when a mere lad.

"Tess" was inspired by the sight of a country girl's face. Mr. Hardy was walking down a lane in West Dorset, when a farmer's cart rumbled past on which was seated the original of "Tess." The novelist never saw her again, but he was so impressed with that fleeting glimpse of the girl in the passing country cart, that he found himself weaving a romance round her, and in due time "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" appeared.

As all his readers know, Mr. Hardy does not hold with the living-happily-ever-afterending to the novel, and he confesses that neither the taste of the public nor the wishes of the publishers influence his work in the smallest degree. Many readers of "Tess" sent him letters imploring him to so construct it as to make it end happily; but Mr. Hardy was obdurate.

Beginning his life as an architect, Mr. Hardy was over thirty before he took to literature seriously. As a matter of fact, he showed great promise as an architect, and his house at "Max Gate," Dorchester, was built from his own designs. His early training as an architect is always showing itself in his writings, in his vivid descriptions of cathedrals and churches, and more especially in "Judge the Obscure," where the work of restoration of an ecclesiastical building is minutely described.

In 1868 Mr. Hardy was prizeman of the Royal Institute of British Architects, and it is said that the first thing he ever published was an article on "How I Built Myself a House."

For years Mr. Hardy has lived the life of a recluse, being usually inaccessible to any but his most intimate friends. His house at "Max Gate" is replete with curios and rare old prints, and etchings and drawings by famous artists who have illustrated his stories, for he is an ardent collector of such treasures.

At one time Mr. Hardy was an ardent playgoer, and he is rather fond of telling a story of "Walker, London," J. M. Barrie's first play, which was produced by J. L. Toole, as an illustration of the dependence of the author upon the actor. Mr. Hardy witnessed the play in Barrie's company. Several times he found occasion to congratulate the author upon the dialogue, laughing freely, and exclaiming, "That's a good thing," but as sure as ever he did so, Barrie would reply in a melancholy tone, "Ah, that is not mine. That's Toole's. There is a good deal that is now since I was last here."

Tragic Fate of a German Battalion on Russian Front

Perished During a Night Fight Amid Snow-Buried Entanglements—Desperate Encounter in the Dark Before the Russian Trenches.

COMIC WAR IN FOREST

PETROGRAD, March 28.—Among recent letters sent home from the front by Russian officers and men are a couple that form striking contrasts of humor and tragedy. The latter recounts the fate of a whole German battalion that sank into the snow amid wire entanglements and perished to a man. The writer says:

"One of our sections had received the order to go around about three miles to the left, occupy the trenches already prepared, and hold them against the enemy until dinner time. We found that the snow there had drifted in heaps and that trenches were already filled.

"We were creeping across the snow, when we heard a frightened 'Wer kommt da?'

"Hold on, Germans! Where the devil do they come from?' ask our men in surprise. Are they numerous?'

"'Wer ist da?' we hear again.

"Our only reply is to fire by the squad, and then again. The Germans are a little surprised, but pull themselves together and return the fire. It is dark and neither side can see the other. In groping about we finally meet, and it is give and take with the bayonet. We strike in silence, but bullets are falling about us like rain. Nobody knows who is firing and every one is crying in his own language, 'Don't fire! Stop!' From the side where the firing comes from, beyond and to the right, they are yelling at us, both in German and Russian. 'What's the matter? Where are you?'

"Our men cry to the Germans Surrender!

"They answer: 'Throw down your arms. We have surrounded you and you are all prisoners.'

A CRITICAL MOMENT.

"Wild with rage we throw ourselves forward with the bayonet pushing the enemy back along the trenches. In their holes the Germans cry, peering into the impenetrable darkness. 'Help! Dont fire! Bayonet them!' Hundreds of shouts answer them, like a wave rolling in on us from every hand.

"Oh, little brother, their force is numberless. We are surrounded on three sides. Would it not be better to surrender?' cries some one with a sob.

"Crack him over the head! Pull out his tongue! Drive him to the Germans with the bayonet!' are the growling comments this evokes.

"The crowd before us yells, moves, and seems to stop. But behind them new ranks groan and approach. Anew the command is given 'Fire,, fire.'

"Cries and groans answer the fusillade and a hand to hand struggle along the trenches ensues.

"German shouts are heard: 'Help! Here, this way! Fall on their backs.

"But it is we who fall on their backs. We pry them out and clear the trenches.

"In front of us all is quiet. On the right we hear the Germans struggling, growling, repeating the commands of the officers: 'Vorwarts! Vorwarts!' But nobody fires and nobody attacks our trenches. We fire in the general direction of the German voices. Infrequent shots far apart answer us. The commands of 'Vorwarts' have stopped. They are at the foot of the trenches, but they do not storm them. 'After them with the bayonet,' our men cry. 'Finish them as we finished the others.

"Halt boys, calls the sharp, vibrating voice of our commander. 'This may be only another German trick. They don't come on: we are firing, and they do not answer. Shoot further and lower. Fire.

"New cries and groans come from the Germans, followed by some isolated shots, which fly high above us. After five or six rounds silence settles upon the trenches and continues unbroken. 'What can this mean?' wonder our men. 'Have we exterminated them all?'

"Excellency, permit me to go and feel around,' offers S., chief scout, already decorated with the Cross of St. George.

"Wait, I am going to look into it myself."

"The officer lights a little electric lamp, and prudently sticks his arm above the rampart. The light does not draw a single shot. We peer cautiously over and see, almost within reach of our hands, the Germans lying in ranks, piled on top of one another.

"Excellency," the soldiers marvel, 'they are all dead'. They don't move. or are they pretending?'"

"The officer raised himself and directs the rays from his lamp on the heaps. We see that they are buried in the snow up to the waist, or to the neck, but none of them moves. The officer throws the light right and left, and shows us hundreds of Germans extended, their fallen rifles sticking up in the snow like planted things.

"'I don't understand,' he mutters.

"Excellency, I am going to see," says the chief scout.

"Go on," the officer consents, 'and you, boys, have your rifles ready and fire at anything suspicious without waiting for orders from me."

"S. gets out of the trench and immediately disappears, swallowed by the soft snow up to the neck. He tries to get one leg out, but without success. He tries to lean on one hand, pushes it down into the snow, then pulls hard and swears. His hands are frightfully scratched; the blood tinges the snow with dark blotches.

"It's the barbed wire defenses,' he cries. 'Help me, little brothers. Alone I can do nothing.

"We catch him by the collar of his tunic, and with difficulty pull him out. His coat, trousers, boots are in shreds.

"Thousand devils!" he swears. I have no legs left. They're scratched to pieces.'

"The officer understands, the trenches are defended by intrenchments of barbed wire. The snow had covered the pile high above them. The whole battalion we had seen had rushed forward to the help of those who had called and had got mixed up in the wires. The first ones had sunk into the snow and disappeared. Those coming after had stepped on them, passed on, become entangled in the covered wires, and had fallen in turn under our hail of lead. Rank on rank, ignorant of what had happened and rushing on like wild animals, had shared the fate of their comrades. So perished a whole battalion."

FOES WHO CAPTURED ONE ANOTHER

Following is the humurous episode in the conflict sent from another section of the front:

"Our little detachment had been made prisoners by the Germans. It was at a time when we were retreating and our rear was full of German detachments, operating separately from their main body. The prisoners had been wandering for a long time across the forests and swamps and the Germans had lost their way and were picking it by chance.

"During the night we noticed a camp fire and the Prussians were joyful, for according to their calculations, it was a party of their compatriots. But they cruelly deceived themselves. A flash was seen and then others cut the air. Cries resounded and the Germans saw Russians before them. At this unexpected encounter they were forced to surrender. It was then they learned that our detachment also had lost its way and was wandering around trying to find its road. The roles were changed, the Russians, who a moment before had been prisoners, took their arms from the Germans and we all again started on a trip to discovery.

"The forest seemed endless. We marched day and night, almost without rest, and in the distance heard a cannonading, but without being able to tell exactly from where it came. Sharing the same fate had somewhat reconciled the enemies. There was little difference between prisoners and conquerors, chiefly because both were hungry. Rarely we got a chance to kill some animals, for the cattle, scared by the firing, had hidden in the thickest part of the forest.

"The adventure was developing. Our little detachment was the kernel around which were several layers of Russians and Germans. And the whole band fell once more into the hands of the Germans. Waking up after one of those rare nights in which it had been possible to sleep, every one would ask 'Who are the prisoners now?'

"This absurd story had a tragic side, hunger, which became more and more cruel. We had killed the horses, but this food did not last long, there were too many mouths to fill. We were wandering around quietly and harmoniously enough, but Russians and Germans who were about equal in numbers watched one another warily, each side apprehensive lest the other, rendered desperate by hunger, should make a sudden attack.

"The incident ended very unexpectedly. By common accord, without a word, the two groups fled in opposite directions. Chance favored the Russians, for the next day they fell in with a detachment of their own people. Volunteers got the order to explore the forest and they brought in all the Germans once more.

"But the humor of war is grim. All the participants in the joke, worn out by famine and privation, had to be sent to the hospital."

DANDRUFF AND ERUPTION ON HEAD

Healed by Cuticura Trial Free

"I suffered very much with dandruff and sore head, and I had an eruption on my head. My hair would fall out in handfuls and it became thin and dry, and split at the ends. At night I would be troubled very much and my hair would fall out during the night. I was almost frantic with the itching.

"I read of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bought some, and after I had used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and the Cuticura Soap my head was healed, and my hair stopped falling out." (Signed) Miss M. L. Horquard, West Pespebiac, Quebec, Dec. 15, 1915.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SET OF CAPES.

By Anabel Worthington.

The shoulder cape or cape collar will share honors this season as the ultimate word in fashions; and as we are privileged to wear or leave off the cape as our fancy may direct, it will be to the advantage of the woman who shows she is well informed on the style tendencies to have one. These designs produce some striking examples:—

No. 1—Illustrates a cape with an interesting outline—the scallops adding to the beauty—the neck is close fitting and ribbon ties hold the garment in place. To copy, ½ yard only will be necessary; without the scallops, ¼ yard will be enough, using 36 inch material.

No. 2—A cape with the collar that has become general—revers are satin faced and extend the full length of the cape; with the surplice closing, we have a very fetching design, having the same style to its lines at back as at front. One yard material, with ½ yard silk or satin to trim, will reproduce it.

No. 3—Cape with a fitted back and front; a feature of interest is the closing on the left shoulder with loops and buttons. To make will require ¾ yard 36 inch material.

No. 4—Deep cape, gathered all round and shirred at the neck below the chin collar; if banding or braid trimming ⅛ yard material and 4 yards banding will give a duplicate of the design.

No. 5—More military in style with its buttons and giving the semblance of a double cape; it is fitted at the shoulders. Braid loops add to its effectiveness. The arrangement of the collar is captivating. 1¾ yards of 36 inch will be needed.

To obtain this pattern, No. 7,650, send only ... to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

DRINK A GLASS OF REAL HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessings to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness, others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

PLACATING THE DEVILS.

Paying Homage to Evil Spirits of Land and Sea in China.

Once every year, during the first fifteen days of the seventh Chinese month, the curious ceremony of Yu Nao Whei is celebrated, being, in fact, the paying of homage to the land and sea devils.

Seven priests carry out the ceremony by offering up various forms of prayer, says the Wide World Magazine, and making an unearthly noise by beating gongs.

Any one wishing to show his respect to the devils can do so by a payment of 600 cash—about 22 cents—to each of the priests, for which amount they will continue their performance for twelve hours, a truly modest remuneration.

For an extra payment of 2,000 cash a number of small red paper boats about six inches long, with lights inside, will be sent floating down the river with the current. These lights are for the benefit of the sea devils in order that they may be able to see their way about on dark nights.

Having finished this performance, the person on whose behalf it has been carried out goes away happy in the conviction that he will not lose any of his family throughout the year either by sickness or drowning, so that the whole ceremony may be looked upon as an insurance policy. At this time of year many thousands of the small lighted boats may be seen floating down the Pangtsekiang.

A Ring Island.

Many coral reef islands in the Pacific are in the form of more or less perfect rings or ovals enclosing a lagoon. The ring island of Ninafou, halfway between Fiji and Samoa is not a coral reef but a volcanic ring inclosing a crater containing a lake two miles in diameter. Toward the sea the rim is bordered with walls of black lava, and on the inner side these break down in cliffs 200 to 900 feet in height. An eruption in 1866 formed a peninsula on the eastern side of the lake. While the ocean on one is tremulous and thundering under a heavy wind the lake remains a mouth or is simply wrinkled with ripples.

"CASCARETS" BEST IF HEADACHY, BILIOUS, SICK, CONSTIPATED

Best for Liver and Bowels, Bad Breath, Bad Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headaches, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

CASEMENT, THE TRAITOR, REPORTED ARRESTED

COPENHAGEN, April 15.—A press despatch states that Sir Roger Casement has been arrested in Berlin, but the charge is not specified.

Sir Roger Casement is an Irishman. Shortly after the outbreak of the war he went to Germany, where he tried to persuade Irish prisoners of war to fight for the German cause. There have been doubts expressed by some as to his responsibility.

MORE STRENGTH FOR FEEBLE OLD PEOPLE

If all the old people in Peterborough realized what Vinol will do for them, we would not be able to get enough of it to supply the demand. We quote from a recent letter received from Mrs. A. E. Carson of Kingston, N.Y.

She says: "I am 69 years of age, and had been ailing for a long time with indigestion. I got run-down, was weak, dizzy and could not sleep at night. I consulted two doctors who said I had hardening of the arteries and at my age could not expect to be strong again. My daughter would give me no peace until I tried Vinol, as it had done so much for her. I have taken five bottles, and my health and strength have come back, so I am able to do all the housework for my family of four, and I am recommending Vinol to all my friends."

The reason Vinol is so beneficial to old people is because it contains the very elements needed to replace declining strength with renewed vigor viz: the nutritional elements of fresh cod livers without oil, peptonate of iron, beef peptone, and a mild tonic wine.

OLDEST CITY ICONIUM.

"See All the World: See Konia"—Ancient Proverb.

A great archaeological authority in William Ramsay, considers the oldest city in the world to be the city of Iconium, or Konia, as it is called today. The modern Iconium has very much to interest the traveler, and probably no place in all Asia Minor could leave a more lasting impression upon one's mind.

The city derived its name from the Eikones or images of mud, which, according to the ancient legend of the place, were made by Prometheus and Athena at the command of Jupiter, who, after the great flood caused the winds to blow upon the Eikones and they became living men and women. Thus, according to this tradition, was the first place settled after the flood. But the traditions of the place go back, even beyond the flood to the time of King Nannakos, who was told by the oracle that when he died there should come a mighty deluge in which all men should perish. Thereupon he called all the people together to a great temple and cried so bitterly and with such a flood of tears in which his Phrygian subjects joined, that "the weeping in the time of Nannakos" became a proverb even among the Greeks of later days.

The Golden Age of Iconium, however, both commercially and politically, was not in the time of Nannakos, or even of St. Paul, but many hundreds of years later, when the Seljukion Turks, the most virile as well as the most artistic of all the Moslems, in the 12th, 13th and 14th centuries made Konia the capital of the powerful Empire of Roum. "The city was then made so splendid," it is said, "with beautiful buildings, palaces, mosques and mausolea, that the proverb arose and lasted long among the Turks, 'See all the world; see Konia'."

To Tin Sheet Copper.

To tin sheet copper on one side, says The Engineer, metal is taken of the correct gauge or within one number of that size and then cleansed with the usual pickles and by scouring with sand or swarf and sand. The sheets are then coated with a killed spirit flux. They are next placed upon a holder laid at an angle of forty-five degrees in the tinning pot, so that the excess of tin will return by gravity. The molten tin is poured over the copper sheet and any excess wiped off with mops made of plumber's tow. The oxide formed on the reverse side of the sheet from the heat of the molten tin is removed by dilute sulphuric acid pickles. The sheets are washed and dried and then if necessary rolled again to gauge and polished. For cleansing tinned articles there is nothing better than whiting mixed with a little kerosene oil, the surface being polished afterward with a little of the dry whiting or Vienna lime.

HEAVY CASUALTIES AMONG CANADIANS

VIOLENT BOMBARDMENT ON VERDUN FRONT

GERMANS ARE VIOLENTLY BOMBARDING THE FRENCH POSITIONS AROUNDV ERDUN

Bombardment Especially Severe in Avincourt Wood Which the Foe Has Been Shelling Since Saturday Morning ---French Aviators Active, Bombarding Four Railway Stations in the German Lines.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS, April 17.—(French Official Communique)—German artillery directed a violent cannonade against the French positions on the west bank of the Meuse last night, but there were no important infantry fights on the Verdun front, the War Office reported to-day.

The bombardment was particularly violent in Avocourt wood, where the Germans have been shelling the French works heavily since Saturday morning, on Dead Man's Hill and in Cumieres wood.

The French did not return to the attack on the east bank of the Meuse, where a sudden charge Saturday night resulted in the capture of German trench portions south of Douaumont, with 200 prisoners.

The night was calm on this front, excepting south of Haudremont, where artillery on both sides was active.

Aviators were active last night on the Verdun front and east of the fortress. Despite the heavy fog the French air squadrons bombarded the railway stations at Conflans, Aagny, Arneuville and Rompach.

Further Progress By British Forces

Examiner Special:

LONDON, April 16.—Further progress in the efforts of the British army advancing up the Tigris to the relief of the force besieged at Kut-El-Amara was reported to-day in the following official statement:

"Lieut.-Gen. Sir Percy Lake reports that on April 14 a heavy gale blew all day. On April 15 gradual and steady progress was made on the right bank, and the enemy's advanced lines were driven in and occupied. The enemy left many dead and a considerable number of prisoners in the captured trenches.

"A heavy rain fell on the night of April 14-15. On April 15 the weather was fine but hazy."

British Air Raid on Constantinople

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 16.—The statement by the British Admiralty on the air said on Constantinople reads as follows:

"On Friday evening three of our naval aeroplanes carried out a raid on Constantinople. Bombs were dropped on the Zeitunlik powder factory and aeroplane hangars. Another naval aeroplane visited Adrianople and dropped bombs on the railway station. All returned safely.

"The flight to Constantinople and back measured 300 miles. Although fine weather prevailed with the start, an adverse condition supervened, with wind, rain and thunderstorms."

LULL IN THE VERDUN FIGHTING

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, April 17.—The lull in the Verdun fighting continued last night. The War Office announced this afternoon that nothing of importance has occurred on the entire western front.

On the east front the Russians were active around the Dvinsk bridgehead.

French Airman Bombs a Battleship

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, April 17.—A French aviator dropped sixteen bombs from an altitude of only one hundred yards on the decks of a German warship in the North Sea, the War Office announced this afternoon.

Latest German War Loan Was a Complete Failure

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, April 17.—Berlin advices by mail say Dr. Liebknecht disclosed a fact of considerable gravity during the sitting of the Reichstag on April 8th, regarding the latest German loan, namely that it was a complete failure. The president, ministers and deputies alike made the most determined efforts to prevent Dr. Liebknecht from speaking, and the censorship prevented the newspapers from publishing anything about it.

Great fear prevails in Germany that to cover the loan the Government emptied savings banks and kindred institutions of working classes' savings. The ten milliard ($2,000,000,000) loan is a colossal mystification, and Dr. Liebknecht would seem to have disclosed this in the Reichstag in two or three sentences heard in the tumult.

The conclusion to be drawn from the above is that it would be impossible for Germany to float any further loan. Echoes of the scandal must have reached Austria-Hungary, and will have a prejudicial effect on Austro-Hungarian borrowing.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—One American was wounded by shrapnel and another escaped uninjured when the Russian ship Imperator, lumber laden, was fired upon and then set ablaze by an Austrian submarine.

One or two Americans may have been among the eleven men who perished when the British steamer Iveriyon was torpedoed off Fastnet last Tuesday, according to two American survivors.

A Bonus for Recruiting for the 93rd Battalion

Every Man that Joins To-morrow Night Will Receive $2.00.

The young men of Peterborough, who have been waiting for the physiological moment to join the soldiers, will have a chance to do so to-morrow night, when every recruit who signifies his intention of joining the 93rd Battalion and within ten days of that time passes the medical examination and is attested, will be given the sum of two dollars as a bonus. This offer is for to-morrow night only, and the recruiting rooms on Simcoe street will be open from 7 o'clock p.m. till 10 o'clock p.m. for the purpose of receiving names. The money will be paid as soon as the recruit is attested.

OPERATED ON TO GO TO THE FRONT

The example of Corp. P. T. Martin, a Peterborough resident, and formerly of the Rifle Brigade, should be a beacon-light to the young men of this city who have not seen the path of duty. When war broke out Corp. Martin, who was a reservist, promptly answered the call and re-joined the Rifle Brigade. Although suffering from varicose veins, and declared fit for home service only, he managed to get to the front in the early stages of the war and fought for many weeks, being finally wounded and invalided home. Since his return to Peterborough he continued to do his bit by working on munitions at the C.G.E. Still not satisfied that he had done all he could for the Empire, Corp. Martin presented himself at the Armouries last week for medical examination, anxious to join the 93rd Battalion. He was informed that an operation to remove the varicose veins would be necessary before he could be taken on the strength. He accepted cheerfully and is now in the hospital. When he recovers he will once more don the khaki. Surely there is something for young men to ponder over in this case.

CHRISTIAN KRUGER

The above is a very good likeness of Mr. Christian Kruger of 261 Sherbrooke Street, who celebrated his 90th birthday on Tuesday of last week. Mr. Kruger is enjoying fairly good health and hopes to live to see other birthdays in Peterborough.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT RECRUITING MEETING CONDUCTED BY WOMEN

CHILDREN'S CHORUS

The fervent interest of Peterborough's womanhood in the successful issue of the war and in the completion of the 93rd Battalion was splendidly demonstrated by last night's meeting in the Armouries. It was arranged and conducted by the Daughters of the Empire; Miss Constance Boulton of Toronto delivered a forceful address, discussing at considerable length the British ideals that are at stake; school girls under the direction of Miss Rannie sang "O Canada," and finally the major proportion of the audience comprised women. Doubtless there are women slackers. Mrs. John Allan, president of the D. O. E., who presided regretted the necessity of admitting the fact; but they were otherwise forgotten in the inspiring testimony to woman's patriotism evidenced last night. The platform was monopolized by the ladies to the complete exclusion of men, whose activity was confined to the Band's selection and accompaniments. The promised feature of seating the mothers of men in khaki on the platform could not be carried out, for the simple reason that the children's choir left little room for them had all of them been present. However, the general attendance was one of the largest of the season, numerous enough to have dispensed with most of the unaccompanied boys who prefer the rear seats where they are more or less of a nuisance unless there is some one to control them.

In his introductory remarks Mrs. Allan said that there were some mothers who apparently regarded the war as of no concern to them whatever. The sacrifice others had made, the women of France, of Britain, and even of Canada, made not an iota of difference to some women in this city, and it was necessary that all must do their share in promoting the Empire's cause.

Miss Boulton showed a clear knowledge of her subject, but her light, soprano voice had scarcely sufficient volume to overcome the immense spaciousness of the parade room and other things. She declared that there was nothing new concerning the situation that she could offer in

EXCLUSIVE STYLES

There is only one meaning to the two words "Exclusive styles" but that word means a great deal to most every Miss and Woman. It means only one of a kind. Our store is the only one of its kind in the city and we carry everything that's new in the garment line. While our ranges begin at the very bottom of low priced garments we also have the Exclusive Modes, or one of a kind style but very moderately priced. Our time is spent in studying the coming styles and both the American and Canadian markets are watched very closely. We do not buy anything unless its proven to be absolutely correct and at the right price. Note the two Exclusive suit styles in our show windows to-night, one Misses and one Women's. We always have the new things first, ask to see them. If there is anything right that's new and you do not find it in stock you may be sure, it's on order and will have it. Give us a trial. PROF. SCHLOCHOW CHANGES NAME

Prof. Schlochow, teacher of music and languages, residing at 494 George Street, wishes to inform the public that he has by deed poll changed his name from Schlochow to Sloane. Coming from Alsace, Lorraine, in 1891, he took the oath of allegiance, and again in 1915, when he became a member of the local home guard. Early in the war he tried to enlist, but being passed military age, was not accepted. Prof. Sloane has offered his services to the Canadian militia as an interpreter.

The Professor wishes to thank the citizens of Peterborough for their kind patronage.

MARY PICKFORD NOW AT THE EMPIRE

In One of Her Greatest Endeavoures, "Esmeralda"---A Photo-Play You Will Appreciate.

Of all the great dramatic successes of Frances Hodgson Burnett, "Esmeralda" is the most tender and lovable characterization ever created by this gifted author. As "Esmeralda" Mary Pickford renders one of the most touching and sympathetic screen impersonations of the year. The strong attachment for home, "be it ever so humble," which this appealing drama extols, the simple but great love which it beholds, and its dominant human note, have made its success on the stage endure for two generations. As a photoplay, "Esmeralda" is a faithful presentation of the beautiful and noble sentiments of the beloved play, in which Mary Pickford, assisted by an unusually strong supporting cast attains another remarkable triumph.

WESTERN UNITS SHONE

OTTAWA, Ont., April 17.—Hero and effective work by the Canadians in resisting the determined attack by Germans at St. Eloi last week is detailed at length in the weekly eye-witness communique received at the Militia Department. It reads:

Throughout the week, April 6-11, vigorous efforts were made by the Germans to recover the ground lost by them at St. Eloi. The struggle for possession of the mine craters marking the original German line was intense and bitter. The front of attack taken by the British from the Germans did not exceed six hundred yards.

The whole area of this former German salient was pitted by thousands upon thousands of shell holes, large and small. The explosion of the six British mines had not only affected the German front line trench, but had yet further stirred up and churned the heavy soil, sodden with the winter rains. Trees had been smashed by the hail of shells and uprooted by their explosions.

Ugly Quagmire Remains.

All signs of vegetation had disappeared. Of the former landscape there remained nothing but an ugly quagmire. Through this trackless morass of crater-filled holes, mounds and earth piles, in which at each step a man might sink over his waist, British troops had contrived to dig a narrow and shallow trench to the south of the craters and Canadian troops had succeeded in linking up the British right with the main line.

On the night of April 2nd-3rd the Sixth Canadian Infantry Brigade relieved the weary British troops in the new line. The honour fell to the 27th City of Winnipeg and 31st Alberta Battalions.

Taking over a line under such conditions was no light task. Few of the conveniences normal to trench warfare existed. Front trenches were impertect dug-outs still in embryo and machine gun emplacements were yet constructed. Communication trenches were practically non-existent and the relief had to be effected by the solitary front line trench from both flanks. Most of the trenches were at least knee-deep with water.

No time was lost by the Canadian troops in endeavouring to improve the situation, but dawn found the positions of the men in the front line still far from satisfactory.

Protection Scanty.

In the early morning and against intervals during the day German artillery bombarded our lines in this sector. The fire was both severe and accurate. Protection and cover were all too scanty. The new trench was damaged, particularly that portion of it held by the 27th Battalion, and the old British trench to the north of the craters, also suffered. Our artillery retailed a heavy fire until each bombardment in turn was silenced. When darkness fell large parties were at once sent to work to repair the damage and effect improvements. The British dead still lying in the trenches were taken out and our own casualties carried back. Parapets were raised and strengthened and some of the water drained from the trenches, all this work being carried on under fierce but intermittent bursts of fire from the German artillery.

Parapets Battered.

THERE MUST BE ORGANIZATION.

Where does Germany's really remarkable strength and staying power come from? It is not of divine origin. No; it is mere brute force, but brute force organized to the last button. Germany's strength and the measure of success she has been able to achieve, what she has done, which considering how she is ringed with foes, it is wonderfully remarkable and comes from her marvellous organization. Germany's genius for organization has pulled her through so far and will stave off the inevitable defeat some time longer. Because Germany has benefitted by organization and and she has brutalized it and made it a slave to force, is no reason why we should not profit by the effective side of the organization principle in order to overcome and subdue the force that is manifesting its brutal effectiveness in opposition to the highest interests of the humanity of the world. We can make organization a beneficent instead of a malign force.

In connection with recruiting, the lacking element of the greatest success is organization. We have had the government in one sense doing wonders in the way of equipment, and permitting the doing of wonders in retarding the work of equipment. We have had the government doing much to provide the gun, but we have not had the government doing much organized, effective work in putting the man behind the gun. The government has, with a good deal of patriotic assumption and overlordliness, called for so many thousand men, but has not supplemented that call by any considerable and effective show of interest. Dependence seems to have been placed upon the spontaneous and bubbling patriotism of the populace. Our statesmen in England have thrown out their chests and told the Mother Country what great things we have done in recruiting men. The British people have thanked these great men, but when we come to think of it, they deserve a rather small share of the gratitude the Mother Country has reason to feel for sending her the best soldiers in the world in khaki —men who fight from the shoulder, "save situations" and cover themselves and Canada with glory. If we had had to depend upon government initiative and action alone, we should never have had, apart from the first contingent, perhaps nearly so many soldiers in the field. If it had not been for the work of private individuals in, for instance, the form of Patriotic Leagues, getting behind and inspiring recruiting— effecting some sort of organization —it is probable that we should have corporal's guards where we now have battalions, and battalions where we now have brigades.

These same private—civil—organizations are now besieging the military authorities and beseeching the latter to bring some sort of organization into to play to help recruiting. They are urging the government to count noses, to find out who is fit and who is unfit for service; who can be spared and who can't be spared, to enter the ranks, without weakening our home efficiency in war work. As things go, we are enlisting men who are needed at home and overlooking or failing to enlist those who fit in no other place than the inside of khaki uniforms. Organization and tabulation of our effectiveness is not conscription, it is only making men more easily accessible and more directly subject to the influence o patriotic persuasion.

There are thousands of young men not essential to our industrial efficiency, but fit for fighting, who are not being reached. The devotees of recruiting are urging the taking of a military census as one step in organization that will bring results. There must be better organization, or more correctly speaking, there must be organization, such as has not existed in the past in regard to recruiting. Lack of organization in the matter of munitions provision is responsible for the shortages and scandals that have discouraged and shocked us. That may have been due in part to lack of time and "hurry" orders. But there has been no lack of time to put recruiting upon a soundly organized basis. There has been loss of time, and it is time that we should see that no more time is lost. It is to be hoped that the deputations will wake the government up to the necessity of providing measures of organization that will increase recruiting.

Large Attendance at Recruiting Meeting

view of the many public meetings, and the endless newspaper accounts during the past twenty months. For one hundred years we have been singing "God Save the King," now we are asked to make true and real that splendid hymn. On occasion we have been waving flags and, chorusing that Britain's fleet rules the waves, but now there has come to us the call for sacrifice that our Empire and our position may be sustained.

After mentioning the reasons why we should respond to that call, our British civilization, justice, liberty, and institutions, Miss Boulton said that British patriotism was founded upon the possession of Christian faith. The Christian man, and woman, too, must be truthful, honourable, self-sacrificing, just and humane if he lives up to the Christian principles he professes. And those Christian attributes were the essential qualities of British patriotism.

The foreign policy of Germany during the past one hundred years was briefly touched upon by Miss Boulton. She pointed to the annexing of Schleswig-Holstein, grabbed from the Danes of Hanover and Hesse wrested from Austria, of Alsace and Lorraine that were severed from France, these were striking illustrations of Germany's ambitions toward territorial expansion. Of late years she has made the complaint that Great Britain has stood in her way to securing "a place in the sun," but Miss Boulton quoted trade statistics as plain evidence of the fact that Britain's free trade policy had given Germany an immense share of the British business, and that the British navy had not interefered with her commercial interests.

Not only had Britain offered no hostility to Germany, but the country almost to a man, had been blind to the ambitions of the German Empire. Miss Boulton mentioned the warnings now so manifest in the light of the events of the past two years. The British people refused to take cognizance of those warnings, refused to listen to her own statesmen, who clearly saw the Germanic threat.

Now we are paying the price of our unpreparedness. Miss Boulton spoke of the splendid patriotism of Australia, contrasting it with our efforts and to our disadvantage. And in her concluding appeal to the men and women for their united support of the Empire she reminded the audience of the democracy we have enjoyed and which, through our enervation behind the accepted bulwark of the British fleet, we have not sufficiently appreciated.

A vote of thanks was tendered Miss Boulton, on resolution, moved by Mrs. E. H. Campbell, seconded by Mrs. A. Stevenson.

All three verses of the National Anthem were sung at the close.

THE SILENT, UNCEASING GROWTH IN STRENGTH OF THE BRITISH NAVY

Marvellous But Quiet Development Since the War Began

A London newspaperman writes as follows of a visit to one of the manufacturing cities of North Britain. In the factories I have visited, in the huge furnace houses where the flowing, incandescent metal sparkles in the bright workshops, where endless rows of machines roar and thunder I have not met with a single surly or dissatisfied face. What surprised me more than anything else, perhaps, was to see the enormous number of women, working as hard as men, carrying shells, handling machine tools, performing a hundred difficult and arduous tasks with smiling faces, and without having lost in feminine charm. Charming indeed did they look in their long aprons and overalls, and the coquettish headgear which protects their hair from the dust. A prominent engineer told me that the efficiency of woman as munition workers has been a surprise to everyone, and that in many shops they even turn out more work than men.

"This war has taught us," he said, "that under conditions like the present, the place of the men is at the front and that of the women in the factory or the hospital. When victory comes our women may proudly claim that their share in it is as great as that of their brothers and husbands."

I shall remember always a charming little picture in one of those machine shops—an unusually pretty girl with raven locks and laughing blue eyes handling her complicated machine with the dexterity of an expert though working with gloves to protect he slender hands that had never seen work before the war.

THE DECISIVE FACTOR.

But if the United Kingdom has created a gigantic army and is keeping it supplied with all the most perfect and up-to-date weapons of warfare, it has certainly not done so at the expense of its navy. We dined at Glasgow with the managing director of one of the largest and most famous shipyards in the world, who said to us: "One must never forget that the British navy is the most powerful arm the allies have. We are all full of admiration of her heroism and self-sacrifice of all our gallant allies, that naval supremacy is the first condition of a decisive victory."

"Thanks to the strength of our fleet, the whole world is open to us and all continents may contribute to ours success. The shipyards of Glasgow are the largest in the world, and already during time of peace their output was larger than the combined output of all the shipyards of Germany or America. Today their capacity is greater than it ever was, and we are working exclusively for the navy. We are constructing battleships more powerful than any the world has ever seen, battle cruisers, swifter and more formidable than ever, destroyers, torpedoboats and submarines far superior to any existing at the outbreak of the war."

GERMANS WILL LEARN.

"Besides this we have created a number of new types of war vessels for special purposes, which are constantly being added to our navy and which will surprise the German fleet if it ever comes out. From time to time we are told that Germany has made wonderful new naval inventions, new types of unsinkable ships or new gigantic guns. We here do not make any announcements, but just go ahead working firmly confident that when the strengthened German fleet comes out to give battle in the North Sea, as we hope German public opinion will force it to do, it will suffer the greatest naval defeat in the history of the world.

"Germany, we hear is making the most of her time, but you may be quite sure that we have not been idle either. Every day that passes, every hour that has passed since the war began has added to the strength of the British navy. I cannot, of course, tell you anything of the new types we have built, but we are ready to show them to the Germans the moment they will take the trouble to leave their garage in the Kiel Canal. I am absolutely convinced that the war will not end without a test of naval strength, and we are awaiting eagerly for that moment to come, for it will sound the signal of final and decisive victory." $648.50.

Verbal Inspiration of The Holy Scriptures

Evidence That the Bible is the Very Word of God

A sermon preached Sunday evening April 9th, 1916 at the City Mission by F. A. Connors, Pastor.

(Copyright 1916 by Author)

Text II. Tim. 3:16; "All Scripture is given by Inspiration of God, and is profitable for Doctrine, for reproof for correction for instruction in Right eousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

II. Pet. 1:21; "For the prophecy care not in old time by the will of man; but Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

The Verbal Inspiration of the Scripture is the Bortress of the Christian's Hope; and with this Doctrine Christianity must stand or fall. But if this Doctrine can be established, every Doctrine of the Bible is established, with it. This Doctrine forms the very basis of the Christian Faith, since all we know about God, and Christ, and Christianity, and the World to come, we derive from this Book called the Bible. "If" therefore "The foundation be destroyed, what can the righteous do?" Psalm 11:3.

There is nothing more vitally important to the Christian than this, that he should be firmly established in the fact of the Inspiration of the Bible, which is his only source of instruction for Life and the only ground for His Hope for Eternal Happiness. It is the only revelation from God to Man, and the only reliable guide from Man to God.

There are some things in which we are safe to accept the statements of men, but when it comes to a question of our standing before God, and our Hope of Eternity, We must have "Thus saith the Lord."

"Ye receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater." And here in His word is that witness. And when it comes to a choice between the word of man and the word of God, we will stand with Paul and say, "Let God be true, but every man a liar" etc.

The Bible is the most wonderful book in the world. "It contains the Mind of God, the state of Man, the way of Salvation, the doom of the sinners, and the Happiness of the Believer. It's Doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true, and its decisions are immutible. Read it to be wise, Believe it to be safe, and practice it to be Holy.

It contains light to direct you food to support you, and comfort to cheer you. It is the Travellers Map, The Pilgrim's Staff, The Pilot's Compass, The Soldier's Sword and the Christian's Charter."

The Bible was the first book that fell from the Printing Press, after its invention; and its out-put to-day exceeds any other ten books in the world. There being over 16,000,000 copies of the Scriptures circulated by the English speaking race alone in the year 1913.

There is a copy of the Bible in a Museum in Europe for which there has been offered $50,000.00 and refused.

The experience of millions of men and women of all nationalities of the universe, furnish abundance of evidence of its Divine origin. The wisest and best men and women of the world, are among those who believe and receive it's teachings; and the meanest and vilest of men and women of all nationalities are among those who deny it's Inspiration and reject its teachings.

Men and women condemn the Bible because it condemns them in a life of sin and shame. The greatest proof of the inspiration of the Bible is its transforming power in the lives of men. Wherever it is received, in whatever nationality it matters not, it lifts men and women from a life of misery and shame, to a life of purity and happiness. Proofs of its origin and infallibility are to be found in every phase of life, and its claims can be established by every law of Nature, Reason and Revelation.

To-day the most noble characters, the most famed scholars, and the greatest orators of the world, are on the side of the Bible!! and drink from its fountains; and worship at the shrine of its author.

Two men by the names of Gilbert West, and Lord Littleton once agreed to overthrow Christianity by proving that the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, and the Conversion of Paul were only fiction. Mr. West choose the question of the Resurrection, and Lord Littleton, the Conversion of Paul. The result was, that Mr. West in his effort to disprove the Resurrection of Jesus Christ was himself raised from a life, dead in sin, to newness of Life in Christ. And Lord Littleton in his attempt to prove that the vision of Paul on the road to Damascus was a myth got a vision of himself as a sinner and Jesus Christ as Saviour that resulted in his own conversation to Christ. And those two men who had so agreed to write against Christ and the Bible, afterwards wrote for the Bible and Christianity.

I am well aware that some scientists and Philosophers seek to disprove the Inspiration of certain portions of the Bible, and cast discredit on much of its teachings; but of this class we are fairly warned by the Great Apostle of the Gentiles, in his Epistle to Timothy. I. Tim. 6:20,21; "O Timothy keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane, and vain babblings, and oppositions of Science falsely so called which some professing, have erred concerning the faith.

True Science confirms the Bible! but since the Bible is in advance of Science and since everything that is true in Science is derived from the Bible or based on it, hence we must turn to the Bible itself, which is the one source of all true knowledge, and which is its own best interpreter.

We cannot receive Salvation without receiving Christ, and we cannot receive Christ without believing the Bible by which we know of Him who is the sun and centre of its teaching. Rom. 10:9-14: TURN AND READ.

The Bible is inspired, because it inspires men and women to leave home and loved ones to go to far away mission fields in all parts of the Globe, and endure hardships and privations that those who sit in darkness and superstition, and in the shadow of death might hear its message, receive its truths, and be transformed by its dynamic influence, and worship at the shrine of its author and head, Christ and Lord.

Now to prove the Plenary Verbal Inspiration of the Bible, let us turn to the words of those whose history it records, and who have been used of God as instruments in its compositions; beginning with Patriarchs and follow down the line through prophets, apostles and Christ, Himself, whose Law and Testament it claims to be, and after hearing all the witnesses sum up the evidence for our VERDICT.

I. PATRIARCHS. 1. Moses, who is the accredited author of the first Five Books of the Old Testament.

In these passages please notice that not only is the inspiration of the Bible in the general sense of the term taught, but that nothing short of Verbal Inspiration answers to the plain teaching of the word of this question. Exodus 4:15; "And thou shalt speak unto him and put WORDS in his mouth, and I will be with thy mouth and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do" again in Verse 30, And Aaron spake all the WORDS which the Lord has spoken unto Moses, and did the signs in the sight of the people.

Ex. 20:1; "And God spake all these WORDS, saying," etc. Ex. 35:1; "And Moses gathered all the congregation of the Children of Israel together, and said unto them, "These are the WORDS which the Lord hath commanded, that ye should do them."

2. David. II Sam. 23:2; "The Spirit of the Lord, spake by me, and His WORD was in my tongue", etc.

II. PROPHETS. 1. Isaiah. Isaiah 1:2; "Hear O Heavens, and give ear O earth, for the Lord hath SPOKEN, I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against Me" 2. Jeremiah. Jeremiah 1:1-14; also Jeremiah 2:1-5; TURN AND READ.

3. Ezekiel. Ezekiel 1:3;" The WORD of the Lord came expressly unto Ezekiel the Priest, the son of Busi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the River Chebar; and the hand of the Lord was there upon him."

4. Daniel. Dan. 9:20-27; TURN AND READ.

5. Amos. Amos 1:1 to 9:21; "Thus saith the Lord", etc. Sixteen times this phase is used with many like phrase in this prophecy of nine brief chapters.

III. APOSTLES. 1 Paul. I. Cor. 2:1-16; TURN AND READ.

II. Tim. 3:16; "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God".

2. Peter II. Pet. 1:21; "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man, but Holy men of. God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," etc.

3. John Rev. 22:18,19; "For I testify to every man, that heareth the WORDS of the prophecy of this book etc, etc.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF JESUS CHRIST.

Matt. 5:18; "For verily I say unto you, till Heaven and earth pass away ONE JOT or ONE TITLE shall in nowise pass from the law till all be fulfilled.

"Whence but from Heaven, could men unskilled in Arts,
In several ages, born, in several parts,
Weave such agreeing Truths? or how or why,
Should all conspire to cheat us with a lie?
Unasked their pains, ungrateful their advice,
Starving their gains, and martyrdom their price.

V. THE TESTIMONY OF SOME OF THE TRUE SCHOLARS OF MODERN TIMES.

Dr. A. A HODGE. at one time professor of systematic theology in Princeton, theological seminary, Princeton, N.J. said:—"Inspiration secures the perfect infallibility of the Scriptures in every part, as a record of fact and doctrine; both in thought and verbal expression; so that, although they come to us through the instrumentality of the minds, hearts, imaginations, consciences, and wills of men, they are nevertheless in the strictest sense the word of God".

Thomas Boston said,—"The Inspiration of the Scriptures, as THE VERY WORD OF GOD, is manifest by their majesty, their purity, the consent of all their parts, by their light and power to convince and convert sinners, to edify and comfort believers, and to build them up in the character that prepares for full salvation."

Daniel Webster said,—"I believe that the BIBLE is to be understood and received in the plain and obvious meaning of its passages; for I cannot persuade myself, that a book intended for the instruction and conversion of the whole world, should cover its true meaning in any such mystery and doubt, that none but critics and philosophers can discover it."

Prof. Gaussen a noted Swiss Scholar said, "The Scriptures are given and guaranteed by God, even in their very language."

Dr. Lee, a noted Scolar and writer, said "In matters of Science and Geographical details mentioned in the Bible, they are stated with infallible accuracy".

The Dean of "Westminster, in an address delivered in Westminster Abbey Dec 3rd. 1914, said:

"If the Bible was inspired by the Divine Spirit, how could, He record what did not take place? If an element of human misconception and mistake was to be recognised in the Bible, how could we regard it any long er as the Inspired Book; or use it as the infallible guide of life?" And then, he added, "Behind and beneath the Bible, above, and beyond the Bible, was the God of the Bible."

This I affirm to be the only consistent position and the man who denies the authority for the Inspiration of "All Scripture," has no authority for the inspiration of any Scripture. "All Scripture is given by Inspiration of God, and is profitable for Doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in Righteousness, that the Man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

One scholar of reputation has said "This passage stands like a flaming Angel with drawn sword in the path of every mad prophet, who would seek to deny the Plenary Inspiration, Infallibility, and supreme authority of God's word, in order to make room for his criticisms."

To deny the Plenary Verbal Inspiration of the Scriptures is to contradict the plain statememnt of Patriarchs, Prophets and Apostles, and to charge with falsehood the Son of God Himself who has thus testified, that "ONE JOT or ONE TITLE shall in nowise pass from the Law till all be fulfilled."

CONCLUSION.

The alleged errors and contradictions of the Bible are due to misapprehensions of its teaching and false standards by which such critics test its accuracy and authority.

These critics tell us that the thoughts, not the words of the Book were inspired, and that the writers were left to clothe them in their own words, but as we have already seen by the many scriptures cited, from Patriarchs, Prophets and Apostles, and by Christ Himself that such was not the case: Now, let us make a few brief tests, that will show further the folly of such arguments. The remarkable thing about it all is that these writers did not know exactly what they wrote; in testimony of this fact we will call Three Witnesses from the Old and New Testaments.

Dan. 12:8,9: "I heard, but I understood not, Then said I O, My Lord, what shall be the end of these things?, and He said, "Go thy way Daniel, for the WORDS are closed up and sealed till the time of the end."

1. Pet 1:10,11; "Of which Salvation the Prophets have inquired, and searched diligently WHO PROPHESIED OF IT the Grace which should come unto you, searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ, which was in them did signify when He testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the Glory that should follow.

Heb. 5:11: "Of whom we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered seeing ye are dull of hearing". Compare also II. Pet. 3:16; We have also in Psalm 22: some statements in detail concerning the crucifixion of Christ of which David could have known nothing being centuries before they took place.

We are told that there are 333 Prophecies concerning the person and life of Jesus Christ, all of which have been fulfilled in the most minute detail. Tell me if anything short of Verbal Inspiration answers to these facts? False theories of God and the Bible come not from what men read in the Bible, but what they read into the Bible.

Everything depends on the motive with which we study the Bible.

HOW READ'ST THOU?

"'Tis one thing friend to read the Bible through,
Another thing to read, to learn, and do;
'Tis one thing to read it with delight,
And quite another thing to read it right.
Some read it with design to learn to read,
But to the subject, pay but little heed;
While others read it with uncommon care
But all to find some contradictions there.
Some read with Father's specks upon their head,
And see the thing just as their father did;
While others READ through Campbell or through Scott,
And thinks it means exactly what they thought.
Some read it as their duty one a week,
But no instruction from the Bible seek;
While others read because their neighbors do,
To see how long 'twill take to read it through.
Some read the BIBLE, they don't know why,
It somehow happens in the way to lie;
Some read the blessed book, as I have often thought,
To teach the Bible instead of being taught."

CALL UP COOPER AND CARPENTER

Wife Has a New Barrel Skirt

"Where are you going my pretty maid?"
"Down to the cooperage, sir" she said
"To get designs for my new spring suit;
Just like a barrel, it will be so cute."

What with the new barrel skirt and the short box coats, coopers and carpenters seem more qualified to turn out the new spring toilettes than tailors and dressmakers. An electrician might need to be called in on some of the jobs to do the wiring on those hip-hoop effects. Even the plumber might not be amiss, when it comes to the piping that promises to be so popular a trimming on ruffle edges and as a finish around necks and sleeves.

The barrel skirt is sure to be an all around winner. Any brutal husband is in for a barrel of trouble. As may be judged from its name, the contour of the new skirt bears a marked resemblance to that common wooden receptacle used for encasing flour and apples. How fitting that this model should be chosen to encase the flower of womanhood and the apple of Mr. Everyman's eye! Of course, we often hear also of the pork barrel, but why go further into the matter?

It requires just seven yards of taffeta to fashion one of these new skirts. They are set onto a rather high waistline and immediatey begin to barrel out over the hips.

Further similarity to the genuine article is obtained by three bands of contrasting colored ribbon trisecting the skirt like barrel hoops.

Now, the real secret of the successful barrel skirt isn't so much the outer shell as the inner. In fact, on the barrel petticoat rests the success of the barrel skirt. This petticoat is built of the heavist, stiffest taffeta, stitched and corded and tucked to give it proper consistency, an round the hips and down to the knee is a series of tiny, stiff ruffles.

Of course, the new barred skirts are very short, though we are promised they are coming down a bit ere long. They are invariably worn with a tight-fitting bodice, thereby accentuating the rotundity of their outline.

As an article of wearing apparel we have been accustomed heretofore to the use of the barrel only as a substitute for stolen or damaged trousers by either bulldog bitten or bathing gentlemen in comic papers. Now they are to be worn by the very best and fairest and, consequently, we may prepare ourselves for a long list of endearing love terms resulting therefrom for use in those letters so popular in breach of promise suits: "My little barrel of sweetness," "Little sugar barrel," etc., etc., ad lib.—New York World.

Paint Has Two Duties to Perform

One is to protect—the other to beautify. Paint that doesn't do both is not good enough for your buildings.

Lowe Brothers
HIGH STANDARD LIQUID · PAINT

both protects and beautifies—and has many distinct advantages over hand-mixed and cheap paints. It covers more surface—and does it more thoroughly; it is easy to apply, enabling your painter to do the work in less time; it wears from two to three years longer than ordinary paint and holds its color well; it fails only by gradual wear and leaves a good surface for repainting.

"High Standard" saves repairs and makes your buildings worth more. You'll get best results with this good paint. Ask for color card.

Britain's Kickless Beer Alarms City's Waistline

Barroom Athletes Don't Relish the Idea of Entering the Reservoir Free-for-All with One Cylinder Beverage as the Lubricant.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The indoor yacht clubs, pinochle rinks and other damp organizations of New York were startled through a cable that the British Board of Liquor Control has discovered a new one-cylinder type of beer which contains all the ingredients of the old except the Fall of Pompei. This fluid deception, according to the garrulous cable, is sparkling, nourishing, cheap and quenching, but can do no more toward altering a disposition than a thimble of boiled milk. It contains hops but no falls.

The new beverage, according to the enthusiastic blast, of the Board of Liquor Control, settles the problem of the pickled slacker. Since the war began those who have headaches at the thought of gunfire have been drinking rather heavily. Not being patriots, they could not get interested in the war, and as a result when all England had but one interest there was nothing for a well regulated slacker to do but to force his way to the nearest bar and order the works.

A man can drink twenty pints of the new beer and experience no other sensation than that of a reservoir. Slackers who moaned at the thought of fighting, however, scream at the mention of the new beer.

In New York, where everything is highly charged, from rents to rum, the news that a beverage lacking the kick and having the general appearance of the well known waistline wrecker might be introduced was, to say the teeniest, viewed with alarm.

Howsomeyer and notwithstanding, there is reason to believe that the next barge-load of beverage arriving here from Britain will be censored of its amusement. From that moment the possibilities crowd, throng and struggle.

The smokeless cigarette, the odorless cheese, the saltless pretzel, the wartless pickle! Let the hot dogs whine, indeed. These are better days for the proboscis colouring crafts!

Kaiser Told Him Verdun and Paris Would Fall by Easter.

PARIS, April 15.—Essad Pasha, who is here to discuss the future of Albania with the French Government, said last night King Ferdinand of Bulgaria is disappoined over Verdun. He said:

"The Kaiser, during his trip to Sofia, told the King a gigantic attack against Verdun had been prepared, and pledged his word the fortress would fall and the road to Paris be opened within ten days.

"Officers in the Emperor's suite added that the Germans would occupy Paris before Easter. Ferdinand believed it all and made his court share in his belief."

How to Tell
Whether Tea and Coffee are Causing your Troubles

It seems easy to leave off drinking tea or coffee and note the results.

But you say, "I can't do without my morning cup," so the dreary days follow one another, the same old pains and aches slowly growing a little worse. Do you dare think of the road ahead, if that downward tendancy keeps on, and why shouldn't it unless you change the daily habit?

Suppose to-day you assert your right to crush habit and start a new and healthful life.

It's easy to quit tea and coffee and take on

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Japan, With All Europe Prostrate, Sees Herself World Power, Says Starr

"Expansion in Air as Result of War," Professor Declares—"Policies of Past Entirely Surpassed by Plans and Hopes of the Present."

BY PROF. FREDERICK STARR.

Famous Explorer and Professor of Anthropology in Chicago University, Who Has Just Returned from Japan.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 8.—It is claimed that since the war in Europe began 1,000 new millionaires have been made in Japan. Whatever the number, it is true many Japanese have grown enormously rich during the last two years.

The abnormal shipping conditions, the high value of iron and steel, the demand for ammunition and war supplies, the necessity of starting new companies to supply things, with the securing of which from other nations the war has interfered—these have all stimulated business in Japan to an extraordinary degree.

All the shipping companies are overwhelmed with business and are coining money. One company, organized since the outbreak of the war, has already paid six hundred per cent. in dividends.

Frantic Excitement.

The stock exchange of Osaca and Tokio have been scenes of frantic excitement. Stocks which have never paid more than six per cent. dividends have risen in prices of 200 or 300 per cent.

Gold has accumulated and is accumulating until the Government does not know how to use it. Enormous quantities, subject to Japanese order, are piled up at London and other financial centres.

It is not strange that with such conditions, extravagant ideas have taken possession of the Japanese nation. A wave of speculation is sweeping over the whole country.

It is not strange, under such conditions, that expansion is in the air. It has long been the settled policy of Japan to acquire or control new territory; her policies of the past, however, are entirely surpassed by her plans and hopes of the present.

During the war itself she has already seized Tsing Tau and the German islands in Polynesia. But these, by no means, measure the extent of her present hopes and desires.

Must Find Outlet.

The taking over of Korea and of South Manchuria was natural—perhaps inevitable. The crowded population of Japan must find an outlet somewhere, and the nearest natural area able to support a large number of immigrants was Korea.

One of the most noticeable conditions of the Japan of the moment is her attitude toward England and the alliance with that country. There is no question that this alliance served Japan in 1904. The Japanese recognize this service, but at present they feel that the alliance has become one-sided, and talk openly of abrogation of it. Jealousy of England is evident.

Japan dreams of expansion in China, and looks upon the British interests in the Yangtze Kiang as hostile to her; it is not only that England is there a prospective commercial competitor, it is that she is a political obstacle. So strong is this feeling that it is continually voiced in the Japanese newspapers and in public discussions of political questions.

Again, England is distructed on account of India, and this for two reasons.

First, the Japanese feel that, according to the terms of the alliance, they may be called upon to aid Great Britain in suppressing insurrection in India or even be asked to undertake alone such a suppression.

Field for Commerce.

But Japanese trade with India has lately grown by leaps and bounds, and Japan looks upon India as one of her most important and promising fields for trade. To take part in suppressing a revolt in India would do, so it is argued, to gain enduring hostility from India and to jeopardize all future trade.

Second, on account of the war and perhaps as a war measure, England has proposed certain duties in India. These duties are both export and import duties. Japan feels that, whether aimed at her or not, these proposed customs duties interfere with her trade development.

A third cause of unpleasant feeling toward Great Britain is found in the recent searches of Japanese steamers by British warships. There have been several such searches lately, and in theme it is said Hindus and Germans, who were passengers upon the steamers, have been taken by force, against the protest of the Japanese officers of the vessels. So serious was the feeling caused by these acts of searching and seizure that representations were made to the British Government by Japan and satisfaction demanded.

Rank Below Japan.

The Japanese are already seriously considering what is to be the condition of things at the war's close. They claim Great Britain, France, Germany and Austria will be so much reduced that in actual population they will rank below Japan. The expenses of the war have been so enormous that those nations will be loaded down so fast with debts that all enterprise will be seriously hampered.

By a process of elimination they are inclined to reach the conclusion that only two world powers of significance will remain after the European war comes to a close—Russia and Japan. They do not consider that the United States need be taken into serious account, as they look upon us as a nation so completely occupied with money-getting that we are not likely to fight wars or take a serious part in world movements.

It is certain this feeling is responsible for much of the present enthusiasm in regard to Russia. The Grand Duke's visit last winter was an occasion of general rejoicing. Much was made of him and high hopes are built as to the establishing of a genuine alliance between the nations.

Alliance Hinted At.

Just as I was leaving Japan, it was announced that Governor-General Terauchi was on the point of making a return visit, and it was more than whispered that important negotiations would be conducted with the probable making of such an alliance. Japan believes that with the present feeling of friendship, the interests of the two nations are in complete harmony.

With such an alliance it is believed that a working agreement would be entered into whereby both nations might satisfy their schemes of development in Asia. Between them China might be easily divided and exploited.

In fact, the hopes of Japan in China are very great.

One need not think that it is Japan's intention to withdraw from the islands of the South Seas, which she has taken from Germany. She has already undertaken expansive schemes with reference to the postal service, telegraph and cables of those possessions. She is already sending settlers in quantity to them. Business enterprises of various kinds are being floated in reference to those islands. It is worth while (by the way) to look at the situation of these islands on a map of the world of Mercator's projection. Their situation is about midway between the Philippines and Hawaii.

Will there be war between this ambitious and expansive Japan and ourselves? It is certain that the Japanese people, as such, do not look upon us as enemies; on the contrary, they consider us long-tried friends. In my land journey I travelled over the old high road from Tokio to Kyoto—the Tokaido. My journey had been fully exploited in the papers and everybody in the 330 miles traversed knew exactly who and what we were.

THE TITLE "A PAIR OF SIXES"

Like all things which succeed, the title, "A Pair of Sixes" seems to be just the exact name to fit the supremely funny farce which will be seen at "The Grand" on Good Friday, April 21, for matinee and evening. It refers merely to the incident in the play which caused two partners to disagree and start a whirl of fun which is now being enjoyed the country over. Beyond that, the title has nothing to do with what has been termed our great American indoor card game. There is, of course, a queen of hearts in the cast. She is a mighty big card and is probably the only instance where a lone queen beat a pair of sixes.

Bomb Put End To "Tipperary" As Played By Huns

Pte. Chas. Veenman, Peterboro' Boy With Mounted Rifles, Tells of Some Exciting Incidents at Front.

PTE. RATCHFORD MOURNED

Mr. Veeman, 597 Patterson Street, has received the following newsy letter from his son, Pte. Chas. Veeman, now at the front with the Mounted Rifles:

March 25th.

Hello Father,—Just a few lines to let you know I am well and in the best of health. We have just come out of the trenches, and we had a pretty warm time this time, but we made it pretty hot for Fritz, believe me. Well, dad, I have an interesting story to tell you this time I lent my wrist watch to an Ottawa boy who was on the same post as I was. I lent it to him to keep time for the reliefs. Well, he was on the post with two other boys from Halifax. We had just left the post when a grenade came over and hit the side of the bay, wounding the three of them. They got hit pretty bad, but they are getting along fine now. The one that had my watch on had a piece of shrapnel hit square on the face of it, putting a stop to it for ever, but it saved him from getting a broken wrist. I am sending it over to you the first chance I get. It sure is a great souvenir. I have had all kinds of prices offered me for it, but it is too good to part with. I guess the girls at the shop (Colonial Weaving Co.) never dreamt of what a good turn it would do for somebody when they gave it to me. But you don't know how I miss it on my wrist. I forget myself and keep pushing up my sleeve to look at the time, and then pull a long face.

I have some sad news to tell you this time. Poor Charlie Ratchford, the lad who enlisted with me, was killed. Poor Charlie. He was a brave lad, and he was always willing to do his share. He was well liked by all the boys, and you don't know how we miss him, for he was full of life, and often helped pass the dark evenings away. Where we were this time we were only thirty-five or fifty yards apart from Fritz, and he yelled over to us once in a while. One night we heard them playing "Tipperary" on an accordion, but we heard a different tune a little while after when one of our bombers gave them a number 9. I am with the bomb throwers now, and it is some job. Talk about celebrations, but when some of these bombs get going it has the twenty-fourth of May beat fifty different ways. Mr. Scully went back to England suffering from rheumatism. How is Chris getting along in the 36rd Battalion? I guess it won't be long before they all be in England. Don't forget to send over a few Examiners once in a while so we can still get a little news about the old home town. I haven't received any mail for quite a while now but I'll likely get it all in a bunch after a while. Well father I guess this is all this time. I could tell you a lot more, but I had better get a little sleep while we have a chance, for we haven't had much for nearly five nights. So good-bye.

Your loving son,

Alf.

COST OF TRANSPORTING THE FIRST CONTINGENT

Expense of Carrying 30,000 Men Across Atlantic Was $3,363,240, Says Acting Minister.

OTTAWA, April 17.Hon. A. E. Kemp, acting minister of militia, stated in the House of Commons in reply to Mr. J. J. Hughes, of Prince Edward Island, that it cost the government $3,363,240 to carry the first contingent of 30,000 men across the Atlantic.

Thirty-one ships were included in the armada. Mr. Kemp explained that the cost was largely increased through having to charter the ships some time in advance in order to secure a sufficient number to go in consort under a convoy of warships. As the ships all had to go to one port to disembark, this added to the cost of victualling and demurrage charges.

ST. PAUL'S ANNOUNCEMENTS

The mid-week service is withdrawn this week as Wednesday evening has been given to the entertainment of the Faithful Workers' Junior Mission Band. The young people have been practicing for a long time, and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance of the congregation and friends. The entertainment will start promptly at 7.30 o'clock. A silver offering will be received in aid of the mission fund.

The anniversary services will be held on May 14th, and will be conducted by Dr. Wm. Paterson of Toronto. He will lecture on the Monday following on the "British Empire in the Light of Prophecy."

To prevent a ladder slipping, a Cleveland man has invented pivoted hooks to be fastened to the bottom of the uprights which will engage in the surface upon which the latter is standing.

ICE MOVING OUT OF CHEMONG LAKE

BRIDGENORTH PARAGRAPHS

BRIDGENORTH, April 16.—The ice still remains on the lake and the water is very high.

Very little fishing was done this winter in the lake.

The snow is very nearly all gone out of the park and quite a number are driving up to see what repairing is to be done to their cottages this spring.

The Epworth League had a social time in the church on Thursday evening.

Mr. Copp, our teacher here, invited about fifteen of his chums, ladies as well, from the city, to a taffy pull in Mr. Kelly's sugar bush on Wednesday night. They consumed about two gallons of maple syrup and taffy. Charlie White was the manufacturer of the taffy and it was pronounced first class.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

The different gymnasium classes at the association are working hard in preparation for the closing to be held on May 2nd. The closing is to be held in the Y.M.C.A. as the gymnasium is too small for the numbers taking part. It is hoped that everyone will remember the date.

The annual meeting of the Association has been fixed for May 12th. Miss Ana Saunders, National Y.M.C. secretary will be the speaker.

The Church Bowling League schedule was pleasantly closed on Friday evening last, by a magnificent banquet which was served the five teams in the Y.M.C.A. dining room. We are indebted to the following ladies for making the affair an artistic and gastronomic success: Mesdames Meserve, McNeely, Lewis, Roper, and Misses Emmerson and Hill.

As already reported the League schedule was won by Trinity Church team, of which Alexander Stuart is Captain. Mr. Stuart and his team were present, and occupied seats of honour at the head table, at which were also seated President Meserve, Secretary A. J. Lewis, and Rev. Messrs. Pogue, Webb, Mitchell, and Capt. Rollins. Forty players were present altogether. The report of the standing of the various teams was made by Secretary Lewis, followed by the presentation of an embellished scroll to Capt. Stuart, who fittingly responded on behalf of Trinity team. Each one of the ministers present gave very spicy talks and addresses were also given by O. W. Wylder for St. James, G. Thorndyke for George Street, Mr. Sommerville and R. C. Read for Murray Street, W. Armstrong and Mr. Curry for St. Andrew's, and Marvin Kirn, and Geo. Roper for St. Paul's.

The affair proved to be one of the most successful events of the season, and was a most fitting close to the bowling season. The fine weather has called our bowlers out doors so that the alleys from now till next fall will only be open for special bowling.

A fine schedule of spring and summer sports has been outlined by the members of the staff and will consist of athletics, with group competition for Intermediates and boys, who will be marked according to the Canadian Standard Efficiency tests. Out-door games, consisting of tennis, baseball, observation trips, overnight camps, boys' camps, hikes, war canoe trips, etc. The social department is planning a moonlight excursion and garden party, and special out-door events for the benefit of our soldiers. The billiard tables will doubtless continue in favour with both soldiers and civilians.

An effort will be made by our Finance Committee to secure payment of all outstanding pledges before the first of May, in view of the fact that it is absolutely necessary that we pay in full the contractors who have made the alterations. We trust that every subscriber will not wait to be called on, but will mail a cheque for the amount of his subscription.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Directors will be held Tuesday evening with supper at 6.30 o'clock. We trust that every Director will be present.

CHRISTIANITY IS NECESSARY AND ESSENTIAL TO THIS LIFE

Some People Are Prone to Believe That Cristianity is Primarily Intended to Prepare People For Another World—Sunday Morning Service at George Street Methodist Church.

Applied Christianity was the theme of a practical and stirring discourse given in George Street Methodist Church, Sunday morning by the Rev. Dr. Hazelwood of the Social and Re-Department of the Methodist Church of Canada. The speaker took for his text a portion of the thirteenth verse, fifth chapter, of the epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Galatians — "By love serve one another."

"I don't know of any text in the Bible that more precisely or aptly expresses the aim and object of the department which I represent," said the Rev. Dr. Hazelwood. "Before the last Conference the aforesaid mentioned department was known as the department of Temperance, Prohibition and Moral Reform. Now it is better known as the Department fo Social Service and Evangelism. Social service without evangelism is not social service at all. What God has joined together let no man put asunder. John Wesley was the greatest evangelist of his day. He went up and down the country preaching the Gospel.

The Standard.

The idea prevails in some minds that Christianity is primarily intended to prepare people for another world. Christianity is just as essential to this life as it is to the one that is to follow. A conscientious and thoughtful man cannot be happy in Peterborough or anywhere else unless he is right with God. The love of which the text speaks is necessary for this life. What is necessary and essential for a dying man is necessary and essential for a living man. Now is the day of salvation, and now is the accepted time. In prayer we say —"Thy Kingdom Come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is done in Heaven." That is the standard and that is what the Master has taught us to pray for. We need Christianity right now, and we cannot be happy unless we have it. The discords of life come when someone is out of tune with God.

The Liquor Traffc.

"How does the liquor traffic fit in with social service?" asked Dr. Hazelwood. Answering the question, the speaker said—"The licensed barroom is not in harmony with Jesus Christ. It does not fit in with the social relationship of life. It was pleasing to know that the Legislature of Ontario had seen fit to unanimously support the Prohibition Bill. We ought to feel proud that we have two such leaders in the Ontario House," said Dr. Hazelwood. "Canada will soon be entirely free from the blight. The Methodist Church has always stood for total prohibition for the State. It is eighty years since a resolution to that effect was endorsed at a Methodist conference and the flag has never been hauled down."

The speaker concluded with a reference to the work that has been accomplished in the way of establishing rest homes for wayward girls, and expressed the hope that this work would be given greater impetus at the conclusion of the war.

OFFICER ARRESTED AND SENT TO PRISON FOR TERM

MONTREAL, April 17.—Lieut. J. E. H. Nolan, an officer stationed at Kingston, who was placed under arrest at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Montreal, last January, by Detectives Labine and O'Donnell, charged with the theft of $3,000 worth of diamonds, was found guilty of the charge before Judge Dowsley, in Brockville, Saturday afternoon, and was condemned to serve eighteen months in the Central Prison at Toronto.

Nolan was a guest at a wedding feast at the home of Mrs. Flint, of Brockville, early in the year, and while there complained of feeling ill. He was left alone in one of the rooms and shortly afterwards made his excuses to the hostess and left the house. With him went $3,000 in diamonds and other precious jewellery, the property of wedding guests which Nolan had removed from the room where he had feigned sickness.

6 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Cosseom, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

Citizens Were Generous on Saturday in Providing Women's Patriotic Society With a Large Sum For the Continuance of Their Gifts of Comforts to the Peterboro' Men at the Front.

$5 MORE FROM MONTREAL

The TRENCH DAY contributions totalled $648.60 and this morning a five dollar bill was received from Montreal making $653.60 and possibly the end is not yet. The ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League were delighted with the results not to mention the encouragement this generosity has meant to them. A handsome contribution was received from Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., who deposited a cheque for $60 in one of the boxes. It was pay day at the armories and Mr. Burnham simply endorsed his cheque in favor of the Kitchener League. With the exception of this gift, the boxes showed that Mrs. Wride had received the largest collection. The money was counted by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P. and Mayor Duffus, the following amounts being received—$7.50 in coppers, $130 in five cent pieces, $235 in ten cent pieces, and $190 in twenty-five cent pieces. The ladies desire to thank the citizens for their assistance, also Mr. Gillespie and Mayor Duffus, and the members of the Children's Aid Shelter for the use of collection boxes.

"Struggle For Work, With Both Sides in the Right, Will Be Most Bitter"

Women Have Already Discovered Joys of Salaried Independence, and Will Not Give Them Up

BY EUGENE BRIEUX.

Famous French Playwright and Feminist.

PARIS, April 11.—What will happen to Europe's women after the war?

I am afraid this is the most important question we will have to face once peace is declared. I am afraid we shall see a new sex. The war with its economic struggle between men and women, is taking on such a violent character that this seems inevitable.

Before the war my apprehensions in this respect were sufficiently acute, and were expressed in my play "La Femme Seule."

The man of the workshop, counter, or office, has already found a female competitor facing him and he has complained, sometimes without gallantry, generosity or justice.

But what will happen after the war?

Once demobilized and having received their well deserved homage and hung their floral wraths on the family walls and kissed their children, the men will want to go back to the work they left when they were called to the colors. But often they will find their jobs occupied by women who were called in a moment of necessity and will not quit by persuasion.

BOTH SIDES WILL BE RIGHT.

The woman will say:

"I am used now to earning my living. I have proved that I can do work you thought that I was incapable of doing. I am used to salaried independence; I am here to stay—get out."

The men will reply:

"The war is over. I have suffered for the defence of my Fatherland, my liberty and my home. I return covered with glory. Give me back my job."

Both will be right and when both sides in a dispute are right the struggle is bound to become most bitter.

It would be wise to discuss this problem right now so that the minds of the people may be prepared to accept the inevitable and so that attempts may be made to attenuate the evil.

It is undeniable that woman's cause has made another giant stride in this war. Our French women have been admirable. Enemies of their cause will say that there are exceptions.

EUGENE BRIEUX'S REMEDIES FOR THE WOMAN PROBLEM.

Eugene Brieux, seeing in the conflict between men and women in the labour market the most serious post-bellum danger confronting Europe, suggests the following remedies:

1—Man must give up his drunken habits, but he must be so uplifted as to have no such excuse that the saloon is the poor man's parlour.

2—Man must respect woman and not treat her as a silly, shrinking, necessarily subjugated being.

3—The abominable system of marriage dowries must end. Marriage must not come as a reward into respectability after miscons youth, but it must come during youth's best days so that the couple may lead together a complete life with its early struggles, anxieties and joyous successes.

4—Mothers must teach their sons to respect women.

5—No honourable woman must have a peaceful moment so long as she knows that some other woman is forced to sell herself through physical or moral poverty.

WOMEN HAVE DONE VERY WELL.

An infinitely small number of women, indeed, have ceased work owing to the war allowances distributed, sometimes with more generosity than discernment, and in the dramshop some few have learned to behave like men.

But apart from these very few exceptions French woman have behaved admirably in France's hour of need. In fact, women have done more than men ever could have expected of them.

The French woman's devotion to the soil and to her children need not surprise any one. What does astonish us is that she has shown herself so practical, careful, well-informed and wily in business, persevering without excitability, not as stubborn, but fully as prudent and courageous as the men.

Now that the women have proved their ability to conduct wisely their husband's affairs in their absence, it will not do to scoff and jeer when they demand that they be allowed to help administer the public affairs through municipal elections.

"HAS PAID IMPOST OF BLOOD."

When told that only taxpayers can vote, the woman will reply that she has paid her tax in money and nature, and that she has held the handles of the plow as well as the purse strings.

To prove that she also has paid the impost of blood she will point to the empty chair, where her son, flesh of her flesh, used to sit.

The comic sketch writers must not joke of these things. Most of the arguments against women's rights are bankrupt.

Women have displayed in their abilities both in town and in the country. We see them as cafe waiters and street car conductors. We see them doing the work which we used to think was too heavy for their "weak organism."

This weak organism has resisted the strain of the iron works. These frail hands have polished steel helments, loaded shells and verified the keying up of the guns.

I see now as I write two laundresses trying to move a heavy hand-cart loaded with linen. One of them is pulling at the shafts and the other is behind pushing. Both are scarlet with their exertion, their disordered hair waving in the wind. I admire them as symbols of feminine efficiency.

HAVE TAKEN FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

To say that women have taken a bite of the fruit, forbidden, not by God, but by man. The revelation of what they can do came to them because the men were not there to prevent their trying, or to say: 'Leave it alone. It is too much for you."

Before the war only a small number of women refused to believe that men were necessary for their support. Now let us men admit that they have proved that we need them more than they need us.

What the women of Europe may now say of themselves is:

"We are not so weak, stupid, devoid of judgment and incapable as the men said: we can run a farm or shop, give change, serve a pay counter, manipulate tools or bring up children.

"It was silly of our mothers to bring us up merely to please a future husband. I need no longer regard my fiance as a superior liberator, when he is only a humbug.

"I will not bring up my children to make a conquest of this useless master."

Doubters will raise the question of maternity and talk scornfully of childless women.

All that is true. But at least let us admit woman's right to choose the father of her children.

This Morning's Police Court

James Wilson Was Fined For Illtreating a Horse

In this morning's police court James Wilson, alias "Sunny Jim," was fined two dollars for ill-treating a horse. Wilson asserted that the animal wasn't worth more than two dollars to commence with. It is alleged that he left the horse standing in a shed over night. Wilson was also put on the black-list at his own request.

Fined Two Dollars.

Being inebriated in a public place on Saturday cost Wm. Sinclair two dollars. According to the evidence of P. C. Blade the accused was accompanied by a girl and a soldier. The arrest took place within fifty feet of his own doorway. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence.

Automobile Owners.

S. Gibbs paid a fine of ten dollars for exceeding the speed limit. Within the next few days a number of automobile owners will have to appear in police court in answer to various charges. One charge in particular concerns that of driving an automobile without 1916 markers. This, if proven, may incur a penalty of fifty dollars.

GERMAN WISHED HE WAS BACK IN NEW YORK

Talked Across Trench to Princess Pats., Including Peterboro' Boy

Private D. G. Read, son of Mr. W. G. Read, who is at the front with one of the University companies reinforcing the Princess Patricias, in a recent letter to his father said that the Canadian line was within throwing distance of the enemy. Bombing has become part of the routine of trench warfare and recently after the Canadians had given the Germans an extra dose of grenades and had themselves been in a warm corner, a German shouted across in good English asking the Canadians to let up for a while. There was a little lull on both sides.

"When are you going to let up on this?" asked a German.

A Canadian turned the question back at him, saying "When are you going to let up?"

"When we dine in London," replied the German, and the Canadians gave him a big laugh.

"Say" one of them enquired, "you speak fairly good English, where did you come from?"

"I lived for years in New York," answered the enemy, "and wouldn't mind being back there right now.

After this intermission both sides returned to their interchange of grenades and bombs over the narrow stretch of ground between the opposing trenches.

Private Read who enlisted from McGill University has had several narrow escapes. On one occasion a shell burst over him. Fragments fell around him like rain drops. Although he was untouched several men nearby were hit. This last letter from Private Read was written in the front trenches and on the way in they passed thirty stretchers coming out with their burdens.

Sir Sam Hughes' Chief Enemies, His Friends

Mr. W. A. Buchanan, M.P. for Medicine Hat, was in the city for a few hours on Saturday, on his way to Millbrook from Lindsay. He gave the Examiner a call, and as to the situation at the Capital he expects "doings" this week. Apart from the bilingual red herring agitation, he expects Sir Sam to largely hold the centre of the stage. Without pronouncing any opinion as to the merits of the matters in which the Minister of Militia seems to be involved, he says the general feeling at Ottawa is that parliamentary hostility to the Minister will be the most existent, if not the most pronounced, the members of his own party foes will be those of his own political household.

MR. COWAN REPLIES TO THE LETTER FROM DR. G. E. WORKMAN

Editor, The Examiner, — God's cause is seldom or never advanced by a religious controversy conducted in the public press. In publishnig recently an outline of the address given by Dr. G. C. Workman, of Toronto, before the members of the Peterborough Ministerial Association and some of their friends, I had no intention in entering into a controversy with Dr. Workman. Nor have I now. My one desire was, and is, to put the Christian people of Peterborough on their guard against such views as Dr. Workman then expressed. These views have been gaining ground for years, partly because those who advance them always claim to be the real champions of the Scriptures, (thus coming to us in sheep's clothing), and partly because people have hesitated to stand out against them and thus reap the ridicule and misrepresentation which such action inevitably brings. Nevertheless it is the prevalence of these higher critictl views which is doing more than anything else to kep young men out of the ministry. It is a sad fact, but true, that many people fear to send their boys to certain theological colleges for training because of the views of the Bible they may there be taught by men more or less noted for their scholarship, but lacking in spiritual discernment, and thus unfitted to retain the positions they hold. The prevalence of higher critical views explains also the lack of power in many of our modern pulpits, and the unresponsiveness of the people to such appeals.

As Dr. Workman appears to think that he has been unfairly treated as well as reported, I venture to make a few further comments by way of closing the incident as far as I personally am concerned.

Judging Dr. Workman's address only on the basis of his admissions, over his own signature, in your columns of April 10th, he stands convicted of having expressed views on that occasion that justify the action I then took. These views vitally affect the inspiration of the Scriptures and thus are calculated to undermine faith in the Word of God.

Dr. Workman says: "My object "was to show that though every "doubtful or disputed fact record-"ed in the Bible was proved to be "worthy of doubt and dispute, no-"thing essential to Christ or Christ-"ianity would be touched, much "less would it be disturbed, because "every vital doctrine of the New "Testament may be tested by ex-"perience and verified in conscious-"ness."

No person could make such a remark and at the same time believe in the inspiration of the Scriptures. By it Dr. Workman in effect says:

"Such critics as Canon Freeman-"tle and Bishop Carpenter, declare "that the Virgin Birth is not an "original part of Christianity. It "does not matter whether it is or "not.

"Critics deny that the New Tes-"tament accounts of Jesus having "been raised from the dead in bod-"ily form are authentic. It really d"oesn't matter whehetr He was "thus raised or not as the important "thing for us is not the empty tomb "but the risen spirit. In this con-"nection Dr. Denny in his book "'Jesus and the Gospel,' denies the "accuracy of the incidents record-"ed in the 'peculiar account in Luke "24: 39-43,' and contends that we "cannot conceive of their being "true. It does not matter if they "are true or not because we can "still worship the risen spirit.

"My venerable friend the late "Professor Franz Delitzsch, the "greatest Old Testament commen-"tator of his day," (who, be it not-ed was one of the most prominent of the higher critics who have played such havoc with religious beliefs in Germany), "calls the incident re-"corded in Genesis 6.2, 'unassimilat-"ed mythology.' It really does not "matter whether the Bible state-"ment or Professor Dehitzsch's "statement is true inasmuch as the "incident is not essential to Christ-"ian belief.

"Some people believe that the "fourth Gospel is an accurate re-"cord of the events and sayings it "records, but I say that that Gos-"pel is an idealized and philosophiz-"ed presentation of the Teaching "of Jesus."

Any one who reads Dr. Workman's letter carefully and compares his statements with the foregoing analysis of them will, I anticipate, see that they have been reproduced fairly. The apostle Paul says "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction, in righteousness." (2 Timothy 3.16). Note that the Apostle says "all scripture." It is apparent that Dr. Workman is not prepared to accept the Apostle's statement. If further proof of this is wanted we have only to take his own words where he admits that he said in his address "there are mythical, legendary and FICTITIOUS elements in the Bible." Webster's dictionary gives as the meaning of the word "fictitious," "feigned, counterfeit, false, not genuine." This reveals where Wr. Workman stands.

Dr. Workman writes, "I learned at College more than forty years ago that the miracles of Jesus were performed, not to prove His Divinity, but as a manifestation of the power He received from the Father because of His oneness with Him." This indicates (and in saying this I am not trying to make what would then be no point at all), that unfortunately Dr. Workman must have started going wrong forty years ago as the miracles of Jesus were performed both to prove His Divinity and to manifest the power He received from the Father. That some of them were done to prove His Divinity is shown by the fact that wehn John the Baptist sent his disciples to jesus to ask Him if He was the promised Messiah, He began to restore the sight of the blind, make the lame walk, the deaf to hear, and to cleanse the lepers, and He sent John's disciples back to him to tell him these things that thereby John might know that Jesus was the Messiah. (Math. 11: 2-5). Thus He performed these deeds on this occasion for the express purpose of proving His Divinity.

Works or Faith.

Dr. Workman says "we must work out our salvation with fear and trembling, or through cooperation with God." If that is the case then most of us will feel that we have no chance of ever justifying ourselves before God. Well it is for us, therefore, that Christ has said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you He that heareth my word, and believeth in Him that sent me, hath everlasting life and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death into life." There is nothing said here about our works. The apostle Paul put it still more plainly when he wrote: "But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith the loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved), and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God: "Not of works lest any man should boast" (Epehsians 2:4-9). Surely this makes it clear that our salvation does not depend upon our works but is the free gift of God, because of the finished work of Christ, and that all we have to doo to obtain salvation is to have faith is Christ's sacrifice for us. "For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.' (Aubrews 10:14). It is true that the works of believers will be judged (1 Cor. 3:13-15), but this will be a judgment for "rewards,' not to determine our salvation.

Dr. Workman states: "The Virgin Birth. . . and His physical resurrection were not questioned or denied by me." I am sorry that I am not able to accept that statement as fully as I would like to. While it is true that Dr. Workman quoted the views of the whole question those who do question these matters he did so with an emphasis and aymapthy which gave every reason for one to believe that he questioned them also. That this is the case may be seen from the fact that the main points of my report of his remarks were discussed with one minister as well as read to another minister and a layman, all three of whom had heard Dr. Workman speak, and all three of whom confirmed the correctness of my report. Four people listening closely and two of them making notes could hardly be as far astray as Dr. Workman's letter would seem to imply. It may be noted also, that in his letter Dr. Workman does not say that he believes in the Virgin Birth, or in Christ's physical resurrection or in Christ's blood being an atonement for the believer's sins, although his letter is so worded as to give the careless reader the impression that he does believe in them. If he does believe in them he should have said so. There are other points that might be touched, but space does not permit.

In conclusion let me add that Dr. Workman considers the course taken by me in commenting on his remarks as "most discourteous and most unfair." Had conditions been different I might agree with him, but as it is I cannot. Let us look into this. Suppose the officers of the 93rd Battalion were to invite a number of laymen to join with them in extending a welcome to a former military officer who had been discharged from the army some years before for treason, but who apparently had succeeded in living down to some extent his former reputation. This man was to address the gathering. Suppose on meeting there this man in his address began to quote the views of German officers and other enemies of the Crown ostensibly to refute them but actually in a manner certain to breed disloyalty in this country. Suppose the officers of the 93rd, sworn to defend their country's rights, not only did not enter sword of protest but accorded him hearty applause. Suppose one of these officers, in seconding a vote of thanks, took occasion to highly congratulate the speaker as one who knew whereof he was speaking and later sent a report of the proceedings to the papers stating that the address was one calculated to strengthen the loyalty of all present. Suppose the presiding officer also made a few complimentary remarks and asked all present to show their approval by a standing vote and that all present stood with but one exception. Would you feel that there was any use entering a protest under such conditions? Would you not feel that it was your duty to make the facts known at the first opportunity? Would you feel you were discourteous or unfair in so doing? I trow not.

The conditions are parallel. Dr. Workmen lost his position in a theological college in Montreal some years ago because of the higher critical views he then held. When he spoke in Peterborough he was addressing those who should have been the first to have entered a protest against the views he expressed as they were calculated to undermine the very fundamentals of our religious beliefs. Instead, to quote Dr. Workman's own description of what took place, the vote of thanks he received "was very hearty on the part of both mover and seconder and the applause expressed was very general and apparently very sincere." Under these circumstances I felt it my duty to make the Christian people of Peterborough fully acquainted with what took place on that occasion. I have not regretted doing so.

From things I have since heard I know that a considerable number of those who were present were so surprised and confused by Dr. Workman's address they were at an utter loss to know what to do. Under similar conditions again we would all be better prepared and know better how to act. Let me hope, therefore, that good may come out of it all and that further public comment will not be necessary.

Campaign To Teach Use of Alarm Boxes

Chief Howard Alarmed by the Ignorance Displayed by Two Factory Nightwatchmen

Two recent, glaring examples of ignorance of the mechanism of a fire alarm box displayed by factory night watchmen has aroused Fire Chief Howard to take no further chances. A short time ago the Metal Products night man thought he had sounded an alarm when he had only opened the door. To make doubly sure he immediately telephoned thereby giving the department the first announcement of the blaze. Last night, the Campbell Milling Company's nightwatch opened the door of the alarm box, but neglected to pull down the lever. P. C. Blade coming up and noticing that the bell had not sounded, pulled the lever, and of course, sent in the alarm.

The chief intends to visit every factary and leave an extra key which will open the nearest box. Whenever there is a change in watchmen the new man may be shown how to operate the alarm system.

The first thing to do in sending in an alarm is to keep cool, keep your head. Arrived at the box, break the glass over the key. The key is in the lock of the outside door. Turn the key and the door opens. Then pull down the lever you will see plainly before you. That sounds the alarm. In any case the instructions are tersely and plain placed before you inside the door.

Remember that the alarm has not been sounded until you pull the lever. And finally—and just as important as any other detail—remain at the box until the firemen arrive in order that they may be directed at once to the blaze.

If there was some method by which the school children, especially those in the upper classes of the city school could receive an object lesson from the Chief, the young people would grow up familiar with a fire alarm apparatus. City conveniences to be of practical service must be clearly understood, and not represent so many Chinese puzzles.

Many Millions in Interest Due

Allies to Pay American Bond-Holders for First Six-Months' Use of Half-Billion Loan.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Twelve million, five hundred thousand American dollars' interest was paid to American investors by the French and English governments through J. P. Morgan & Co., here Saturday for the first six months' use of the half billion dollar Anglo-French loan recently negotiated.

This payment is but a small part of the cash interest England and France will pour into American pockets during the next five years. Every six months they will pay, just in interest, $12,500,000, or $125,000,000 for the five years, which is more than one-tenth of a billion dollars they will have to give Americans for the use of their money in fighting the Teutons.

The interest that these two governments must pay for the use of American money with which to continue their war is enough to supply each one of 2,500 persons an independent fortune.

talking to some of the Canadian soldiers, and asking for some one here to drop him a line as he had no one to write to him. Word has been received from Driver Potter that the next Canadian mail after he had written brought him twenty-four letters and seven post cards from Peterborough. He was, needless to say, delighted and says the size of his mail amazed the other boys in his unit.

Lieut. Gordon Matthews, son of Mr. T. F. Matthews, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, and now of the Mechanical Transport, C.E.F., was home on final leave yesterday. His corps is going overseas shortly. There are a number of Peterborough boys in the unit with him, including Drivers Len. Johnston and Bert Hensley, the latter of whom was also home for the week-end to say good-bye. They returned to Toronto this morning.

Peterborough has had a large share in the casualty list as well as in the recruiting rolls. A study of the roll of honour gives some significant figures as to the part this city has been playing in the world war. Among the boys who left in Peterborough contingents or who left here since the war broke out with other units, the number of killed, wounded, missing, prisoners, etc., totals 111. These figures do not include Peterborough old boys, of which four have been killed, and five are prisoners, while the number of these who have been wounded would increase the total. Altogether some 130 Peterborough boys have appeared on the casualty lists.

Killed in action	15
Died of wounds	8
Died in training	4
Died after being invalided home	1
Drowning in sinking of Hospital Ship Anglia	1
Missing	10
Prisoners of war	4
Wounded	57
Invalided home (not wounded)	6
Total	111

Of this list 48 per cent were born in Canada and 55 per cent. in the British Isles. Of those killed or died of wounds fourteen, or exactly one-half were born in Canada. Thirteen in the British Isles, and one, Pte. J. G. Newell (formerly of the 57th Band), in the United States.

Because he considered his wife unfaithful to him a private of the 109th Battalion, of Lindsay, who was in Ottawa for the last few days, went to his home and fired a shot through the window into the room where his wife was sitting. The bullet embeded itself in the wall and fortunately did not hit the wife or her little girl, who was with her. He was arrested and allowed his liberty, provided he returned to Lindsay. — Kingston Standard.

Co. Sergeant Major W. Theobald Lance Corp. Bronson, Ptes. Lionel White and Roy Coons of the Apsley detachment of the 93rd Battalion are in town to attend the new non-coms. class of the 93rd, which commences to-morrow. Ptes. Coons is the tallest man in the 93rd, standing 6 feet, 4 inches.

This morning was featured by a kit inspection for the 93rd Battalion, every man's equipment being checked up. The process took most of the morning.

The 93rd Battalion went on a route march this afternoon for the first time in heavy marching order wearing the 1916 equipment, belts, cartridge pouches, haversacks, water bottles, etc. The outfit adds considerably to the business-like appearance of the Battalion.

MEETING AT THE AUBURN.

To-day, at the noon hour, Captain Widdifield and Lieut. Stock of the 93rd, visited the Auburn Woollen Mills for the purpose of speaking to the employees on the subject of recruiting. By the kind permission of Mr. James Kendry the mill was closed fifteen minutes before 12, when Captain Widdifield gave a short address and made an appeal for recruits. He laid emphasis on the fact that the 93rd Battalion were now ready to go across the waters and take their part in this great war, if only a few more men could be secured. In response to the appeal one young man said he was willing, and it is hoped that many more will follow his example. During the meeting Mr. Kendry said that he was very pleased to help the good work by every possible means and any other time that a similar meeting was required that he would be only too pleased to do what he could for it. The recruiting committee is at present working on a monster scheme for the celebration of the Battle of Langemarck where so many brave Canadians fell.

In the town hall, Hastings, last night, a memorial service was held for the late Pte. James Barry of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, killed in action. Pte. Barry, who is a son of Mr. Wm. David Barry, is the first Hastings boy to give his life for his country. The flags on the town hall and on many residences were put at half-mast on receipt of the news.

Sappers W. McKnight and "Nick" Carter, Peterborough boys with the Engineers, at Ottawa, are home on leave.

Greek Parliament Adjourns Until May

LONDON, April 17. — The Greek Chamber of Deputies adojurned late last night until May 3. Reuter's Athens correspondent says the recess was taken in order to give the Government a free hand to deal with the extremely complicated situation. Urgent bills were left unfinished on the calendar.

Production and Thrift

"To win the war with the decisiveness which will ensure lasting peace, the Empire will require to put forth its full collective power in men and in money. From this viewpoint it is our true policy to augment our financial strength by multiplying our productive enterprises and by exercising rigid economy, which reduces to the minimum all expenditures upon luxuries and non-essentials. Only in this way shall we be able to make good the loss caused by the withdrawal of so many of our workers from industrial activities, repair the wastage of the war, and find the funds for its continuance. It cannot be too frequently or too earnestly impressed upon our people that the heaviest burdens of the conflict still lie before us, and that industry and thrift are, for those who remain at home, supreme patriotic duties upon whose faithful fulfilment our success, and consequently our national safety, may ultimately depend."—SIR THOMAS WHITE, Minister of Finance.

PRODUCE MORE, SAVE MORE.
MAKE LABOUR EFFICIENT.
SAVE MATERIALS FROM WASTE.
SPEND MONEY WISELY.

LET US PRODUCE AND SAVE—

The war is now turning on a contest of all forces and resources—men, munitions, food, money. The call to all is to produce more and more. It may be necessary to work harder. The place of those who enlist must be taken by those at home, men and women, old and young. The more we produce the more we can save. Produce more on the farms and in the gardens. Save more and help to win the war.

LET US NOT WASTE OUR LABOUR—

In this war-time all labour should be directly productive or should be assisting in production. Make it as efficient as possible. If your labour is on something that can be postponed, put it off till after the war and make your labour tell now. Making war is the first business of all Canadians. Efficiency in labour is as important as efficiency in fighting.

LET US NOT WASTE MATERIALS—

Begin at home. The larger portion of salaries and wages is spent on the home—food, fuel, light, clothing. Are any of these things being wasted? $200.00 a year saved from waste in ever home in Canada will more than pay the interest on a war debt of $4000,000,000.

LET US SPEND OUR MONEY WISELY—

Are you spending your money to the best advantage? What do you think of extravagance in war time? Tens of thousands of Canadians are daily risking their lives for us at home. Is it not our duty to be careful and economical? Canadian dollars are an important part of the war equipment. Make them tell. Have a War Savings Account. Buy a War Bond.

EVEN THE TIME-HONOURED SODA BISCUIT MADE DEARER BY THE WAR

Manufacturers Announce Advance of One Cent a Pound—Fancy Varieties Increased as Much as Four Cents.

A STRIKE AT HOTEL TABLE

You know the common, ubiquitous soda biscuit, inevitable in the table decorations of restaurants and backwoods hotels, the same unhappy morsel that some individuals delight to grab in one hand, punch it with the other, then crumble the fragments between their hands, twist the mass a couple of times, and then deposit into the soup, well the old soda has been hit by the war. Manufacturers announce that it will be one cent a pound higher henceforth, and after that anything is possible. The five o'clock tea varieties are up from two to four cents a pound, and thus the war has even aimed a blow at the most cherished institution of the social set, the pink tea habit.

On sodas, the increase is one cent a pound, and will mean that 2 lb. tins, formerly selling at 25c., will now retail for 27 cents, and fancy biscuits are up from two to four cents. This step has been necessitated, the manufacturers state, by the scarcity of labour, the high prices of materials and other affecting conditions. Several retailers remarked that when customers meet with higher prices they will understand that the advances emanate from the manufacturers and not from the retail trade.

HE PLAYED TWO GAMES AT COST OF TOOTH EACH

Man Called at Police Headquarters With the "Exhibits" in Pocket.

ROCHESTER, April 17.—With two teeth that recently adorned his jaw tucked away in his pocket, Joseph Walulis, 50 years old, called at Police Headquarters to swear out a warrant for the man he claimed had assaulted him.

Walulis said that he went into a saloon at Sellinger Street and Joseph Avenue last night, and after a few drinks engaged in a pool game. The man he played with was something of a shark at the game and easily trimmed Walulis, who then paid for a round of drinks.

They played another game, with the same result, but then the expert who did not wish to spend his time for nothing, claimed that there was a bet of $3 up. This Walulis denied strenuously, and they left the place still garreling. Walulis claims that when they reached the sidewalk the other man hit him a blow in the face which knocked out the two teeth That ended the argument, but Walulis is now seeking a comeback by way of the courts.

Pitiful, Says Doctor

EL PASO, Tex., April 17.—"The American soldiers who are coming from Namiquipa and the extreme front to the field hospital are the most pitiful looking fellows I have ever seen." This was said to-day by Dr. W. L. Brown, who returned from Colonia, Dublan, where he went to attend Lieutenant-Colonel Tyree Rivers, of the Thirteenth Cavalry.

"Their faces show the effects of the exposure to cold, and of a diet which has been chiefly hardtack and bacon.

"The cavalrymen who made the run into the Parral district subsisted only on fresh meat, which was cooked within an hour after being killed. The result is that many of the men suffered from intestinal trouble There is nothing else for them to eat.

"The men from the front I saw at the field hospital were in rags, their trousers being torn, and their legs covered with warts as a result of their long ride.

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—After reading the communication of Mr. Newsome, Editor of the Sanitary Engineer, I have come to the conclusion that he is a far better editor than an engineer. If his explanation of the smoke test had been no better than his arrangement of vent to trap below the floor line of Fig. 2 his communication would be worthless, for to my mind it certainly shows a lack of the fundamentals of sanitary engineering.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The enclosed letter of Mr. F. S. Spence to me regarding the Doherty Bill may interest your readers:

TORONTO, April 11th, 1916.

J. H. Burnham, M.P.,
Ottawa, Ont.:

Dear Sir,—With you I agree, that no prohibitionist can consistently refuse to avail himself of the Doherty Bill.

The other part of your letter I do not quite understand. The situation is this; our Provincial Legislature prohibits any selling of liquor to Ontario citizens in this privince. Further it cannot go. We think that when the Province has done this, the Dominion Parliament ought to prohibit sale by people in Montreal, also to citizens in Ontario.

This is not done by the Bill introduced by the Minister of Justice. Therefore we think it ought to be amended so as to attain this result. If you cannot agree with us fully, we are thankful for what you are willing to help us to do. The Minister's Bill is good as far as it goes, but it would be much better if it went further.

With best wishes, I am,
Yours sincerely,
(Signed) F. S. SPENCE.

The history of the Doherty Bill is this. Knowing that in late cases taken to the Privy Council the judges had very clearly and definitely decided that each province had the power to enact all or any legislation it might choose regarding alcohol and knowing that different opinions existed in different provinces on the liquor question and know that under the B.N.A. Act the criminal or punitive law of Canada must be administered in the provinces by the provinces Mr. Doherty advised that a bill to supplement the jurisdiction of the provinces would enable them not only to protect themselves within the provinces but elsewhere in the Dominion against all offences committed in the Dominion against the provinces and their liquor acts. The Doherty Bill in a word clothes the provinces with whatever power they lacked under the Privy Council's decision, to not only enact but make workable and efficient a temperance measure. The Doherty Bill also did away with the sure fate of any Dominion measure of prohibition in provinces when partisa of different political stripe were in office. But what was our surprise at Ottawa to find that at Toronto they were continually crying out that they had no power. They refused to notice our bill and both parties agreed in ignoring it. I consulted with Mr. Doherty and straightway proceed to bombard The Toronto Star with long telegrams affirming and re-affirming Ottawa's position. At last a Mr. Macdonald, M.P.P., arose in the Legislature and asked if there was any truth in our contention. In its account of the debate The Star says that Mr. Hanna looked at Mr. Lucas and Mr. Lucas looked at Mr. Hanna, and that finally Mr. Hanna acknowledged that the Ottawa contention was correct, but that it would open up the whole question again at Toronto if the Hanna Bill was not put through as it was. So it goes through leaving to the privileged classes the right to get in whatever liquor they need, but barring all others. I condemned this legislation as class legislation and as a betrayal of all prohibition principles, and therefore also morally dangerous. It will be seen by the letter from Mr. Spence that the former total condemnation of the Doherty Bill by the Alliance has subsided. At first the Alliance called us everything it could think of because we voted down Dominion-wide prohibition as comprised in the Stevens-Marcil resolution. We did it because the Doherty Bill respects provincial rights and is immeasurably better than any attempt at Dominion-wide legislation, and now generally acknowledged to be so. People may say what they like about the Hanna-Rowell Temperance Act of so-called Prohibition, but they cannot find a flaw in the Doherty Bill which is a masterpiece of good honest legislation in the true interest of Canada and of each province. Mr. Spence uses the words "Further it cannot go." That statement is bad in law and in fact, and wholly incorrect. If a province wants to do away with every trace of alcohol it can do so. Mr. Hanna and Mr. Rowell made no effort to do so, and defied the decisions of the highest court in the realm. You ask why was the "Prohibitionists" pleased and the privileged drinker also. I give it up. Politicians might suggest a reason.

YESTERDAY'S SCORES IN BIG LEAGUES

CLEVELAND, O., April 16.—Coming from behind on three different occasions, the Cleveland Indians finally nosed out the Tigers in a ten-inning game by 4 to 3.

The Detroiters copped a two-run lead in the early frames, and, as Dauss was going well, it looked like an Indian defeat, but Cleveland tied things up in the fourth. Bagby, a recruit, started for the locals, but was yanked in the fourth, and Coumbs finished the game. The Tigers forged to the front in the ninth, but the Indians promptly tied it up, and then won out, when Graney tripled to left centre, scoring O'Neill, who had singled. Score:

TWO TEAMS FOR CAMPBELLFORD

CAMPBELLFORD, April 15. — The lacrosse fans of Campbellford held a very enthusiastic meeting and elected their officers for the coming year. R. H. Cole has again been elected manager of the team. The prospects for lacrosse are so good that they are intending entering two teams, one intermediate and one juvenile. Campbellford are determined to go further than the semi-finals this year, and nothing but the finals will satisfy.

Officers elected are: Hon. President S. J. Moore; President, B. Dawson; Manager, R. H. Cole; Secretary, L. A. Betts; Treasurer, Chas. Davidson.

LACROSSE MEETING TO-MORROW NIGHT

A lacrosse meeting will be held in the King George Hotel to-morrow evening at eight o'clock. All those interested in the national game are asked to be present, also junior and intermediate members of last year's teams.

Hun Restanrant And Hotel Meals To Be Reduced

LONDON, April 17.—The Imperial German government's order to all German hotels and restaurants keepers, that they must reduce the size of the meals they serve, both as to variety and quantity, will be effective throughout Germany beginning with the breakfast to-morrow morning.

The bill of fare will be reduced to the smallest proportions on record and guests will not be permitted to eat more than one item from any single course—and not very much at that. The butter supply, for instance, now is restricted to 1-8 of a pound per person per week. Mighty little sugar is given. Other food supplies are held to corresponding proportions.

Germany is reaching toward famine, which has been foreseen since last summer by those who knew the truth about the summer harvest, according to Francis Gribble, the British novelist who has just returned to London after a year in the German internment camp at Ruhleben near Berlin.

"There is no avoiding the conclusion," said Gribble to-day, "that the state of the German people soon will be much what the state of the Belgian people now would be but for American philanthropists.

"The date at which the catastrophe will occur depends upon a good many uncertain factors; but it cannot be long delayed."

"The 1915 summer harvest, what there was of it, was both sown and reaped while I was behind the barbed wires at Ruhleben. There was practicaly no rain from the end of March until the beginning of July.

"The crisis came. Then came the lashing thunderstorms to complete the damage. Those of our custodians who were concerned with agriculture pulled long faces and used ugly language. There was no mistake about it—the German harvest of 1915 had failed."

The novelist quoted the Verwarts, the outspoken German Socialist newspaper, to show that the 1915 harvest failed not only on account of droughts, but because:

1. The ground was not manured the monopolisation of railway equipment, by the military, preventing this.

2. Horses and carts were scarce because of the army needs.

3. Most skilled agriculturists were away at the seat of war, and old men, women, children and prisoners could not do the work.

4. The manufacturers of agricultural implements have turned their energies to the manufacture of implements of war.

"Famine is inevitable whether peace comes soon or not. Prices will be high and the value of German money has sunk so low that 20 marks will buy only 5 marks' worth of goods; besides, Germany has no great quantities of goods to export any pay for food imports."

"Some always in rows," sez she;

"An' somewhere near," sez she,
"Is a Fusilier," sez she;
"An' the Inniskillings not far," sez

"An' I tell you what," sez she,

CANADIAN TROOPS IN A TERRIBLE STRUGGLE

our new parapets. In some places the trench itself was obliterated and the dug-outs wrecked. Once more the chief labour of the night was to repair the havoc of the previous day.

On April 5th, the German bombardment was renewed with increased severity. At dawn and again in the afternoon hundreds of shells were hurled into the narrow area which had been the German salient rendering all movement therein extremely difficult and demolishing our trenches.

Our troops suffered many casualties and as companies of our 27th Battalion had held the advanced positions for three days and nights under exceptionally trying conditions it was decided to relieve them. Companies of our 29th Vancouver battalion, under the command of Captain G. I. Gwynne and Lieut. N. E. O'Brien, were detailed for the purpose. The relief was planned to take place on the morning of April 6th, between the hours of 1 and 3 o'clock.

At 3 o'clock scouts of the 27th Battalion who had been out in front of the trenches came in and reported all quiet. At 3 o'clock a terrific bombardment was started by the German artillery. Owing to the blocked and shattered condition of the front line the relief of our 27th Battalion had not been fully completed, and a few minutes after the bombardment commenced movement along the trench had become an impossibility.

A few minutes more and a considerable section of the trench had disappeared. Here and there a dugout on which no shell had fallen, sheltered a few men or the very shell holes which had blotted out some yards of the trench afforded insecure cover to others, but there was no continuity, no communication.

Each Group Isolated.

Each group was isolated, thrown together on its own resources. At 9.30 a.m. the Germans attacked. Immediately the German bombardment commenced every available gun of our artillery was turned on the enemy's positions, and valuable assistance was given by the artillery of the British forces on our right and left. Prior to opening his bombardment, the enemy had contrived to deploy a whole battalion opposite our lines. These troops advanced in fairly close formation, apparently in the belief that our front-line trenches could no longer be occupied. Over the length of the demolished trench but little resistance could be offered to them. Machine guns had been smashed or buried, rifles were clogged with mud. The few men who in this or that isolated group still remained unwounded were hopelessly outnumbered. With scarcely a check, the enemy passed over them and seized two of the larger craters. To the right and left of the gap in our front line through which the enemy had penetrated our parapets and trenches had been badly shattered by the bombardment, but resistance was still possible.

Attack Beaten Back.

Despite the tremendous shelling and sweeping fire of hostile machine guns, men climbed on to the parapets and paradoes, the better to fire at the advancing foe. Machine guns were lifted into the open and worked with desperate courage until they became clogged with mud, splashed on to them by exploding shells, or else were smashed or buried. On our right men of our 27th and 29th Battalions were rallied by Captain Gwynne and Lieut. O'Brien. The attack was beaten back, and our trenches held intact. A little further to the east, Lieut. Browne, 22nd French-Canadian Battalion, who was in charge of a machine gun in the front line, continued to fire his gun until it was put out of action, but before this occurred a number of Germans had been killed at close range. With his detachment of six men, Lieut. Browne then withdrew in the direction of our second line. On the way barbed wire was encountered. While crossing it the party were shot at by Germans, who had interposed on the line of retreat. Four of the party were killed; but having crossed the wire, Lieutenant Browne met a few more of our men who had been cut off from their trench, and with these reinforcements, charged the point from which he had been fired at. Twelve Germans were found there, one of whom was an officer. All twelve were clubbed to death, the officer being attacked and killed by Pte. Simoneau. Lieut. Browne eventually reached our trenches with his party. Of his original detachment of six there remained but two. Among the missing was Lance-Corp. Lambert, 22nd Battalion, who had already earned the D. C. M. and the medaille militaire. Soon after the trench was reached the Germans advanced on it from one of the craters, but finding it held by our men immediately retreated into the crater. On our left a considerable body of the enemy attempted to rush the lines of our 31st Battalion and to seize a small crater. Major F. J. Daly, D. S. O., who was in command of this section of our trenches, ordered rapid fire to be opened. Heavy casualties were suffered by the enemy, and the attack was turned. When dawn broke the situation was difficult and uncertain. Bombing attacks against craters held by the enemy had been quickly organized. On our left two craters were reached by bombers of our 29th Northwest and 31st Alberta Battalion, under Lieut. MacIntosh. The nearest was found to be still held by a detachment of our men. The second was unoccupied, every man of the garrison having been killed and this crater had again to be abandoned, owing to the heavy fire directed upon it.

Relief Effected.

Our right, Capt. Gwynne, still maintained his position, although the Germans had occupied the craters to his rear. About 7 o'clock in the morning an effort was made to ascertain more definitely the exact whereabouts of the Germans. Lieut. Jackson, 29th Battalion, volunteered to take out a patrol for the purpose. With four men he started to crawl towards the craters, but almost immediately three of his men were killed and he was forced to retire.

An incessant bombardment of our trenches was conducted by the enemy, and finally about noon, all his remaining rifles being out of commission and his men exhausted Capt. Gwynne decided to retreat. Word was sent through for the artillery to concentrate on the craters held by the enemy. Under cover of this fire and of machine guns and rifle fire from the trenches on the right he succeeded in withdrawing his men from an exceedingly difficult position.

Reinforcements Sent.

During the afternoon steps were taken to organize further bombing attacks against the enemy. Reinforcements from the 28th Battalion were sent up to Major Daly, who was still holding the line on the left of the craters. At his direction, two platoons of the 28th Battalion, under Captains Styles and Bidwell, occupied three of the craters shortly after dusk. Our men entrenched themselves and in spite of heavy bombardments held the craters until the evening of April 8th. On the morning of April 7th a party of German bombers approached one of the craters held by men of the 28th Battalion. Twelve of the enemy were shot dead within twenty yards of our parapet and five prisoners were taken. Later in the morning a party of forty Germans advanced in close order towards the craters. They were observed by Sergt. Reece, 31st Battalion, who was commanding a detached platoon of Major Daly's company.

The enemy were allowed to approach within forty or fifty yards. Sergt. Reece then gave the order for rapid fire, and the hostile party was entirely destroyed. Not one man escaped. During the day Lieut. Rawlinson, 28th Battalion, starting from one of our craters with two volunteers, reconnoitred the ground towards the craters held by the Germans. When within 20 yards of the nearest crater the patrol was seen by the enemy and shelled with shrapnel. Both men were wounded but succeeded in regaining their crater.

The following night Lieut. Rawlinson undertook another reconnaissance in the same direction, and on this occasion reached to within twenty feet of the German crater bringing in valuable information. In the afternoon a very heavy bombardment of the craters held by the enemy and of the German trenches was undertaken by our artillery and trench mortar batteries in co-operation with the heavy artillery of British formations on our right and left.

When night fell the relief of our battalions was effected with the exception of three companies of our 31st Battalion under Major Daly and the men of our 28th Battalion under Captains Styles and Bidwell, holding the craters. Three units remained in their positions until the following evening when they also were relieved.

Major Daly had then been in command of the trenches on the left of the craters for four days and four nights. During this time he had repulsed several enemy attacks. As senior officer present he had issued instructions or the advance on the craters and reconnaissance of the enemy's positions. He had kept the attacking parties of other battalions and men in the craters supplied with ammunition.

Good Progress Made.

Throughout the day of April 8 an intermittent bombardment of our trenches was maintained by the enemy, and our artillery retaliated heavily on the German craters and trenches. On the night of April 8-9 good progress was made in consolidating and improving our lines and communications. Some ground was gained and a few prisoners taken. On the night of April 10-11 the enemy attacked four of the craters held by our troops, and some of the front line trenches, but was everywhere repulsed with loss. In the confusion of the fighting for the craters many deeds of high dourage and devotion were performed by our men. Some of them will never be recorded, for none are left to tell the tale. Others in due course, may be garnered when the passage of time has thrown them into relief in the recollection of those men who witnessed them. Only bare details of a few of them can as yet be secured.

Enter Foe's Territory.

Lieut. J. F. Arbuckle, with Corp. Woods and Private Batson of our 31st Battalion, undertook a reconnaissance and penetrated several hundred yards into the German territory. Separated from his men in the darkness and wounded in the face by the explosion of a shell, Lieut. Arbuckle managed to regain our trenches bringing in valuable information as to the German defences. Private Batson was hit in the ankle. Corp. Woods stayed with him and bandaged the wound, but a little later was killed by a shell. All through the following day Private Batson lay in concealment within the German area and after dark crawled back to our lines. Private A. B. Davis and L. R. Seymour, 31st Battalion, moved to and fro between the craters occupied by our men and the trenches held by their company. They carried in several wounded men.

In one dugout two brothers were buried by the explosion of a shell. Davis and Seymour tried to dig them out, but another shell struck the same place, killing both brothers and wounding Seymour. Davis lifted Seymour on his back and working his way through mud, which reached over the hips, carryied him to shelter one hunderd and twenty yards away.

Lance-Corporal Everett, 29th Battalion, was out on patrol on the morning of April 6th when the attack started. He was badly wounded but after lying out all day regained our trenches on the night of April 7th, using two shovels as crutches.

Feats of Gallantry.

Sergt. James Harvey, 29th Battalion, made fifteen trips under heavy fire from our support lines to the craters. Each time he took fresh men with him and each time brought in a number of wounded.

Capt. Carr, medical officer 27th Battalion, established an advanced dressing station in the front lines to bring in wounded men.

Capt. J. A. Cullum, medical officer 28th Battalion, took out parties of stretcher bearers and brought in wounded men. Under heavy fire Capt. Cullum, assisted by Sergt. George Lock, carried in one man for whom no stretcher could be secured.

Stretcher bearers J. MacGillivray 28th Battalion, and J. Wilkinson 31st Battalion, continued to tend the wounded long after they themselves were hit.

Sergt. John McRae, 27th Battalion after being wounded, remained at his post under a severe fire. On several occasions he acted as guide in reconnaissances towards the craters, and stayed with his command until incapicitated by further wounds.

First of New Medals.

Machine Gun Sergt. F. W. Haines, 27th Battalion, had his gun buried three times by shell explosions, but each time succeeded in bringing it again into action with very little delay. Finally the gun was hit while being fired from the parapet, and Sergt. Haines was wounded. In spite of this, he went out to the assistance of Grenade Sergt. Fritz, who was lying wounded 200 yards away. It was broad daylight and the enemy's fire was intense, but Sergt. Haines succeeded in carrying Sergt. Fritz back to safety.

His Majesty the King recently instituted a new decoration for award to the rank and file of the army for acts of gallantry and devotion to duty. This medal, known as the 'Military Medal,' ranks after the distinguished conduct medal and before all war medals.

The first military medal awarded was bestowed upon a Canadian soldier, Corp. Richard Miller, 1st Western Ontario Battalion, who was in command of a support point on the afternoon of March 18, at a time when the front of our 1st Infantry Brigade was being severely bombarded.

Although wounded, Corp. Miller remained at his post until other wounded men had received attention, and until he had removed the remainder of his section into comparative safety. Having had his wounds dressed, Corp. Miller gallantly returned to his position, over several hundred yards, under heavy fire, and resumed command of his men.

Sergt. Ashby, Lance-Corp. Weir and Lance-Corp. S. Carlisle, 7th British Columbia Battalion, who after a patrol encounter on the night of Jan. 30, went out again and recovered the body of Lieut. H. Howen have been rewarded for their gallantry.

Pte. Bulger Plucky.

Lance-Corp. Carlisle has received the Distinguished Conduct Medal. Sergt. Ashby and Corp. Weir, both of whom had previously won the D. C. M., have been awarded the new Military Medal. Distinguished Conduct Medals have been awarded to Private B. D. Schwan, 19th (Western Ontario) Battalion, and Pte. J. F. Bulger, 1st Battalion, Canadian Mounted Rifleffe. Pte. Schwan was out on wiring duty on the night of March 8-9, when one man of the party was wounded. Returning to our trenches, Schwan secured a stretcher and, going out again brought in the wounded man under heavy machine gun fire. Pte. Bulger was in the trenches on the night of March 23, in accordance with instructions, he had a number of bombs in his pocket with pins loosened. Feeling the spring of a bomb fly loose he pulled the bomb out and endeavoured to throw it over the parapet. The bomb struck the parapet and fell back into the trench among a number of his companions. Bulger picked up the missile and as he threw it over the parapet it exploded. His courage and presence of mind undoubtedly saved the lives of several men.

NOW TO MAKE CHOCOLATE ICING.

An easy way to make delicious chocolate icing is to mix one-quarter cup of Fry's Cocoa with two cups of confectioner's sugar, adding two tablespoons of boiling water or cream.

Many of the best cooks follow this recipe nowadays. Fry's Cocoa gives the icing an exquisite flavour. The usual "bother" of making icing with cake chocolate, which sometimes must be ordered specially for the purpose, is avoided. Try it.

ANOTHER NIGHTWATCH WHO DIDN'T KNOW HOW TO SEND IN FIRE ALARM

Fortunately P. C. Blake was Nearby to Pull Down the Lever—Electric Storm Caused Fire at Campbell Flour Mill Last Night.

The first electric storm of the season last night was responsible for a small blaze in the Campbell Flour Mill about 12.15 o'clock this morning. There were, in fact, two fires, apparently of simultaneous inception, one on the first floor near the front, and the other in the basement in another section of the plant. One of them was extinguished with a tank of "chemical," but a line of hose had to be stretched into the other. Both fires originated from overheated electric wires.

Last night's occurence provided another illustration of a dangerous ignorance of how to send in a fire alarm. The night watchman at the mill rushed from the mill to the alarm box at the corner of Dauhousie and George Streets, broke the glass, opened the door, heard the stroke of the bell inside, and started back to the mill, under the impression that he had aroused the Fire Department. P. C. Blake, coming up from the C.P.R. Station, hurried to the corner. The watchman said he had sent in the alarm, but the policeman had not heard the bell in the Market Hall clock ring. He continued on to the box and pulled down the lever. It all occurred in a moment or two, fortunately, but under other circumstances the blaze might have got beyond control, especially when it is remembered that the telephone is not actively used during an electric storm.

The lead wires into the mill from across George Street became red hot, melting the rubber insulation, which spattered on the sidewalk and pavement. The odor of the burning rubber was carried even as far north as Hunter Street. It was stated that the nightwatch threw a pail of water on a motor which was in a blaze, and was bowled over by the heavy electric charge carried by the water from the machine.

New York Stock Market

With a scream she fell at his feet and was dead when members of the family reached her side.

Knapp's injuries are not serious and had not caused the girl to worry. They were to have been married in a few weeks.

The cost of membership in the Peterborough Club has increased fifty per cent. over last year's rates. The increase was authorized at a meeting that was held on Saturday evening. Last year's rate was twenty dollars, while the new rate has been fixed at thirty dollars. The high cost of living, due to the world conflict, is given as the main reason for the increase.

SEPPALA AGAIN WINS ACROSS ALASKA HIKE

Driving His Seventeen Siberian Wolf Dog Team, Wins Handily.

NOME, Alaska, April 17.— Leonard Seppala, driving his team of 17 Siberian wolf dogs, with which he won last year's race, was the winner of the 412-mile all-Alaska sweepstakes race for dog teams, which was finished Saturday night. Seppala's time was 80 hours and 27 minutes. Fay Delzene's team of 14 Alaskan-bred malamutes was second, and Fred Ayer's team of 14 foxhounds third.

The other contestants failed to finish.

Seppala stood the strain of the race fully as well as his hardy wolf dogs, and when he drove down Front street toward the finish line the entire winter populace of Nome, some 2,500 persons, cheered him wildly. Delzene's dogs also finished in good condition, but Ayer's were very tired. By winning the race, Seppala gained a purse of $2,000.

This is the fourth time in the last seven sweepstake races that the Siberian wolf dogs have outdistanced the malamutes.

Missing Albany Boy Found Dead In the Woods

ALBANY, April 17.—That the mysterious disappearance and finding of the body of the long lost Willie Clark, may develop into a sensational murder case, is the belief of the police authorities here. The theory of high officials is that the boy was a victim of a degenerate. The body of the child was found lying on its back about a quarter of a mile from the point where the clothing was found yesterday.

A preliminary examination of the boy's body showed no marks of violence. The dead child was partially clothed, his overcoat, undercoat, and cap having been removed. These garments were found yesterday.

H. D. House, a state botanist, going through the woods yesterday afternoon discovered clothing the boy had worn and notified the police authorities. Mrs. John J. Shea, an aunt, identified the clothing, and this morning 25 mounted men in charge of Sergeant Welch, went out to the Pine Bush to continue the search. It is supposed that the boy fell into a snow bank and perished.

On March 25 the lad, with his brother, went to a moving picture show. He missed his companions when the performance was over and for three hours they looked for Clark but were unable to find him. Then they reported the matter to the boy's aunt, and she told the police at once.

The whole police force searched for several days without learning anything except that the boy was seen on Central Avenue on the road leading to Schenectady. A farmer, who told the police that he met the lad, told him to turn around and go back kept straight on. There was deep snow at the time.

OUTLOOK FOR AGRICULTURE IS REVIEWED

Commenting on the agricultural outlook the monthly commercial letter of the Canadian Bank of Commerce has the following:

The incentive of high grain prices and the "Patriotism and Production" movement in 1915 resulted in the Western farmers attempting to get the largest possible acreage under crop, with the result that much land was seeded which ought to have been summer-fallowed. Weather and other conditions prevented the farmers from doing more than about half the usual amount of plowing last fall. Given an early spring and a sufficiency of power and labor, it will be possible to overcome much of this deficiency by an increased amount of spring plowing. Conditions as to power are highly satisfactory; feed being plentiful, work horses are in good condition and have increased somewhat in numbers. At the moment the season is estimated to be ten days later than the average and a shortage of labor is reported by a number of our branches though as yet it is serious in only a few cases. The immigration authorities, however, claim to have the situation well in hand, and it is now thought that the net labor shortage for the Western Provinces as a whole will be quite small.

80 PER CENT. OF LAST YEAR

Even allowing for the reduction in the amount of summer-fallowed and fall-plowed land to be seeded, and assuming that the farmers will make a strong effort to get a maximum of spring plowing done, the total acreage in crop this year is unlikely to exceed 80 per cent. of that of 1915. As however, last year's acreage was abnormally large, and was attained at the expense of a decrease of summer fallowing, a shrinkage of about 20 per cent. need not be considered unsatisfactory. In the Eastern Provinces the land prepared for seed is slightly less than at this period a year ago, but this will be remedied by the spring work, unless the latter is affected adversely by the labor shortage which is evident in districts adjoining industrial centres.

Efforts are being made to improve the credit facilities of the disposal of farmers in the prairie provinces. To this end negotiations are being carried on in Winnipeg between the bankers and the representative of the farmers' organization. One object is to meet the need for greater production, but the farmers, while recognizing this to some extent, desire chiefly the establishment of credit facilities which will free them from the necessity of purchasing so many of thei requirements on long and expensive terms.

Under the Agricultural Act of British Columbia, passed last year, there was established under the direction of a Commission, a system of provincial loans to farmers on the security of their land, stock and chattels. To provide funds for this purpose an issue of $1,000,000 was made last month, the money costing the Commission 5 5-8 per cent. As this is the first attempt to meet the demand for Government loans to farmers, the experiment will be watched with interest.

THE LIVE STOCK INDUSTRY

The scarcity of high prices of feed in 1914-15 forced many farmers to dispose of their hogs, but the lost ground is now being quickly recovered. It a notable, however, that farmers clung tenaciously to their cattle throughout the period of feed shortage, and the number held shows an increase of not less than 10 per cent. during the past season. A gratifying feature of the situation is the increasing number of small farmers hitherto engaged in grain growing only, who are now evincing a disposition to go into dairying and stock raising. One of the chief factors which has retarded the growth of the dairying and live-stock industry has been the lack of capital, and the recent amendment to the Bank Act permitting banks to lend to farmers on the security of live stock will no doubt lead to a marked advance in this industry.

The motion-picture industry, which uses silver salts for sensitizing films, is estimated to consume 15,000,000 ounces of silver each year in the United States alone.

TEUTONS TO DEBATE WHICH OWNS POLAND

Foreign Minister Burian Will Talk Matter Over With Hollweg.

BERLIN, April 17. — "Who shall have Poland—Germany or Austria?"

This is the burning question to be discussed, and probably decided at a conference in Berlin between Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and Baron Burian, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister. Baron Burian arrived here yesterday.

While the press generally welcomes his presence and hails the conference as a step towards a harmonious discussion and agreement on the "general situation," it is whispered in some quarters near to the Government that the Austrian statesman hurried to Berlin prompted by anxiety aroused by the German Chancellor's recent statement in his Reichstag speech that Poland must be restored to complete independence, now that German and Austrian arms have "freed her from the Russian yoke."

The Chancellor in his latest Reichstag utterance also referred to the necessity to restore the nationalities and races inhabiting the territories in Volhynia and the Baltic.

The visit of the Austro-Hungarian Premier, unexpected as it is, may be explained, well-informed observers here say, by his desire to ask the German Chancellor, "What do you mean?"

The general feeling here, concerning the impending conference is optimistic, though it is by no means concealed that there will be some strong divergence of claims to overcome. Austria, it is explained, considers herself as much the "conqueror" of Russian Poland as does Germany—with what degree of legitimacy is a question carefully evaded in the Kaiser's capital. The consensus of press comments is that an agreement, beneficial to both the central empires will be reached.

The problem of providing for the civil population of occupied territories and the Balkan situation also will be discussed between the two statesmen.

Reichstag Leaders Are Preparing To Take a Hand in New German-American Crisis

They Will Oppose to the Utmost Any Further Concessions to the United States--If Necessary They Will Break the Truce Agreed Upon a Short Time Ago.

BERLIN, April 18.—Reichstag leaders, who recently led the fight for a more vigorous prosecution of the submarine warfare, are preparing to take a hand in the new German-American crisis, it was learned today.

They will oppose to the utmost any further concessions to the United States. If necessary, they will break the truce agreed upon a short time ago and direct open criticism against the Government, if there are any signs that Germany intends to alter her submarine policies again to conform to President Wilson's wishes.

The Cologne Volks Zeitung, a powerful organ of the Catholic party, declares that the German Government has something more to do than to conduct formal examinations of its returning submarine commanders at the request of the United States every time an enemy merchantman is sunk.

GOODS FOR U. S. RELEASED

British Prize Court Permits Glove Shipment from Germany.

LONDON, April 18.—A precedent may be established by the release in the prize court of a consignment of gloves sent by parcel post from Germany to an importing firm in New York. No other goods of German origin seized by the British authorities have been released since the adoption of the order in council on March 11, 1915.

The release of the goods on the ground that they were neutral property already paid for was refused but Arthur G. Hays, of New York, attorney for the importing firm, requested that they be sold to his company and the money held by the court until he could produce proof that payment had already been made for the gloves.

BRITONS GET UP TOO LATE

But He Declares that Great Britain in War, is Great Indeed—Victory IsCertain.

LONDON, April 18.—Baron D'Estournelles De Constant, on departing to-day for France with the other French members of the Franco-British inter-Parliamentary Committee, who have been visiting England for the last week, gave to the press the following impressions of his visit:

"My conclusion is that Great Britain is great indeed and that Prussian militarism is sure to be punished, as it deserves. Victory for us is a question of time only. Our children are sure now not to be deprived of their liberties. They will enjoy their peace, not a German truce.

"My only criticism is that England has still to hasten. The people are fine and good and brave, but they get up too late. The French people are at work every morning at least one or two hours earlier than the English people."

Concluding, the Baron said: "England has still to hasten in the fabrication of shells. She has made great progress, but she has to make more and more. It is here that we want to say 'more ammunition, more ammunition, more ammunition.'"

THEY DARED FOR LOVE

WHAT MEN HAVE DONE FOR CHARMING WOMEN.

Since Mark Antony's Time There Have Been Myriads of Men Who Discarded Everything For the Ones They Adored — Sheridan Turned Coachman and William Pitt Drank Wine From Lady's Shoe.

That "love often makes a fool of the cleverest men" history furnishes abundant proofs, ever since (and long before) Mark Antony fell under the spell of Cleopatra's dark eyes and crowned a career of folly with suicide.

Sheridan revelled in the role of hackney-coachman for the pleasure of driving his adored "Nightingale of Bath" to her home night after night and exchanging love-glances with her under the eyes of her unsuspecting father; and Canning put on groom's livery and did stable work in exchange for the delight of escorting as groom in attendance, his master's daughter on her daily rides.

William Pitt, most unsentimental of men, as he considered himself, was so intoxicated by the charms of a pretty maid of Devon that he drank her health in canary out of one of her dainty shoes; and Mr. Sellwood, a notable man of his day, actually served as footman in the house of the lady he loved for twenty long years, until her husband's death set her free to accompany him to the altar.

And so it has always been—from the German baron who had his right hand cut off, because it had accidentally struck the cheek of the woman whose little finger was more to him than his whole body, to the gilded young Frenchman, who served years of apprenticeship to the law and won fame as an advocate to prove to his lady-love that he was not the butterfly of pleasure she fancied.

There is no year that does not yield its crop of similar stories of men who have proved that no sacrifice is too great to win a lady's favor. When the youthful Count Francis Erbach succumbed at sight of a peasant-girl whom he met one day when riding in the forest at Erbach, he determined that she and no other should be his wife, cost what it might. That Anna Schultz carried her dusky head to the wash-tub mattered nothing to this heir to great dignities and estates valued at £200,000 a year. He defied his father's anger, fled with the peasant maid to London, and forfeited her—a disinherited outcast.

"I do not for a moment regret the step I have taken," he said. "On the contrary, we are perfectly happy. I intend to work for my living, and I have already taken steps to find employment."

It was with the same proud spirit of self-sacrifice that Prince Eberwyn zu Reuthaim-Steinfurt, cousin of the Queen of Holland, gave his hand a short time ago in the Strand Registry office to Fraulein Lanzenfeld, the daughter of a tradesman who had been his playmate in childhood. The German Emperor himself had in vain tried to dissuade him from such a "mesalliance." He turned a deaf ear to all the threats and entreaties of his family, and formally renounced the hair-ship to £250,000 a year to his younger brother Prince Victor. And when he had thus condemned himself to poverty and obscurity, he declared, "I need not say that I am more than happy. As long as I live, I shall rejoice that I had the firmness to place my happiness and that of my bride above the mediaeval prejudices of my house."

While Prince Eberwyn was thus gladly sacrificing rank and riches for love, Count Hans von Hochberg, heir to the Duchy of Rohnstock, was standing at an altar far from his native land with Fraulein Louise Carow, a German shop girl, for whose sake he had abandoned his claim to the family estate and dignities. "I am going to earn my living as a chauffeur," this young hero of romance said; "and I know that I shall be happier sharing a poor home with the woman I love than if I were Duke of Rohnstock with £100,000 a year but without her."

It is but a short time since the heir to a [illegible] fathering clerk in the shop of Cleph [illegible] Arthur, as [illegible] of a simple milliner [illegible] of Naples, he [illegible] Love is the [illegible] dressmaker whom he brought to London to wed.

Such romances of to-day could be multiplied almost indefinitely—from the love adventures of the Archduke of Leopold of Austria, nephew of the emperor, who was content to be a social outcast for the sake of Frau Luisa Lang, former's daughter and [illegible] assistant, to the Prince of Bregenz, who, not long ago, was conducting an orchestra in a New York Theatre while his wife, for whom he sacrificed everything but happiness—the greatest thing of all—was singing on the stage.

That even crime is, at times, no barrier in the path of love we have had abundant evidence in very recent times. For we are now at war with the cleric of the French bank clerk who robbed his employers of £34,000 in order to provide a sumptuous home across the seas. His only wish, he declared, was to embezzle enough money to get away to Buenos Ayres with Mme. ——, and to ensure her the position which she deserved."

Liverpool's Chinatown.

Liverpool, England, boasts of quite an extensive Chinatown. In this quarter of the port are to be found numerous Chinese shops, sailors' boarding houses, several restaurants and a Chinese seamen's mission.

Only One Accepted.

"Father, did mother accept you the first time you proposed to her?"

"Yes, my dear, but since then any proposal that I have ever made she has scornfully rejected."

The First Pincers.

The lobster's claw is said to be the original gasfitter's pincers. There are many other pincer carrying animals, especially the scorpions, and among these we can find nearly as great a variety as in the hardware shop. Shears and scissors are very similar in operation to the pincers, and we find a number of creatures carrying such tools. The earwigs, for instance, carry a pair of forceps as skillfully constructed as any a dentist uses. The power of the big pincers of a crab's or lobster's claw is well known, and some of the modern instruments used for gasfitting are based on principles of construction somewhat similar.

Knew Only One Kind of Weight.

The young father was rejoicing visibly over the advent of his first-son. Early in the morning he was proudly in evidence at the front gate when the iceman appeared.

"Twenty-five pounds?" inquired the iceman.

"No," said the excited parent; "eight and three-quarters."

HER DREAMS CAME TRUE

MELLE. C. GAUDREAU
Roxboro P.Q., Jan. 14th, 1915.

"I suffered for many years with terrible Indigestion and Constipation. I became thin and miserable. I had frequent dizzy spells and became so run down that I never thought I would get well again.

A neighbor advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. I did so and to the surprise of my doctor, I began to improve and he advised me to go on with 'Fruit-a-tives'. I continued this medicine and all my Indigestion and Constipation was relieved. I consider that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives' and I want to say to those who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation or Headaches, try 'Fruit-a-tives'. Give this lovely fruit medicine a fair chance and you will get well the same as I did".

BATHTUBS IN MEXICO.

Made of Cement, They Are a Real Luxury in a Hot Climate.

"Unless you have been in the tropics," remarked the man who had just returned from a trip to Mexico, "you can't possibly realize how great a luxury a cold bath can be. It's not that the climate is necessarily warmer than a New York summer, but the natives have worked out the problem of bathing to its ultimate conclusions. They have invented the ideal tub.

"On the great private estates in Mexico baths are in use today which were hewn out of the solid rock centuries ago by slave labor. They are located for the most part in the vicinity of running water and are fed by bamboo pipes, but in many cases they have to be filled by the old fashioned method of carrying a bucket to and from the spring.

"In the cities the so called stone baths are made of cement. The residences of all well to do people are provided with them, and they are a feature of the native hotels. They are usually about ten feet long by four deep—baby swimming tanks, in fact.

"The tropical custom is to fill the baths late at night. By the following morning the water will have acquired a limpid coolness that acts like a tonic upon the body. When one remembers that near the equator it is almost as warm in the morning as it is at noon and that water taken direct from the city mains is always tepid the advantage of the stone or cement bath is evident."—New York Sun.

TIGERISH TUNAS.

Wild Carnage When They Meet Their Natural Prey, Flying Fish.

One time at St. Clements we sighted a feeding school of tuna, an exhilarating sight. A flying fish weighing a pound and a half or more would start from the water and soar an extraordinary distance, nearly out of sight, but every inch of that flight I knew was coveted by a big tuna keeping his place just beneath the "line" and ready to seize it the moment it fell into the water. This rarely failed. The moment the fish began to drop the tuna would spring at it like a tiger, turning and tossing the spume into the air with a splendid and electrifying rush, a manoeuver that was repeated all over the blue channel.

The sensational charge is that a school of tunas had discovered a school of its natural prey, flying fishes. At once the lust for blood and food was on, and the carnage was the result.

I have observed some curious scenes at sea, but never have I seen fear so forcibly expressed as by a school of flying fishes exhausted and at the mercy of the voracious tunas. I have had them gather about my boat and cling to its keel as closely as they could, while the air was full of leaping tunas and soaring flying fish. At such times when a school of sardines is rounded up the fishes are so terrified that men have rowed up to them and scooped them in by the pailful.—C. F. Holder in Outing.

Delhi and Its History.

Shah Jehan in 1631 built the present city of Delhi, close to the old Delhi, and made it the royal residence. The Mohammedans still call it Shahjehanabad, the "city of the king of the world." Nadir Shah, the Persian usurper, captured it in 1739, massacred thousands of the inhabitants and bore away plunder to the value of nearly $160,000,000, including the famous peacock throne and the great Kohinoor diamond. The British first came into control in 1803, when the Mahrattas were defeated near Delhi by Lord Lake. When the sepoy mutiny broke out in 1857 Shah Mohammed Bahadour, then ninety years old, took command of the city and until the English again triumphed enjoyed the imperial state to which he had long been a stranger.

"A PECULIAR PEOPLE."

Despite Diggersion and Persecution the Jews Remain Virile.

The Scriptures call the Jews "a peculiar people," and that they are and always have been. We are now progressing along in the 20th century of the Christian era, and shall be obliged to go back as many centuries before that date to reach the first mythical beginnings in the history of the Jew. The founder of the Hebrew race, Abram, afterward called Abraham, was an Asiatic sheik, or nomad chief. His original home was in central Asia, somewhere in the valley of the Euphrates. With his flocks and herds and some of his relatives with theirs, the wanderer took Horace Greeley's advice and set his face westward. In due time he reached the valley of the Jordan and settled there.

The descendants of Abraham got into Egypt, where for several centuries they were enslaved by the Pharaohs. From this point on we have a little more accurate account of their doings in the books of Moses, which deal with their settlement of the land of Canaan.

About the time of their settlement, or soon after, began a conflict between Asia and Europe for control of the human race and its affairs. This struggle culminated in the invasion of Greece by Artaxerxes, and was followed by the overrunning of Asia by Alexander of Macedon, renewed in the conflict between Carthage and Rome, and kept up in the long struggle between the Saracens, Tartars and Turks with the broken remnants of the Roman empire.

During these conflicts, Canaan lay right in the path of the armies and was often the scene of bloody battles between the combatants. There is no fight in history more courageous, patriotic or dramatic than that of the Maccabees against their Gentile foes.

About the time of the appearance of the founder of Christianity, the Romans got absolute control of Judea, and the final dispersion of the Jews began. The wanderings of the race have gone on from that time to this, until there is scarcely a corner of the globe where Jews are not found engaged in all kinds of industrial activities and mental pursuits, and generally with remarkable success. The people are as peculiar to-day as when that writer of their own race placed that epithet to their credit. After a period of 4,000 years the race remains virile, prolific and progressive beyond anything recorded of any other race in the pages of history.

Their rise in intellectual acquirements as well as in that of property has been accomplished in the face of universal and persistent opposition, most unjust and cruel. A Hebrew writer says of Ishmael, half-brother of Isaac, representing Ishmael's descendants, that "his hand should be against every man and every man's hand against him." The last part of this prophecy has been fulfilled in the history of the descendants of Isaac much more than in those of his half-brother.

Russia is no different from other Christian nations in its treatment of the Jewish people, excepting in being a survival of the unfittest. From the time when the pagan Emperor Nero smeared the Jewish people of Rome with crude asphaltum and set fire to them as the first instance on record of an ornamental illumination of a city, all down through all the Christian ages, the tyrant's bad example has been followed with considerable faithfulness in the treatment of the Jews. All through Europe in the middle ages, whenever a profligate, dissolute, spendthrift monarch bankrupted his own treasury he raised a loud cry against the Jews, and during the riots and murder that followed, the "peculiar people" were robbed right and left, while the Kings and their followers filled their treasury at the expense of the industrious, thrifty children of Israel. In all Europe there was no country that excelled England in this cruel treatment of the Israelites.

Changing Serpents Into Rods.

The Egyptian cobra is not unlike its Asiatic cousin except in the absence of the curious spectacle-like mark which distinguishes the latter. Although it is the most poisonous reptile known to inhabit northern Africa, it is the favorite among the snake charmers. These conjurers know how to render this serpent rigidly unconscious by pressing the nape of its neck with a finger. This act appears to throw the reptile into catalepsy, in which it is as stiff as an iron rod. Traces of something similar having been practiced in olden times may be found in the Bible, where Aaron made a serpent of his rod or staff.

Could Not Stand

The Least Excitement.

Was So Weak and Run Down.

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tilsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the original remedy for all heart and nerve troubles. Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE CO-OPERATIVE PLAN

A Farmer Tries It on an Auto

(By M. Quad).

I was driving across the country with a horse and buggy when I came to the wreck of an auto in the ditch, and a farmer was tinkering at it. He had a sledge, crowbar, an axe, a cold chisel and screw-driver and had worked up a nice little state of perspiration.

"You appear to have a wreck here," I said as I drew in my horse.

"Appear!" he shouted as he looked up. "If this isn't the durndest wreck anybody ever saw I'll eat my hat!"

"How did it happen?"

"How does anything happen to an auto with a fool driving it?"

"Was it yours?" I asked, scenting a story.

"One-fifth of her was mine up to last night. Now the whole sad remains belong to me. Did you ever hear of the co-operative plan among farmers?"

"Lots of times."

"Want, then, this was co-operation in buyin' and runnin' an automobile, and this is one of the results of it. The other result is that I am about $300 out of pocket and have lost a widder who was goin' to be my wife. If you want to hear all about it I'll tell you, for I guess it hain't any use to tinker any more at this blamed old thing."

The farmer took a seat on the mortal remains of the auto and drew a long breath and proceeded to say:

"There was Tom Evans, Joe Baxter, Jim Williams, and Si Perkins. They are all farmers and live about here. They are all married men, and each one has a gang of children. As for me, I am an old bachelor, but I was a-sparkin' the nicest widder woman in this conty. The four men I have mentioned come over to my house one evenin' a month ago, and Tom Evans he asks if I would go in with 'em on the co-operative plan to buy an auto.

"'How much?' says I.

"'A thousand,' says he.

"'That's $250 each.'

"'Jest so, Sam.'

"And the auto was bought?" I queried.

"She was, sir. She arrived here glistenin' like a star, and she excited the wonder of folks for 10 miles around. We got a feller from town to show us how to run her, and in about a week we was all ready to glide around the country. Bein' I was a single man and mightily in love with a widder, they said I might take the auto out first, which was very decent of them. I felt sure I could run the machine as good as any man in the state. It was a bright moonlight night, and the whippoorwills were singin' and the katydids chirpin', and that widder woman should promise to be mine before we returned."

"And did she?" was asked as the farmer heaved a long sigh.

"She didn't, stranger, and I'll tell you why. We had gone about a mile as steady as an old horse when the auto shied at a stone in the road, ran through a rail fence, wrecked the auto, and the widow gave me fits."

"It gets interesting," I said.

"Kinder interestin', stranger — kinder so. We got a machinist to tinker $20 worth of tinker, and the old machine could run again. Then it was Tom's turn. He has a wife and five children, and they all piled in. They was chippin' along as happy as darks when they came to a cross-road. The auto was for keepin' straight ahead, Tom wanted to turn to the right and his wife to the left, and the result was that the machine run into and knocked over the guide-post and then tried to climb a fence. The whole family took a spill and was scattered for 20 rods around. No one was killed, and there was no broken bones, but the bruises are yet blue, and Tom still walks bent over like an old man on account of the jar to his spine. By this time we had all got skeery of the machine; but, it bein' now Jim's turn and he not wantin' to be called a coward, he took out his family for a promenade. As the other accidents had occurred at night, Jim went out in the afternoon. He thought there might be somethin' in the night air that affected the old critter. There was seven in the family, and they was climbin' the hill beyond the red ridge when all at once the auto gave a snort and stopped in her tracks.

"'What's the matter?' asked Jim's wife.

"'Durned if I know, but she's got to go!' he answers.

"And she did go, sir — she went backwards. There was screamin' and yellin' and swearin', and Joe's wife slapped his face, but nothin' did any good. That auto kept on goin' backwards until it dumped them all in the river, which was about three feet deep at that time. They was shook up and bruised and half drowned, but they were lucky for all that. They waded ashore and left the old auto lyin' on its back in the river."

"But you got it out again?" I asked.

"Yes. We had to," was the reply. "It was in tryin' to get the old critter home ag'n that she suddenly bolted and run into a telegraph pole and wrecked herself as you see her."

"And she won't be tinkered up again?"

"She can't be. There's nothin' left to tinker, unless the blacksmith thinks he can make five wise men out of the five fools who bought her and lost about $230 apiece. I used to think co-operation of farmers was a beautiful thing, but durn my cats if I ain't through with it!"

She Coughed Day and Night.

Mrs. Fred. Pinion, Cedarville, Ont., writes: "I am sending you this letter telling what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Ten years ago I had a terrible cold. For days I could not speak above a whisper. I coughed day and night. One evening I was so bad I went down to our storekeeper, and when I went in he said, 'You better get something done for that cold of yours.' I told him, as well as I could, that I had just come to get a bottle of the best cough medicine he had. He told me Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was the best he had, and said for me to take a little of it before I left the store. I took some, and in fifteen minutes I could speak as well as ever. I think 'Dr. Wood's' is the very best on the market."

That persistent cough must be gotten rid of immediately, for if it hangs on to you it may develop into some serious lung trouble, such as bronchitis, pneumonia and perhaps consumption.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for twenty-five years. A remedy that cures when all others fail.

HUNS TURN ON OFFICER

Disgusting Behavior of German Officer in Poland

According to the Socialistic "Volkstimme" the lack of discipline among the German troops in Poland is causing the military authorities considerable anxiety. "In the village of Zhirmand, in the government of Vilna," the papers says, "a very serious mutiny broke out among troops of the Twelfth Army which are held in reserve there and the officer in command, Colonel of Cavalry von Raabe, was killed.

"The incident arose from the commanding officer's determination to maintain a discipline which was resented as too strict for troops lying in reserve by the younger officers. They were celebrating the news of some local victory by a dance in the village church and the regimental band was playing. This was against the orders of Colonel von Raabe, who had forbidden his officers to use the church as a dance hall, and when he was told of it by the priest, who protested against the desecration of his church, the colonel went there immediately, accompanied only by a single private soldier. He had no sooner entered the church than he was insulted by two intoxicated officers and a general fight followed in which the colonel was shot. An investigation was ordered. Forty officers have been court-martialled and several soldiers have been shot."

AMONG THE WOUNDED

An English soldier describes the work of the medical corps among the newly wounded as follows: We were waiting in a big wood, all the cavalry in reserve, and the rain came down in torrents. The word was passed around that volunteers were wanted to go and help bring in the wounded, and several of us went. Some of the wounded had lain three days in the fields after receiving first aid, some badly smashed, some just slightly, but there was not a word of complaint or a murmur. All showed a patience and a spirit that makes one wonder.

The orderlies worked like niggers, the doctors quietly and steadily. But the nurses—words fail me! I saw a real Florence Nightingale episode, the nurse going about the tent in which the wounded were placed with her lamp in her hand, seeing that all were as comfortable as possible. After they come home I shall always feel inclined to doff my hat to a Red Cross sister. I am proud to be a Britisher after what I have seen.

Harriman Told Him.

Harriman had an almost supernatural instinct for knowing what was going on and who was doing it in the mysteries of stock manipulation. Once when Southern Pacific had been going up fast, Harriman and various banking houses buying in concert, he called up on the telephone one of his private brokers. "Somebody is selling," he said. "Yes, sir," was the answer. "Well, hand the market 25,000 for me." Immediately he called up the head of a banking firm much interested in the market. "Who's selling Southern Pacific?" he asked. "I don't know; we haven't been able to find out," was the answer. "I'll tell you," snapped Harriman; "it's your house." And he cut off the connection before any reply to him could be made.—Exchange.

CHANCE FORECASTS.

Writers of Old Who Dimly Pointed to Modern Inventions.

Chance phrases in the literary works of other days describe with uncanny exactness inventions of far later times. For instance, we find in the "Transformations" of Strada the Roman, which were published in the year 1617, what might be held to embody a crude description of wireless telegraphy.

Strada represents two friends as carrying on a correspondence by means of a "certain loadstone which has such virtue in it that, if it touches two needles when one of the needles begins to move, the other, although at ever so great a distance, moves at the same time and in the same manner."

In 1674 Robert Hooke published a work wherein he observed that as glasses improve the vision so ways might be found to improve our other senses. "It is not impossible," says he, "to hear a whisper a distance of a furlong, and perhaps the nature of the thing would not make it impossible although that furlong should be ten times multiplied." This seems to be a fair forecast of the telephone.

In "Gulliver's Travels" Swift causes his hero to relate in the voyage to Laputa that the astronomers there "have likewise discovered the two lesser stars or satellites which revolve about Mars." This has been held to constitute a satire on sham science. Nevertheless Professor Asaph Hall a few years ago discovered the two tiny satellites.

It was more than 1,700 years ago that Lucian gave an account of the manner wherein the inhabitants of the moon drank "air squeezed or compressed into a goblet" so that it formed a kind of dew. This clearly suggests liquid air.

The same writer in "Vera Historia" humorously and at some length describes an aerial ship the sails of which were inflated by a whirlwind, thus impelling it through space to the moon.—Harper's.

SYSTEMS IN GAMBLING.

Monte Carlo Just Smiles at Them and Keeps on Winning.

There are only two games played at Monte Carlo—roulette and a simple card game called trente et quarante. One is assured that these games are played quite fairly and that the percentage in favor of the bank is 51 to 60. Whatever it may be, this certain percentage in favor of the tables overcomes all systems that human ingenuity can work out by any law of averages. M. Blanc will permit you to play any way you like, and to double your bet as often as you like until it reaches 6,000 francs at roulette or 20,000 francs at trente et quarante. Then you must begin over again, for it is quite clear that if one were permitted to double indefinitely it would only be a question of time and sufficient money to put M. Blanc out of business.

Thus it happens that M. Blanc, who takes no chance, wins against all those who are permitted to take any sort of chance they like. Sir Hiram Maxim disposed of all systems when he shattered a popular delusion in these words: "If red has come up twenty times in succession it is just as likely to come up at the twenty-first time as it would be if it had not come up before for a week. Each particular coup is governed altogether by the physical conditions existing at that particular instant. The ball spins round a great many times in a groove. When its momentum is used up it comes in contact with several pieces of brass and finally tumbles into a pocket in the wheel which is rotating in an opposite direction. It is a pure and unadulterated question of chance, and it is not influenced in the least by anything that has ever taken place before or that will take place in the future."—Melville Davisson Post in Saturday Evening Post.

ECONOMY IN ROYAL HOMES

King and Queen Set Splendid Example to Their Subjects

Almost half the staff at Buckingham Palace, who "retired" for duty at the front. The King allows no wine at table, and there is a short, war-time menu. In dress the women of the royal family have long shown an example of self-denial. Queen Mary also insists on economies in all the bazaars and other entertainments for charities which she recognizes by her name of presence. She will have nothing to do with any cause which is not run on businesslike lines, and is of opinion that a good deal too much money is often wasted on expenses of charities where the results are meagre. In her household, the Queen takes great trouble to prevent waste at any time. She curtailed many customary expenses. One of the many Court institutions she reduced in cost is the Court orchestra. At Princess Christian's house in Pall Mall, the door is now opened, not by a sergeant footman or any other grandiose royal servant, but by a parlor maid [illegible] uniform.

Careless Use of Soap Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

DIVIDING A CORPSE

Scheming Huns Prepare to Quarrel With Austrians Over Poland

The fate of conquered Russian Poland is hanging in the balance, according to German writers. Three different schemes are being discussed in Berlin. The first scheme, whose originators are the Kaiser, Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, and Herr Delbrueck, provides for the incorporation into Prussia of the Polish governments of Lomza, Suwalki and Courland. The governments of Vilna, Kovno, Minsk, and Grodno are to constitute the new kingdom of Poland preferably with one of the Kaiser's younger sons as king, and the kingdom must enter into a military and customs convention with Germany.

The second project, advocated by the German Crown Prince and Field Marshal von Hindenburg, suggests that Poland be divided between Germany and Austria, the former country to get three-fifths of the conquered territory, including the city of Warsaw. Germany is also to have all the land along the Baltic coast now in her possession. The third plan, which emanates from Austria, provides for an autonomous Kingdom of Poland under the suzerainty of Austria. This plan is said to be the most favored one, because it is considered most likely to be accepted by the civil population of Poland, and because it will permit of an immediate mobilization of all men of military age still remaining in the unhappy country.

In the meantime all reports from Poland agree that conditions there are going from bad to worse. The sufferings of the population, it is said by the German press, surpasses all imagination. Industry, commerce, and farming alike are stagnant, and even the formerly wealthy classes are on the verge of starvation. Germany, is, of course, utterly unable to render any assistance, according to the Berlin papers.

Everybody Knits

One of the elderly British peers has taken to knitting as an alternative to smoking. There are high precedents for the sock knitting peer. The Prince of Wales and his younger brother learned to knit as children, and articles knitted by them have often been in the royal gifts to Queen Mary's Needlework Guild. Another Princely votary of the knitting needles was the Grand Duke of Hesse, only son of the English Princess Alice, but now fighting in the ranks of the Germans. He continued his knitting even after his marriage with his cousin, a daughter of the late Duke of Edinburgh. As a Princess, now the Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia, is devoted to golf and other outdoor sports, it is easy to believe that her spouse's taste for knitting and similar fireside occupations had something to do with the young couple's divorce.

In the workshop or factory, when an accident occurs, an immediate application of Zam-Buk will save much suffering and consequent loss of time. There is nothing like Zam-Buk for stopping pain, and being a strong antiseptic it destroys all germs and prevents wounds from festering.

Mr. J. Beason, an iron-worker, of Sheridan St., Brantford, Ont., says: "I am always getting bits of metal in my hands, which invariably begin to fester unless I apply Zam-Buk. Needless to say, I am never without a box of Zam-Buk."

Mr. Austin Finlayson, of Esk, Sask., writes: "While at work I cut my hand with a saw. Not thinking it serious, I neglected the cut until it became very sore and festered. I then applied Zam-Buk, which soon drew out the inflammation and healed the cut. Had I only applied Zam-Buk in the first place, I would have been saved much pain and inconvenience."

Indigestion Resulted From Bad Case of Inactive Liver

Experience Proved That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Exactly What Was Needed

If every sufferer from indigestion would study his case as did the writer of this letter the great majority would find sluggish action of the liver and bowels to be the cause of trouble.

It is then an easy way to finding a cure, for there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to awaken the action of the liver, kidneys and forming their natural functions the system is thoroughly cleansed of all poisonous waste matter and the process of digestion is no longer impeded.

Mrs. W. L. Jones, Hill Spring, Alta., writes: "I have often thought I would write and tell you how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's medicines, especially Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I suffered terribly from indigestion and did not know what was the cause. I got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was so improved that I began to study the malady. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the liver working right, I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion, the nervous spells vanished and the 'blues' flew away. I am never sick now, but should the old trouble return, I know how to cure it quickly.'

There is a whole host of derangements which disappear when the liver is set right. Biliousness, indigestion, headache, irritability, constipation are a few of the more common results of torpid liver action. By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you can control all such disorders. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' AND SMALL WOMEN'S COAT SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

This is a suit that will make a strong appeal, not alone because it has the new shoulder cape that has been very well received in fashion circles, but because a very smart but simpler model is the result of omitting the cape. In this season, allowing us so many liberties in combining or adjusting to suit the fancy, we may leave off the cape or make it detachable—note the view in the upper small illustration. The adjustable collar may clasp the neck or roll open, providing against weather changes, and is in correct style worn either way.

The fronts are faced with material of which the collar is made and long enough to reach the cape line at front. At each side a belt confines the fulness, leaving the front and back to fall free; this arrangement is an interesting feature. The skirt is in two gores, every fold of its fulness draping perfectly. The buttons on the side belts are in accord with those used to fasten the garment.

To make in size 16 will require 4¾ yards 36 inch material with ½ yard satin or other goods to trim.

By sending 10 cents to the office of this publication you may obtain this pattern

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

"COOKING A PILL."

That Is What Opium Smokers Call "Hitting the Pipe."

The opium smoker in the act of smoking is said to be "cooking a pill." Smokers of tobacco in seeing opium pipes have been misled into the belief that the large bowl of the pipe is filled with opium when really the "pill" is simply pasted over a tiny opening in the cover of the bowl. Heating of the bowl produces dense fumes, which are drawn through the bowl and the stem of the pipe into the smoker's mouth.

Neither does one pipe of opium produce stupor. A "pill" dazes only even an inexperienced smoker as a large drink would affect a person unused to alcohol. The opium users who have been pictured stretched on banks of opium dens in utter stupor have been saturated with the drug.

Reclining on a bed, the smoker places the layout within easy reach and lights the lamp. Peanut oil, burning slowly and without evil odors or fumes, is used exclusively. The smoker is then ready to prepare his "pill."

The yen-hok, or dipper, a long, needle shaped instrument, is put into the opium receptacle and turned slowly in the black and sticky substance until a small quantity of opium adheres to the point. It is then placed over the flame of the lamp, and, turning the dipper, the smoker rolls and cooks the "pill" until it is ready for the pipe.

The tiny speck is then thrust into the opening of the bowl, which, held above the lamp, slowly begins to produce opium fumes, which are drawn in by the smoker through the stem of his pipe. The "pill" lasts only from thirty to forty seconds, and to enjoy another smoke the same preparations have to be repeated.—New York Tribune.

BEAUTY CULTURE.

How To Become "Divinely Fair" With Little Trouble.

If you are desirous of being "most divinely fair," then adhere to the beauty program given below, as it will do the means in giving you a healthy body and a comely face. If you are skeptical of this way of living, at least reserve your opinion until you have had an opportunity to try it out. There can be no question what you decision will finally be.

The day of the woman who craves health and beauty should be laid out as follows.

When you arise in the morning run to the window, which should have been open all night, and take twenty deep, full breaths.

Practice some simple all round exercise for five minutes.

Take either a warm or a cold sponge bath or both. If you do not react well after a cold plunge, omit it in the future, as it is not for you.

Go downstairs, and twenty minutes before you breakfast drink two glasses of hot water, not so warm that it scalds the mouth nor so cool that it nauseates.

Eat a light breakfast, refraining from meat.

Take a short walk for a mile or more, walking along briskly with chest thrown up and out and head held erect.

Work.

Eat a simple lunch.

Work.

Toward evening walk for an hour if you feel so disposed.

Twenty minutes before you sit down to the dinner table drink two glasses of hot water.

Dinner.

Rest or recreation.

Sleep for nine or ten hours.

Taking the Count

A doctor in an Iowa town had been very busy for several days and was worn out and sleepy when he got to bed one morning about two o'clock.

Just as he dropped off a summons came from a house half a mile away. The lady of the house, the call said, was dying of a heart difficulty.

The sleepy doctor got into his clothes somehow and went to the house, where the patient—a very stout woman—was in bed, breathing stertorously.

The doctor could find nothing specially wrong, but the woman was panicky.

"Cough!" he ordered. She could not. Then he put his ear over her heart and said: "Count slowly."

Next thing he knew he woke to hear the woman counting faintly:

"Ten thousand and forty-seven—ten thousand and forty-eight—"

SHORT TRIALS.

How Cases Were Hustled After Dinner in the Old Days.

In these days of criminal trials long drawn out it may not be uninteresting to glance back at a time when, in England at least, complaint ran in the opposite direction. Such were the earlier years of Queen Victoria, when the old criminal code still survived in much of its archaic barbarity, and the picturesqueness of legal procedure inadequately compensated for its cruelty.

The late Lord Brampton, better known as Sir Henry Hawkins, refers in his Reminiscences to the scandal of what he calls the "after-dinner" trials of that period. It was then the custom for the court to adjourn for dinner at five o'clock, at which meal there was no lack of conviviality; so that when Bench and Bar returned to their duties they were in no mood for protracted toil.

In Lord Brampton's own words, "Judges and counsel were exhilarated and business was proportionately accelerated." In confirmation of this he notes that these "after-dinner" trials did not occupy, on an average, more than four minutes apiece, and, in illustration, cites an actual case, the paltry nature of which, contrasted with the enormity of the punishment involved, throws a lurid light on the inhumanity of the times.

The case was that of pickpocket, in which the prisoner had, inconsiderately, pleaded "Not guilty," and therefore had a right to be heard. We may quote Lord Brampton's account, beginning with the examination of the witness for the prosecution by the prosecuting counsel.

"'I think you were walking up Ludgate Hill on Thursday, the 25th, about 2.30 in the afternoon, and suddenly felt a tug at your pocket and missed your handkerchief, which the constable now produces?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'I suppose you have nothing to ask him?' says the judge. 'Next witness.'

"Constable stands up.

"'Were you following the prosecutor on the occasion when he was robbed on Ludgate Hill, and did you see the prisoner put his hand into the prosecutor's pocket and take this handkerchief out of it?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"Judge (to prisoner): 'Nothing to say, I suppose?' Then to the jury: 'Gentlemen, I suppose you have no doubt? I have none.'

"Jury: 'Guilty, my lord.'

"Judge (to prisoner): 'Jones, we have met before; we shall not meet again for some time. Seven years' transportation. Next case.'

"Time: Two minutes fifty-three seconds. As this seems to be a 'record,' it is only fair to add that the judge's name was Muirhouse."

Wanted Uniformity.

Colonel G. is a fine commander, but not a musician. He sent for the chief musician of his regimental band one day and delivered this scathing criticism:

"I notice a lack of uniformity about the band which must be regulated. Yesterday morning they were out on parade, and the largest man in the band was playing a little bit of an instrument—flute or something of the kind—and you had the big drum played by a small man. That sort of thing doesn't look well and must be attended to. I want the small men to play the small instruments, and the big men the big instruments. And another thing, I want the trombone players to slide their instruments in and out in unison. It annoys me to see them all out of step with their hands."

Like Calling For a Drink.

A hard drinker was told by his doctor that he could be cured if every time he felt that he must have a drink he would immediately take something to eat instead. The man followed the advice and was cured, but the habit of asking for food had become so fixed with him that once he was nearly locked up as a lunatic. He was stopping at a hotel, and, hearing a great commotion in the room next to his, he peeped over the transom to see what the matter was. He saw and rushed madly down to the office and shouted to the clerk: "The man in 153 has shot himself! Ham and egg sandwich, please!"

The State Pawnshop in Madrid.

Mr. Hart Kennedy, in his book, "A Tramp In Spain," gives an amusing account of the Monte de Piedad, "a palace of a place," and its amenities. He tried to pawn a camera, but in vain. The polite officials, however, condescended to take a revolver, but would only advance 6 pesetas upon it.

"The next day the money that I was expecting came, and I went and redeemed the revolver. All I had to pay was 5 centimos (a halfpenny). If I had left the revolver there for a year I would have had to have paid no more. The Monte de Piedad charged no interest for small sums. I believe the 5 centimos was the charge for the ticket."

AN INSOLENT WRITER.

He Found He Couldn't Dictate to a Typical John Bull.

That sprouting Scotch spar, the Earl of Leven, who rebuked a ship news reporter who approached him by declaring that "no gentleman ever speaks to another without an introduction: it simply isn't done," is an old friend of James Francis Dwyer, the Australian novelist—that is, Dwyer doesn't actually know the Earl of Leven, but he knows his sweetly British sort.

"I ought to," said Dwyer. "I was broke in London and I learned to know the true Briton. Once I answered an advertisement for a literary secretary. To make certain that my letter would be read I wired the advertiser as follows:

"'Do not engage a literary secretary until you have read my letter of application.'

"That letter was a gem. I thought I would land the place with it sure. I was certain of it when a large, square letter directed me to appear at a named address at a given hour. It was a four penny bus ride, but I didn't care. My fortune was opening out before me. I squandered the fourpence without a misery thought. A pompous butler ushered me into a black oak library, where the original stuffed model of John Bull sat at a table. I sat down meekly and waited to be spoken to.

"Bluff! He hit the desk with his clinched hand.

"'You cannot dictate to an Englishman,' said this old image.

"'No, sir,' I said.

"'I tell you,' he shouted, 'you cannot dictate to an Englishman!'

"'Certainly not,' I said.

"'But you tried to,' he said. 'You sent me this impertinent telegram. No Englishman would have done that. It was an American trick.'

"I tried to soothe him, for I wanted that job. But he got hotter and hotter. Finally he told me outright that he had hired a young man who once had worked for a lord.

"'I have sent for you,' said he, 'and you should be grateful to me in order to teach you a proper respect for the traditions of England and for the British flag.'

"'You old fossil,' said I, 'if I had a British flag here I'd tear it in two and choke you to death with it.'"—Chicago News.

Humiliated Hubby.

A newly married couple had had a little disagreement about some cakes which the wife had made. The husband complained that those his mother used to produce were far superior. On the next day the girl set before him a plate of hot cakes.

"Now you have achieved something!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "These are exactly like what mother used to make. How did you do it?"

"I will give you the recipe," replied the wife coldly. "I used margarine instead of butter, eggs a year old, I put alum in the flour and added plenty of water to the mix[illegible] Oil Hips.

A CHILD HATES OIL, CALOMEL, PILLS FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Sick, Feverish, Constipated

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

TERRIBLE ENEMY ATTACKS AGAINST FRENCH POSITIONS

Germans Use Troops From Five Divisions, in All About 100,000 Men in Violent Night Assault on French Lines East of the Meuse--Germas Lost Heavily--British Repulsed in Mesopotamian Fighting.

PARIS (French Official Communique), April 18.—German troops from five different divisions, aggregating 100,000 men, participated in last night's violent attack against the French lines east of the Meuse, it was officially announced to-day. In last night's fighting the Germans were partially thrown back from a first line trench they penetrated in Chauffeur Forest northwest of Douaumont. The Germans attacked with the greatest violence on a ragged front, extending from the Meuse in a southerly direction to the Douaumont-Ornes road.

German artillery had prepared the way for the assault by a drum fire that opened at midnight and continued without cessation for twelve hours. The first blow fell against the French barriers in the narrow ravine southeast of Pepper Heights, the scene of furious fighting ten days ago. Time and again the grey-clad legions piled up against the French works in fruitless charges. The ravine and its wooden slopes were swept by a steady stream of shrapnel and machine gun fire until the gorge itself was choked with bodies. The heaviest blow was struck on the eastern wing. Gathering up two divisions, the Germans' commanders hurled them against the French line in Chauffeur and Ablaine woods, driving southward in an attempt to reach the Douaumont-Bras road.

The first German attacks were beaten back before the enemy reached the French trenches. The second assault, delivered by still heavier forces, carried the enemy into the advanced positions and forced the surrender of a redoubt and its connected advanced trenches forming an exposed salient northwest of Douaumont village.

The British Lines Are Forced Back

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 18.—General Lake reported to-day that the British lines were forced back from five to eight hundred yards on the south bank of the Tigris by heavy Turkish counter attacks. Fighting is still proceeding, however, and the relief of Kut-El-Amara.

Fate of Cabinet Dependent on Outcome

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 18.—The fate of the present Coalition Cabinet rested on the outcome of the final conference on the conscription issue held before Parliament to-day. Rumours were flying that Minister of Muntions David Lloyd George, Secretary of the Colonies Bonar Law, and Lord Curzon are about to resign.

Nothing definite was known except the Cabinet failed yesterday afternoon to adopt Lloyd George's suggestion for general conscription at once, and that the meeting adjourned with the Ministry badly split and Premier Asquith holding the upper hand. Premier Asquith, who was expected to make a complete statement on the Conscription issue in Parliament this afternoon, may postpone his statements until later in the week.

The special meeting of the Cabinet this afternoon was called in an effort to reconcile divergent elements. In anti-ministerial quarters, it was reported that Lloyd George and Lord Curzon would accept no compromise.

Berlin Claims Important Gains

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, April 18.—The capture of important French positions north and northeast of Verdun in yesterday's fighting was announced by the War Office this afternoon. The Germans took 1,700 prisoners.

The captured positions include the works south of Haudremont Farm near Pepper Heights, and 700 yards of French trenches on the heights northwest of Thiaumont Farm near Douaumont.

A statement says part of this was recaptured by the French.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Ambassador Von Bernstorff will confer with Secretary Lansing at four o'clock this afternoon regarding the Sussex case.

COPENHAGEN, April 18.—A great explosion occurred at the German torpedo factory at Wilhemshaven Friday. Many workmen were killed and injured.

Peterborough, Ont., April 17th, 1916.

"The Examiner," Peterborough, Ont.:

Dear Sir,—We wish to take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of the advertising medium represented in the columns of The "Examiner."

The results obtained from our advertisement in your daily and weekly issues of the 13th inst. are proving so eminently satisfactory that we cannot allow the occasion to pass without informing you of the fact.

All day Saturday our store was crowded with customers to the point of discomfort, and the only regret we have is that we were unable to serve them better.

It is quite evident that your paper has a wide circulation, and that the people do read the advertisements, for our opening day was announced solely through the columns of your paper, and our customers all appeared to be fully informed as to the extraordinary values featured in our advertisement.

Kindly accept our thanks for such highly satisfactory advertising service.

Yours very truly,
JOHN BAILES & SONS.

P.S.—Please reserve the same space in your issues of the 20th inst.—J. B. & S.

Navigation Opened On Otonabee To-day

"Cap" Harris, of Gore's Landing, officially opened navigation this morning, when he brought the "Geneva" up from Rice Lake and docked where the Street Railway Wharf should be. He might have tied up right on the wharf, for the river is running deep just now, and the wharf is under a weight of water. Capt. Harris reported that the ice went out of the lake on Sunday, that the river is just the same old Otonabee, with all its promise of spring and summer delights of foliage and camping places. The natives are trapping rats, which are said to be quite plentiful, and worth around 58 cents. Three Gore's Landing men had 1,600 pelts on Saturday. The "Geneva," loaded up with general merchandise, began the return trip at four o'clock.

The following letter has been received from Bruce Sloane a Peterborough boy with the 4th Battery by H. A Cranfield, Secretary of Overseas Club, Peterborough Band.

Dear Sir,—Just a line thanking you and the rest of the members of the Overseas Club for remembering us fellows out here. The boys are looking fine and the good weather is coming now and we are looking to give Fritz a hot time this summer. We are getting the tobacco and cigarettes right along and the boys think that Tuckettes are a great improvement on Martins cigarettes and I am a very good judge of cigarettes myself and I agree with them. All the boys want to be remembered to you and I think they answer the cards now for a lot of them have received answers. I am sorry I could not write sooner but I have been busy of late but will write now every time we get a shipment and let you know. Ambrose Doris (Buck) wishes to be remembered to you. I will close now but not before thanking you again for the way you have remembered us since we came out here, I remain yours truly,

GUNNER BRUCE SLOANE,

There will be an important meeting of the Overseas Club and any others interested in this work Tuesday evening, Bank of Montreal Chambers at 8 p.m.

CASE ENLARGED UNTIL THURSDAY

At the request of the prosecution an adjournment until Thursday morning at nine-thirty o'clock was granted in case of a Smith township man who is charged with having commited a serious offence. The accused was represented in court by Mr. V. J. McElderry, while Mr. Strickland appeared for the Crown in the absence of Crown Attorney Hatton, who is in Ottawa.

The absence of a material witness for the Crown was given as the reason for adjournment.

The case was to have been heard this morning before County Police Magistrate Langley in the County Police Court.

The accused was allowed out on bail.

An Old-Fashioned Breakfast Dish.

In the old days, before the modern milling process was invented, there were no highly refined cereal foods. The health of the people was better, too, because the coarse, dark cereals then in use contained more nourishment and gave the digestive system more work to do. Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is an old-fashioned food, made from the whole berries of wheat, rye, and deodorized and tasteless flax seed. It is a coarse nut-brown, exceedingly nourishing food, and a natural aid to digestion. It gives the bowels the work they need in order to keep them vigorous and healthy.

J. E. R. MUNRO, Captain.

Mrs. W. R. Morris has received the following interesting letter from Driver Douglas Coons of the 26th Battery:

"I received your parcel on the 27 inst and was very pleased to get it. It certainly could not have come in a better time as it is a long time between pays. Well this surely is a funny country. It is rainy one minute and sunshiny the next. But nevertheless we are having a fine time. We have the afternoon's off, providing we have our harness and horses clean. We had a game of ball some time ago with an infantry battalion Before I forget I must describe to you the appearance and construction of our hut. It stands about 15 ft. x 10 x 12 feet. The roof is of corrugated iron and affords a fairly good shelter against shrapnel, falling from the bursting shells of our anti-air craft guns. The walls are very thin, being made of bags, baise, etc. In the centre of the room their is a stove made from an oil disc. There are ten beds some containing two persons, others one. They are roughly built, but very comfortable. In the absence of pictures, haversacks, water-bottles, spurs mess tins, etc., are used to decorate the walls. The door is about two feet wide, and is covered by a strip of baise, which flaps in the wind like a flag. It allows a little breeze to blow steadily through our little home.

Well I must close now as it is time to fall in. Again thanking you for your kindness, I remain,

D COONS.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Gentlemen,—In a recent issue of the Examiner I saw printed the names of our returned wounded heroes and as I scanned over that list of our brave boys, there is one name you have omitted (Private Gordon Fallin), who has been through the Battle of Ypres and other engagements.

Trusting you will add this young hero's name on the list of publicity, as I think every one of our true and brave boys should be praised from the house tops and let the echo ring throughout the length and breadth of our fair Dominion.

Yours truly,
Jas. E. Thompson.

Note.—The Examiner's list was hurriedly prepared and there were several omissions including the name of Pte. Gordon Fallen and Corp. W King.

A collection was taken up among the members of the 93rd Battalion yesterday for the benefit of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club. A handsome sum was realized.

The list includes three of the Peterborough boys in the 21st Battalion, while the other two were members of the Canadian Engineers.

LANCE CORP. BLANCHARD.

Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, 166 1-2 Sherbrooke street, received word this morning that her son, Lance Corp. Bruce Blanchard of the machine gun section of the 21st Battalion, has been wounded. Lance Corp. Blanchard is one of the well known Peterborough boys in the second contingent. His father, Capt. W. H. Blanchard, is in France with the British Army Veterinary Corps, and a younger brother is also over-seas, having enlisted here with the 93rd Battery. Lance Corp. Blanchard was born in Canada and has lived most of his life in Peterborough. He was employed by C. R Banks before enlisting for overseas here in October, 1914.

PTE. W. H. SAXBY.

Pte. W. H. Saxby, son of Mr. Wm. Saxby, 352 Smith street, has been seriously wounded in action in France. The bad news came this morning in the shape of a wire from the Adjutant General's Department. Pte. Saxby is a member of the 21st Battalion, and was one of the bomb throwers of that unit. A short time ago he was mentioned in despatches by the Canadian eye-witness for good works. Pte. Saxby was born in Peterborough and has two brothers in the Canadian Expeditionary, one, Pte. Ernest Saxby, being in France with the Mounted Rifles and the other, Lance-Corp. Norman Saxby, a member of the 93rd Battalion here. Pte Saxby enlisted with the 57th quota in the second contingent.

PTE. ALBERT NICHOLLS.

Private Albert Nicholls, who, according to the official announcement, was removed to the General Hospital at Boulogne suffering from a gunshot wound in the face, was a member of the 21st Battalion, enlisting here in the early autumn of 1914. His home is at 571 Bethune street. Pte. Nicholls was under eighteen years of age when he enlisted. Prior to that he was employed at the Peterborough Lock Works. Pte. Nicholls was a member of the choir of Park street Baptist church. He was born in Manchester, England, but for a number of years has resided in Peterborough with his parents. His father, Mr. Albert Nicholls, is pianist for the Grand Opera House orchestra.

Mr Wm. Langford, Sr., the well known local contractor, received a wire from the Adjutant General's Department this morning that his youngest son, Sapper Ernest W Langford, had been wounded on April 10. Sapper Langford, who is a brother of Ald. Wm. Langford, was a student at Queen's University when war broke out and enlisted in the Queen's Engineers going overseas last year. He was born in Peterborough and was educated at the local Public schools and Collegiate Institute before going to Queen's.

News also arrived this morning of the wounding of another Peterborough county boy, Sergt. Harry Percy Shaw, Canadian Engineers. Sergt. Shaw is a son of Mr. Wm Shaw, on the Keene road and has a brother in the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Window Display At Oak Hall Store

Of Regimental Colours of Old Country Regiments as Shown in Natty Cravats

Have you seen the regimental cravats, artistically displayed in the south window of the Oak Hall store? They represent the beautifully blended colours of many of the famous British regiments, including the Royal Scots, Irish Dragoons, 13th Hussars, London Scottish, Suffolks, King's Royal Rifles, Seaforth Highlanders, Royal Dragoons, Inniskillings, Dublin Fusiliers, 3rd Hussars, Highland Light Infantry, Gordon Highlanders, the Queen's, Royal Army Medical, Royal Marines, Royal Engineers, Scots Greys, Rifle Brigade, 14th Hussars, Queen's Bays, Royal Lancers, Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders, Royal Fusiliers, Cameron Highlanders, 19th Hussars, and 17th Lancers.

Interest in the military these days makes these ties particularly attractive. Several of the Canadian units are affiliated with some of the foregoing British battalions, which makes the colours doubly interesting. The 93rd Battalion of this city is the same number as the Argyle and Sutherlands in the Old Land.

Scientific Fur Storage

Modern Methods Followed by Barrie's, Limited, With Vaults in Their New Building

The modern, scientific method of storing furs is employed by Barrie's, Limited, which claims the distinction of being the only store in this city having fur-storage vaults in its own building, directly on the premises.

As soon as the furs reach the Barrie store they are taken to the fur-storage vaults. The temperature in these vaults is where it should be, as the thermometer there is consulted at regular intervals by the company's fur expert. No matter how long the furs remain in storage there, they are perfectly safe because kept in a temperature to which fur bearing animals have become acclimated.

When the furs are first taken to the vaults they are thoroughly cleaned by a process which removes every particle of dirt or foreign substance from them. Once cleansed, the furs are stored away for the summer.

Because of the fact that the fur-storage vaults are located in the company's store, there is no delay whatever in delivering the furs to a customer, who may have them at any time at a few minutes' notice. The company's rate for the storage is 3 per cent. of the mutual valuation agreed upon, covering storage, cleansing and insurance against fire, moths or damage.

The repairing of furs is done at summer prices and with greater attention in summer. For the same reason, summer is a better time for remodelling furs. Barrie's have the advance styles and can remodel fur garments true to the coming fashions.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, APRIL 18, 1916

FILL THE GAPS.

The Canadians in France are being hard hit. That is what we might expect; Canadians are at the front when there is stern work to be done; and they pay the price. Many are struck down—some fatally and some more or less seriously wounded. We have reports of many Peterborough boys being wounded. Such news should have two effects — sorrow for their hurts, and it should, as no doubt it does do, fill some of our young men with a fierce desire to take their places in the fighting ranks thus vacated. We believe and hope that there will be a notable increase in recruiting and many young men will join the ranks to make good the vacancies; to fill the gaps. Canadian soldiers have shown us that it is an honourable and glorious thing to be fighting where the fray is thickest.

PLUMBING.

We have reason to believe that some of the plumbing existent in Peterborough is not up to the mark. If this be the case —and there seems to be little doubt of it—there are doubtless reasons for it. A local architect gives one of these reasons. Persons who are building, he says, insist upon having the work done so cheaply that they naturally have corresponding plumbing results. Of course we cannot expect plumbing contractors to do work at a loss. The man who builds the house in this case gets what he pays for, and if it is unsatisfactory, he has to a considerable extent, only himself to blame, if he and his family feed on sewer gas. The only way, it seems to ours cheap plumbing and its consequences is to insist on strict inspection to secure the efficiency of plumbing the law demands. The law is founded upon the experience of men who know, who insist that the interests of the public health demand sound plumbing even if it does cost a trifle more—but not so much as doctors' bills. If strict inspection result all in having to do a plumbing job over tow or three times, builders would soon learn that there is not much profit in screwing down a plumbing contractor to prices so low that good work is not possible. As a rule in this world, what we get is worth what we pay for it.

GET SYSTEM INTO RECRUITING

Two years and nine months after the war our governments are waking up to the necessity of systematically aiding recruiting. At least the Ontario government, which is not technically called upon to take such action is to consider a bill to provide for the appointment of a committee to organize the agricultural and industrial resources of the province and to aid in recruiting men for the war. It was introduced by Premier Hearst. The bill is founded on a report made by a select committee of the House as suggested by Mr. Rowell, Opposition leader. Now it is "up to" the Ottawa government to take similar and more direct action with a view of system stisink recruiting. Recruiting is something that will not work automatically. At the beginning of the war there was not perhaps so much necessity for organization. But the spontaneous element in our population has very largely been exhausted, and we now have to do a little combing of the remaining eligibles. We want an official record of how many men are still eligible, and can be made available how many men can be spared from industrial operations and shell making and otherwise; how many can be replaced by men or others who themselves are not eligible for enlistment. Much credit is due to the patriotic Canadians who have organized in a private capacity to promote enlistment and to whose efforts so much success has been due. It becomes the government to devise some sort of organization that will make less difficult the work which the private patriots are finding increasingly difficult.

AFTER THE WAR IN CAKADA.

There is a good deal of discussion in Parliament and out of it as to the necessity of dealing wisely with the conditions in Canada after the war ends. There is no doubt that there will be a lively resumption of legitimate national activities outside of war preparations. There will doubtless be renewed agricultural and industrial activities to meet demands for natural and manufactured products. There will be abundant opportunity for the landless of other countries, and this will in itself tend to larger immigration. We shall then have natural and political and social conditions, that will also tend to attract immigration; but we must not spoil the allurement by retaining anything like militarism. Hon. G. P. Graham in dealing with this subject in the House insisted upon the necessity of avoiding a show of militarism, for that would neutralize the other attractions Canada will present as a land of peace and prosperity. It will present no attractions for the people of war ridden Europe. They have had their fill and more of militarism. We are fighting to destroy militarism as the curse of the world, and we must offer superior attractions to European conditions and this superiority would not consist in "converting Canada into an armed camp." Mr. Graham also expressed his doubts as to a rush of immigration at the end of the war—"European countries that have been devastated will have to be rebuilt, and the scarcity of men in those lands will leave all the fewer to come to Canada." It is all very well to be optimistic, but there is reason to fear that this war will bring us other disadvantages than the financial burden of looking after the big war debt that will have been piled up. European countries will suffer from the wastage of men and we shall suffer a good deal from the same cause. We have bravely and promptly met the duties the war creates and we shall have, in the same spirit, to meet the responsibility that will come when peace is reached.

WHAT WE MAY DO.

This war has taught Canada a good deal in respect of her capacity for doing things which otherwise might not be considered possible. We all have faith in Canada's resources of accomplishment, and in the richness of her natural recources; but the most optimistic three or four years ago would not have regarded it as possible for Canada to have an army of 350,000 soldiers in the field, or that Canadian soldiers would have had a chance to do what we felt they could do—hold their own in the fighting game alongside the best soldiers of Europe or the world. He would not have thought it possible that we should find so much money to spend and to do so much in the way of equipping our own military contributions to the armies of the empire.

This war has made us think of our capacity in other directions. It has stimulated our industries and the utilization of our resources. The war made a big demand for zinc for munitions, and Canada met her want in this direction, not by paying high prices for imported zinc, but by erecting a smelter in British Columbia and making our own zincs. We owe this largely to Sir Sam Hughes' energy, and this accomplishment is to be remembered as an offset against any charges of failure to do the best thing that may be brought home to him. The Dominion government is following up with a plan to help home zinc smelting to the extent of $400,000 according to the tonnage of output. If the government had taken a statesmanlike view of our nickel interests and had provided for home refining of nickel to the last pound; and if they will now take the necessary steps to this end, Canada will begin to realize the immense industrial possibilities that can be realized by energetic government leading in the exploiting of our immense mineral resources. The war has taught us what we can do in fighting militarism; it has also given us a hint of what we can do in other directions; it should also give us confidence in our ability to fight the forces of nature and capture the resources so abundantly locked up and hidden in our rocky regions.

Tells of the Visit of the Zeppelins

Mr. Finch Miller has received an interesting letter from a nephew in England giving some details about the last Zeppelin raids. The writer says: —

Perhaps you have read in your papers that we had the Zeppelins over here two or three times this week. Once they were too far away for us to see or hear anything but we know when they are here because all lights are turned out in the factories, the street lamps are put down low, all the trains are stopped and an awful stillness hangs over everything. I think the stillness is worse than the terrible darkness. Once when they were over last Friday night we could see the battle raging pretty near 20 miles away and the last time they came we had the scare of our lives. The fight was right over our heads. It did not last long, but it was awful while it lasted. The sky was ablaze with the glare of search lights and the flashing of bombs and our guns and the shells exploding you can't understand what it is like until you have been through it, then you can't explain to anybody. But the marvellous thing about the whole business is that no person was even injured and all the damage done to property was a few windows smashed and a garden gate blown down. I went into the police station to-night as I came home from work and had a look at the bombs they have collected. They have 70 incendiary bombs on show there and there are some explosive ones as well. If only a quarter of them had reached what they were meant for it would have been how do you do with——. But we are thankful they didn't and all the Germans can blow about is 4 chickens and a duck killed. Of course they would describe that as "a large quantity of live stock destroyed" in their official reports.

CANADA MUST NOT INJECT DISCORD INTO INTERNATIONAL HARMONY

The British and the French have joined hands—in Europe. Not hands alone, but hearts also. In their war councils they sit together, they plan together. There on the same death fields of France and Flanders a hundred years ago their armies met as national enemies, and with the fury of hate in their hearts they went down "in one red burial blent." To-day they march together as brothers under one command, holding the great battlefront of freedom, and pouring out their hot life-bloods in one mingled sacrifice on the altar of their common cause. That is Anglo-French unity in Europe.

But in Canada? How ashamed every true-hearted Canadian must be — ashamed, indignant, afraid.

Through the awful hours of last week, when the long battle-line of destiny was being swayed now to the Allies and now to the Germans, when not Frenchmen and Englishmen alone, but the bravest of our own Canadian men as well, died gloriously, as heroes in their boots, that we might live and our children be free—through those very hours, made holy by that stupendous sacrifice, what was happening in Canada? What voice was heard over the noise of our munitions factories and the clamour in our Parliaments and Press? Was it the grateful voice of praise for the sacrificial lives that for us and for the world's peace went down to die? Was it the reverent voice of prayer for the men who, spared last week, must this week cross the zone of death? Was it even the stern voice of justice pronouncing condemnation on the grafter and the betrayer of his country's honour? Was that the voice which rose most penetratingly last week in Quebec or in Ontario, in Ottawa or in Toronto?

Tell it not in Britain. Publish it not in France. Let it not be whispered in the United States, of whose behaviour we affect to speak with averted eye and an supercilious tone. The voice in Canada that cut through all others, the shrillest, the most strident, was the suspicious and distrustful voice of a pseudo-Nationalism from Quebec. Matching it in discord, in hatefulness, in shameless impudence, was the cynical voice from Toronto that shouted Loyalty with its lips but worked treason in its acts. The poisoner of Anglo-French unity in Canada, with a falseness equalled only by its own hypocrisy, slandered, day after day, the most world-distinguished and the noblest-minded statesman Canada has yet given to the Empire, and made still more difficult true unity of spirit in the two great races joined together in the Canadian nation.

In the light of that unity of British and French in Europe, this Canadian discord; this bitterness, this reckless playing with fire in the presence of racial explosives is not only a shame to Canada, it is a crime, a crime more dangerous and more despicable than for which German spies are shot in London!

And why this discord, this bitterness, this strife in Canada? The question of bilingualism in Ontario is no real issue in this Province. It can in justice have no reality, except as a firebrand near a powder magazine. For the solving of that question the Provincial Legislature, and it alone, is responsible. In the Legislative Assembly both political parties are agreed as to its solution.

The men who interfere from outside the Government and Legislature of Ontario may be ignorant or may be sincere, but, whether Nationalist or Orangeist, whether French-blooded or British-blooded, they are the enemies of both sides, and the deadliest enemies of both the nation and the Empire. Bourassa and Lavergne and their representatives in Parliament at Ottawa, and fanatics and exploiters of the same ilk but of different speech in Toronto—they are, all of 'em together, traitors alike to true Nationalism and to true Imperialism.

The tragedy of it all is that, because of our racial and religious elements, and the foolish partyism in our politics, voices that ought to be insignificant and cries that ought to be powerless, may once again incite the lawless spirit of the mob and create divisions which may mean disaster for the nation's supremest interests. Were it not for these conditions even the shameless and utterly base malignities against Sir Wilfrid Laurier, published in Toronto last week, samples of which were reproduced in The Globe, would be not javelins but boomerangs. There are not a dozen intelligent Conservatives who read those sample slanders, not a dozen of Toronto Orange Tories who remember the events of the Nationalist-Conservative alliance in Quebec, up the Ottawa, and through northern Ontario in 1911—not a baker's dozen of them who do not know that those "Lavergne and Laurier" slanders of Sir Wilfrid last week were deliberately concocted falsehoods, published because they were known to be false, and intended to deceive any readers who believed them.

But—and this is the point — how many decent-minded Conservatives spoke aloud in their party meetings or before the public the protests against those malicious falsehoods which they, with disgust, and shame, uttered privately in the street and at the club? How many made their sincere shame and disgust tell where it would have told with most effect? Had that been done, even by the Conservatives who read these lines and agree with the arguments of this article, such willful falsifying of indisputable facts would be made commercially unprofitable and politically useless even in Toronto.

Unless there comes something of that moral honesty and downrightness into our Canadian political life there never can come any national unity of strength and steadfastness such as the Anglo-French international league presents in Europe to-day.—The Globe.

HOLD FAST YOUR DREAMS.

Hold fast your dreams!
Pain waits for you,
And care and fear are near—
They are very near!
There is death, too—
Death comes to every dream and death
Will come to you.

Within your heart
Keep one still, secret spot
Where dreams may go,
And, sheltered so,
May thrive and grow—
Where doubt and fear are not.
Oh, keep a place apart
Within your heart
For dreams to go!

Think still of lovely things that are not true.
Let wish and magic work at will in you.
Be sometimes blind to sorrow—make believe!
Forget the calm that lies
In disillusioned eyes.
Though we all know that we must die,
Yet you and I
May walk like gods and be
Even now at home in immortality.

We know so many ugly things—
Deceits and wrongs and quarrelings,
We know, alas! We know
How swiftly go
The colour in the west,
The bloom upon the flower,
The bloom upon the breast
And Youth's blind hour.
Oh, keep within your heart
A place apart
Where little dreams may go,
May thrive and grow.
Hold fast your dreams!

Reward For French Aviator Dead or Alive

Berlin Considers His Exploits Across Frontier as Mighty Dangerous

"CORSAIR OF THE AIR"

This Bold Captain Has a System That Works Like a Charm.

PARIS, April 14.—On the head of one man in the French army the German Government has put a price. This man has caused them damage of a grievous kind and with persistency which seems to know no limit.

The sum of 25,000 marks ($6,500) will be paid for Captain X, of the French aviation service, dead or alive. The French Government has been very careful to avoid giving his name, and it is believed the Germans know him only by description.

It was Captain X, who three successive times, went to bombard the German powder and ammunition factory at Rottwell, in Wuertemberg. On each occasion he performed an extraordinary feat.

The sobriquet of "corsair of the air" has been given to him. Some of his exploits partake of the ruthless vigor of the true pirate.

Captain X is the principal leader of the French bombing expositions, and he seems like a hero which has dropped out of a romantic novel. Danger is his very life, and he plays with it so that his adventures during the war have been almost fantastic.

He began by being made prisoner as a result of an injury to his motor which obliged him to descend in a neutral country, but he succeeded in obtaining his release. When he returned to France he was sent to the eastern frontier for active service.

Though he demands much from his subordinates, he sets a good example himself. When he goes out with them for a bombardment, each of the machines carries a special sign. He takes his position about eight thousand feet above the object to be destroyed, while his companions are discharging their missles.

Through his glasses he watches the results and notes the points which have been struck and the actual damage done and makes a record of it all in his notebook. When the others have completed their work the Captain descends in a spiral, aims with precision and delivers the final, and generally the most fatal, blows to the enemy property.

Guards His Flock.

He waits to judge the effects of his work, and then he starts home, escorting his men and acting as a faithful dog does to the flock, hurrying to the assistance of those who may need it. It is not without having run the most serious kinds of risks that he has become the terror of the Germans.

During one bombardment he fought with a large German aviatik armed with two machine guns. His whole machine was seriously damaged by shots, a number of important parts of the apparatus being cut and torn, but he continued on into German territory and went direct to a railway station and factory which he had set out to bombard, carried out his mission and returned safely to his base.

The first time he went to attack the powder factory of Rottwell was on March 3, 1915. The journey lasted five hours and twenty minutes. Ten minutes after he began the attack on the plant a conflagration was noticed beneath him, and he realized that he had destroyed at least an important part of it. He had brought four large shells with him and he descended very low in order to deliver his attack so that each of the shells struck home. One of them landed in the mixing basin of nitric acid and glycerine and the others fell on the buildings. Flames at once arose and the smoke made a column forty-five hundred feet high.

His next important bombardment was at the railway station which the French authorities indicated as V. To accomplish his task here he dropped down almost to the station roof.

Then came the second bombardment at Rottwell, on April 16, 1915. Ten four-inch shells were dropped on the powder factory and caused a fire and an intense black smoke which entirely hid the building from view. Captain X remained for a quarter of an hour above his object at an altitude of five thousand feet, tantalizing the vertical batteries which the Germans were aiming at him and the section of 77 millimetre guns which had been placed around the factory for its defence after the fire.

Damaged Two Zeppelins.

The French officer returned to his camp with eleven shrapnel fragments in his machine. In the same month he dropped six shells in the great shed which harboured two Zeppelins, both of which were seriously damaged. The three special batteries placed for the protection of the shells fired at him constantly, but failed to injure him, though they damaged his machine to some extent.

A few months later he bombarded railway station indicated as C. He started out at four o'clock in the morning with five other machines and in the afternoon he was back at his base, took up eight more shells and returned to attack the station for the second time in the course of one day.

The fight in which more recently and for the third time he attacked the powder factory at Rottwell, was the most tragic which he ever carried out and at the same time the most successful.

Four other machines were to have started with him on that expedition, but one of them a few days earlier had attacked a train from only fifteen feet above the ground, and the pilot was still ill as a consequence of injuries he had civde aodiol doilaio was to have gone had trophle with his motor at the very beginning of the flight and had to return to the lines. There remained consequently only three. Besides the captain there were Lieutenant D., Corporal P.

The three started off together and followed the Swiss frontier to the Rhine and then entered the Black Forest and penetrated in the direction of the Wurtemburg plant. All had gone well until they were within a few miles of the latter when several German chaser machines came out of the fog and spread themselves in fan shape to bar the way to the Frenchmen. The latter were carrying a ten hour supply of gasolene and a load of bombs and their machines consequently were slow and not easily manageable.

An Easy Target.

They offered a relatively easy target and could not defend themselves very satisfatcory. Mr. Jacques Montane, who describes the incident, says the first to withstand the shock was the captain himself, who was attacked by a large monoplane of the type of Latham's Antoinette. Two men were on board and the machine was well known by the pilots who operated on the Alsatian side. The French officer replied with so much valor that the aggressor judged it prudent not to insist and abandoned him in order to attack the machine of Corporal P.

The captain endeavoured at once to go to the aid of his subordinate, but the adversary was much more rapid and, after a short fight, succeeded in bringing down the unfortunate corporal. During this time the captain-tain was turning and swerving and did not lose a single point of the painful drama of which he was a powerless witness. But he decided to avenge himself.

After the fall of P. he started off on the way to the powder factory with the determined purpose of making the Germans pay dearly for the loss of his fellow-aviator. He flew calmly, scorning the enemy who had gone above him in the hope of cutting him off and of attacking him, for the first success had encouraged the occupants of the big German mahine.

Lieutenant D., who had continued his way without stopping, now saw himself surrounded by enemy machines. One of them brought him down, to the northeast of the town near the factory.

His death was considered a sad loss to the French aviation service. D had distinguished himself several times in bombarding expeditions, often by night and had been of a boldness worthy of his chief.

The captain remained alone to accomplish his mission. Instead of turning back, as prudence might have dictated, for he still had a considerable distance, he persevered all alone against the German machine and went and cast his eight shells slowly and with great care on the powder factory. All of them struck true.

His Sad Return.

A thick black smoke at once rose to the sky, the black smoke which this same bold pilot saw for the third time at the same place within a year. He remained, according to his custom, for ten minutes over the establishment, in order to make notes of the result of his shelling, and then he started for home, along the same route by which he had come, not bothering to make a single detour to avoid enemy machines.

The alarm, however, had been given, and when he arrived over the Black Forest, he perceived a veritable curtain of aeroplanes waiting for him. They all swooped toward him in the hope of bringing him down.

By clever manoeuvring he avoided half a dozen of them, and then he was obliged to engage in close combat with two, the second of which awaited him avoce L. The duel with the latter was particularly bitter and the Captain ended it by forcing his adversary to take flight.

Quietly he resumed his way toward the French trenches, mourning the death of his comrades. Near the lines he perceived French chaser machines which were awaiting the return of his squadron.

One of them approached and made signs to enquire if the other aeroplanes were coming. The Captain with a gesture of desolation, indicated that there was no one to wait for as he was the sole survivor of the expedition. And a miraculous survivor he was, for when his machine was examined it was found that the top and nacelle were riddled with bullets, some of them had even passed between the Captain's legs. The supports were cut, the joints broken and the wings torn by shell fragments.

When they spoke to the Captain about these numerous injuries he replied simply:

"Of course, it was to be expected that they would wait for me on my return."

The following day the German official communication made this announcement—

"Under Officer B. on his first trip succeeded in bringing down two enemy aeroplanes whih were on a bombarding expedition. The third succeeded in escaping."

The German under officer, it is interesting to note, soon became a lieutenant and received three decorations, one being the Iron Cross of the first class, which was given to him for the above exploit.

Recently this German officer B. was flying in upper Alsace when his motor stopped, the machine fell and the pilot was killed. Captain G gallantly regretted the nature of the accident to the German aviator and regretted still more that it had not been left to him personally to avenge the death of Lieutenant D. and Corporal P.

WHAT CARETH NATURE?

What careth nature that the fields are red
With blood of those who were her last and best—
Her masterpieces, that had put to test
Eternal prowess? Over these the dead
Whose million bodies upon earth are spread,
Doth not the sun still in its grandeur shine,
The moon smile on, and all the vaulted blue
Its joyous host of spangling stars enshine,
Careless if strife its deeds of death renew?
Again, earth's magic hath the seasons led
To Spring's enchantments! Land and sea aglow
Bespeak no agony of human fate.
Men live and die, the nations come and go—
What careth Nature for man's love or hate?

WAR'S END INDICATED.

Insurance Against Continuance Beyond Present Year Prohibitive.

LONDON, April 18. — Insurance rates quoted at Lloyd's on the duration of the war are steadily rising. Most of this sort of insurance is purchased by munition manufacturers, and other concerns heavily stocked with raw materials, which would be a great loss were the war to end suddenly.

Some time ago it was possible to procure a policy insuring against the war's ending within the present year for 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. Lately, however, the rate against the war continuing beyond the present year has become practically prohibitive. It is reported that now a policy against the war ending before December 31 costs up to 70 per cent. of the face value. Some firms are asking 90 per cent.

The chief factors said to be contributing to this state of affairs are the resistance of the French at Verdun, the fall in German exchange, the retirement of Admiral von Tirpitz and the vote in the United States Congress on the submarine question.

ONE DAY OF STRAIN

Example of Warm Work of British at Front

A sergeant in a Scottish regiment writes home as follows: Our platoon was moved from a certain position to go and dig trenches not far from the German front. We went, and had not dug long before some Germans, who had crept up to with a dozen paces, let drive and wounded many of us. It was a dark night. I dropped where I was, put up my safety catch, and awaited events. After half an hour we were withdrawn across an embankment to comparative safety.

We had been there about ten minutes when I was politely informed that I would have to take a party over and occupy that half-dug trench. It was almost daybreak. Losing no time, I picked my men and went back, and we worked like niggers to dig ourselves in. We had not been long on the job when an officer—whose name I would like to mention, but must not—pointed out the dangers of the position. Close to our right was a ruined house in which the Germans placed snipers. From this house the snipers could have picked us off without receiving a shot in return, the house being only about twenty paces off. The officer said that if we did not hold that building we would be dead 'uns.

Leaving three men, I took five with me to lie behind a hedge that guarded the entrance to the house. Down we got, our rifles ready, all watching and waiting. The day was just dawning, the greyness just appearing, when we heard stealthy footsteps. Sure enough, two big German snipers were coming towards the house. Not a man moved; not a finger twitched. Steadily the devils came on in a crouching manner, closer and closer—and then I gave the word. Those two men were blown clean out of the yard. All day we kept a vigilant watch, sleeping and eating very little, as we expected an attack any minute. However, none came, and we were relieved at night. So ended the longest and most trying day I have experienced.

HOW TURKS "SNIPE"

Women Among Clever Shots and Indian Style Fighters

Private W. C. B. Randall, R.A.M.C., writes: The Turkish snipers, to give them their due, are no novices at their work. They are very smart at making themselves adaptable to their surroundings, painting their clothes, faces, hands, and even rifles and accoutrements to match with the gorse bushes and trees amongst which they hide. One ruse is to tie bushes to themselves and creep up within distance to throw their hand grenades, usually during the night, or just before dawn. Many of our boys have seen a bush just in front of the trench that they had not remembered seeing there over-night, and while puzzling it out have been sent to the happy hunting ground by an enemy bomb.

We caught one sniper red-handed, who was found in a comfortable cave-like dug-out, in possession of 2,000 rounds of ammunition and a good supply of tinned foodstuffs. And here's proof of the fiendish ingenuity of the German brain behind the Turk. He had round his neck twenty-six identification discs taken off our dead. No doubt all his own victims. It appears the sniper is paid a bonus for every disc he collects, although this fellow will never get his bonus. One girl sniper—there are quite a lot of women snipers among the enemy—about seventeen years old, was picked up by one of the stretcher squads. She was badly wounded, and had in her possession sixteen discs.

STORIES OF GEN. HAIG

Thinks of Others First, Especially His Soldiers

Sir Douglas Haig always makes a point, like Sir John French, of looking after the comfort of his men, and it is a habit of his to wander about the camps at odd times to see that everything is in order. In this connection he relates a good story. As he was strolling past a tent he heard the angry voice of a sergeant threatening what he would do to an unfortunate private who had disobeyed orders. "It's lucky for you, my lad," roared the N.C.O., "that I'm not sure how to spell 'insubordination,' or else I'd report you!"

The British commander always thinks of others before himself, not only as regards the soldiers under him, but the civilians with whom he comes in contact. In this connection an interesting story is told of him. After the battle of the Marne Sir Douglas suffered agonies from toothache, and was obliged to telegraph to Paris for an English dentist. The latter, on his arrival at the General's quarters, quickly discovered the cause of the trouble, an abscess, and decided to extract the tooth. But Sir Douglas Haig, on learning that the dentis had not lunched, insisted, despite the terrible pain from which he was suffering on waiting another hour, while the dentist had his meal, before he would allow him to operate.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Edward Perdue, Ennismore Boy Died An Influential Kansan

Left Native Township When a Boy —Became Rich Farmer and President of Banks—Held Various Public Positions.

HAS RELATIVES HERE

The following from an Atchison (Kansas) paper, refers to the recent death of Edward Perdue, a native of Ennismore, who, leaving home when a boy of eighteen, achieved prominence, influence and affluence among strangers. He is survived by three brothers, William, Michael and Simon, of Emily:

Edward Perdue, president of the First National Bank of Atchison and of the Huron State Bank, one of the most extensive and successful farmers in Atchison County and a grand, good man, died at his home near Huron at 1 o'clock his morning. His death, which was due to Bright's disease, followed by an illness of more than a year. For some time past it has been felt that he could not recover, and many and sincere were the expressions of regret. Recently a party of Atchison men made a trip to Huron to visit him and offer their hopes for his recovery.

Mr. Perdue was of the sturdy, manly type, who at once inspired and deserved the confidence of his fellow men. He was born at Ennismore, Peterborough County, Canada June 27, 1850, and was reared on a farm. In 1868 he came to the United States and settled in Black River Falls, Wis., where he engaged in lumbering until he came to Atchison County in 1870.

It was always one of his proud boasts that he hauled brick as a teamster on the first Ingalls school in Acheson. The building was burned shortly after its completion and was replaced by the Ingalls school which was razed six or seven years ago, when the new high school was built.

Soon after coming to Kansas he bought 160 acres of land in Lancaster Township, near the town of Huron, which locality was ever afterward his home. He accumulated 885 acres of land in that rich farming district, and died one of the wealthy men of the county.

He was married in 1878 to Miss Ola Davey of Brown County, who survives him. Seven children were born to them, all of whom are now grown and who are as follows: Mrs. F. W. Walters south of Huron; Charles Perdue, Huron; Mrs. J. M. Delaney, Huron; T. H. Perdue, who lives on the home place; George Perdue of Rider, N.D.; Mrs. Cloyd Smith, Huron; Ed. Perdue, Jr., Huron.

Mr. Perdue served a term in the Legislature and on the board of county commissioner and as township trustee and all his political official acts were characterized by high-minded intelligence and square dealings. Politics were not enjoyable to him or he would have held higher offices. He was a Democrat.

The funeral will be Sunday afternoon. The body will leave the house at 1.45 o'clock for St. Mary's Catholic Church, Purcell, where there will be a short service before the burial, which will be in Miller's cemetery, two miles west of Purcell. There will be requiem high mass at St. Mary's Church Monday morning. Two brothers survive him in Canada.

PRIVATE CARVETH TELLS OF LIFE IN THE TRENCHES

Mounted Rifles Were Heavily Bombarded With "Jack Johnsons" and "Coal Boxes" But Escaped Without Casualties From the Big Shells.

MEM ARE WELL FED

Mrs. Wm. Carveth, Dummer, has received the following newsy letter from her son, Pte. Gordon Carveth, who left here with B Squadron 8th C.M.R., and is now at the front with the Canadian Mounted Rifles' Brigade:

France, February 15, 1916.

Dear Mother,—I have received two letters from you lately, one dated Jan. 30th, the other Nov. 3rd I think by the look of the envelope on it, it had been all over England and France. My number wasn't on the envelope and I got it just the same, better late than never. There was a string around it to hold it together.

Well, this is Sunday, and we have just come from church. It is just a week to-night since we came from the trenches. We were in three weeks this time. Everything was pretty quiet except for one afternoon. Their heavy artillery bombarded our trench. There was none dropped in our trench. They went about fifty yards behind us and a little to our left. That is the first I have seen of Jack Johnsons' and coal boxes. I was sleeping when it started, but I didn't sleep long. When one of those Jack Johnsons' would explode, you would think the world was coming to an end. Your head feels as if it was going to burst, but we got out without any casualties from shell fire, and very few from rifle fire.

We expect to go to the trenches again soon, perhaps this week.

I got a letter from cousin Carrie McCracken a few days ago. I was quite surprised to hear from her. I hardly knew there was such a person. I'll see Newman Darling and George Butcher quite often. We are in the same brigade.

Stanley and I are in the same platoon. We sleep together every night. Lieut. Johnson is in charge of the platoon.

Our passes have started now in England. We get nine days. I don't know when mine will come. It can't be too soon.

It is looking more like winter here now. We had about two inches of snow about a week ago, and since then we had about two inches more, but yesterday and to-day it is a bit warmer and the snow will soon be all gone again. It has been cold all week, about the coldest we have had yet.

We can't say what we like in these letters, but if I don't tell you all you want to know, ask me the questions.

There are a lot of the 8th that we were with in Ottawa and Barriefield here with us now. I think the whole regiment is in our brigade. About half of this platoon is from the 8th, so that makes it better.

We don't find it cold or damp in the trenches, at least unbearable. It would probably be cold this week, but outside of that it has not been so bad.

There are always sentries on guard all the time. Generally they do two hours on and four off, and in the day time they don't have so many on. The last time we were in I was on listening post all the time. We only had four hours to do at night, and had all day to sleep. It was a little more important than sentry. Get caught sleeping on that job and you will probably get stood up against a wall somewhere and a firing party picked out to shoot at you. I always take good care I get lots of sleep in the day time.

The trenches in most places are from two to four hundred yards apart. I have never seen a German put his head over the trench yet.

The last few days we were in the Germans did a lot of sniping, but the trenches were about four hundred yards apart and it takes a pretty fine shot to hit a head at that distance. I got a stick and hunk my cap on it and put it up over the trench. I no sooner got it up when a bullet went by, and in about two seconds another one hit the parapet beside the cap. Then I pushed the stick up so the German could se the stick, and he didn't fire any more. I suppose it would make him mad, but I couldn't help it. I didn't ask him to fire at it.

The grub we get is very good. We can't expect the very best away out here. As long as we get enough is the main thing, and we have always got enough so far.

I told you in my last letter that I received your parcel of socks and mitts, but I have never got the one Ida sent me yet. I think it must be lost.

You asked me if I needed any paper and envelopes. Well I would like to have some. If you could send me a tablet about the size of this one, it is the handiest to have, for I can carry it in my pocket. We have been issued with socks different times since we came to France, so I have enough of them now. Unless you have sent them, or have them ready to send, if so, let them come. Socks don't last long in this country with so much walking. Well, I think I have told you all the news.

I remain your loving son,

GORDON.

PANAMA CANAL RE-OPENED AGAIN

Probably Fifteen Vessels of the Waiting Fleet Will Pass Through the Cahnnel.

Panama, April 18. — The Panama Canal was re-opened Saturday with the passage of fifteen ships of a total of twenty-six which have been waiting to go through the waterway since the announcement was made that it would be again ready for traffic April 15.

There were no ceremonies to mark the event. The waterway has been closed virtually for seven months, during which time the dredging fleet has removed a vast quantity of debris from the Gaillard cut and has made the channel through the cut better than it ever was.

The canal at the cut has been widened 300 feet for a distance of a quarter of a mile and has a maximum depth of approximately thirty-five feet.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hamburger, 30 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

Miss Agnes Logan's Wonderful Piano Playing

A very large and attentive body of music lovers assembled in the Hall of the Conservatoire last evening to listen to a piano recital given by Miss Agnes Logan.

There we were assembled, not to listen to the muse's art as expounded by an experienced performer, but to hear a child—a wonderful child—of ten years of age, go through a pianoforte recital of eight numbers. This infantile prodigy—I can call her little else than that—went through this ordeal, apparently without the slightest nervousness. A reference to the extended programme will show that the numbers given were by no means easy, simple, childish pieces, as so frequently are offered up by juvenile performers. The selection was one of by no means easy pieces having in some of them a considerable amount of execution. All these had been memorized by the talented child, and so well committed to memory that one failed to detect a false note or discover a lapse in time.

The concert began punctually on time, which is a rather unusual event in this city. A considerable number of Red Cross and kindred society ladies were present, a fact evidenced by the many Red Cross bags to be seen as well as the many nimble fingers operating the knitting needles. Altogether the youthful debutante may well be proud of the public reception accorded to her.

The following was the programme offered:—

"God Save the King"—Children's Orchestra.
1. Variations in F Minor—Haydn.
2. Evening Slumbers—Mercadante.

CHILDREN'S ORCHESTRA

3. Partita—Bach.
4. Nocturne (Midi)—Field.
5. Pompadour Fan—Cadman.
6. Le Papillon—Lavallee.
7. Jerusalem—Henry Parker.

CHILDREN'S ORCHESTRA

8. Witches' Dance—MacDowell.
9. Sparks—Moskawski.
10. Moto Perpetuo—MacDowell

"God Save the King".
(Orchestra and Audience.)

The Children's Orchestra attached to the Conservatoire of Music, conducted by Mr. Rupert Gliddon, assisted and the programme was commenced by this orchestra playing the national anthem, "God Save the King."

Then, amid a perfect furore, little Miss Agnes Logan climbed up to the stage. A healthy, rosy-cheeked smiling little dear, she looked too! Her first number, Haydn's Variations in the key of F minor, soon showed the audience that they had not come to listen to a mere "kids" performance. And they in turn showed their appreciation by rounds of applause and a recall. At the conclusion of the third number the little performer was twice recalled and a bouquet, somewhat approaching her own size, was presented.

No. 4 was a light sparkling morceau in which evening chimes were introduced. This was so prettily rendered as to bring forth another floral tribute and our little heroine literally had her hands full.

In No. 5 were some runs which were well executed while No. 6 was a charming little fluttering piece as its name Le Papillon (the butterfly) would indicate No. 8 (The Witch's Dance) made one further notice the ability of little Miss Logan, while No. 9 like its name was full of musical sparks. The last number 'Moto Perpetuo' was true to its name; it was apparently perpetual motion for the nimble little fingers. Three times was the performer with a huge bouquet, called and recalled and the pretty little bows she made and the happy little face, beaming with pleasure, showed evidently that she had enjoyed playing to us just as much as we had been pleased to listen to her. "God Save the King," played by the orchestra and sung by the audience brought the very pleasant evening to a close.

But there is another side to the question. The moon's rays would not in themselves be so beautiful were they not the reflected light borrowed from the sun. Granted, that if the moon did not possess the power of reflection, the sun's rays would count for but little. One must not overlook the skill and painstaking work, the patience and the ability shown by Miss Jeanette Killmaster, the instructress of the pupil who so charmed her audience last evening. How many, many long suffering hours must that devoted teacher have spent over the apt little pupil. However Miss Killmaster must have felt repaid by the applause showered down on her juvenile pupil.

Nor must the Children's Orchestra be passed over. The performers acquitted themselves well in the numbers allotted to them. It might be invidious to single out any individual performer, yet one could not but notice that while all were satisfactory, the cornet and clarionettes struck one as being particularly good. These children deserve a large amount of credit and still more is due to their able conductor, Mr. Gliddon.—F. Russell.

HYDRO RADIAL ASSOCIATION SEES "BIG LOOP HOLE" IN PLAN TO APPOINT HYDRO COMPTROLLER

Clause 5 in the McGarry Bill regarding Hydro-Electric amendments is regarded as "too big a loop hole" by the Hydro Radial Association which at a meeting in Guelph on Saturday decided to protest against the "encroachments of the government proposals." It provides for a comptroller for the Hydro-Electric Commission by the government and "that he shall perform such other duties as the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may prescribe." Representatives of the municipalities of Western Ontario regard this is a wide opening of the gate to the control of the Hydro-Electric which they claim is and must remain a concern of the municipalities. Hence it was proposed to ask the government to-day to eliminate this "objectionable clause."

Said one of the delegates to the Saturday meeting in Guelph:

"The government are trying to make it appear that they own these great undertakings. But they do not. They cannot come now and say to the municipalities that they are simply customers, and nothing more. The municipalities are customers, but they are the proprietors as well, and they must retain that dual position if the scheme is ever going to be worked to the most complete success."

Among several items the Hydro Radial Association will ask of the Legislature is the elimination of Clause 5; and also that legislation be introduced to provide that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission be appointed as follows:

"One member by the Chief Justice of Ontario, one member by the provincial government, and one member by the accredited representatives of those municipalities purchasing power from the Hydro-Electric Commission who shall also appoint one auditor who shall act on behalf of the municipalities and who shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of the auditor acting for and on behalf of the Provincial Government."

That the Hydro-Electric Power Commission be authorized to proceed at once with final surveys and the purchase of rights of way for the railways which are not authorized by the municipalities and that the Commission be empowered to sell a sufficient amount of bonds for such purpose and that Clause No. — in Bill that "no Hydro-Electric Railways shall be commenced until after the War" be struck out.

PLAYGROUNDS ASSOCIATION ELECTS BOARD OF OFFICERS

Mr. W. G. Morrow is President —Committees Were Also Filled Up—Membership Fee of One Dollar—Other Details of Organization.

The development of the Playgrounds Association was further advanced at a well attended meeting in the Council Chamber last night when the report of the nominating committee was received and other details pertaining to the prospective work this summer were discussed. Behind the movement there is a real appreciation of the need of properly supervised grounds for the children of this city and a great deal of enthusiasm that presages the success of the plans outlined for this year. The officers elected last night were as follows:

Hon. Pres.—Mayor Duffus.
President—Mr. W. G. Morrow.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. A. Mowat.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Jas. Kendry.
Secretary—Mr. Wm. Sangster.
Treasurer—Mr. W. R. Scadding.
Finance Committee — Dr. Neal, convenor; Mr. V. Eastwood, Mr. S. J. Keyes, Mrs. Robt. Harstone, Mrs. S. T. Medd, Miss Hatton, Mr. C. E. Abbott.

Equipment Committee—Mr. R. F. Downey, Mrs. (Dr.) Neal, Mrs. Scadding, Mr. J. A. Aylmer, Mr. N. M. Clarke, Mr. J. Smith, Mr. Geo. Roper, Mr. A Wilson, Fire Chief Howard.

Appointments Committee—Mrs. W R. Morris, Mrs. A. Mowat, Mr. C. N. Meserve.

Executive Committee— Mrs. Hugh Waddell, Mrs. R. Harstone, Mrs. Neal, Mrs. R. B. Rogers, Mayor Duffus, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Dr. Mann, Dr. Burnham, Mr. G. N. Gordon, Chief Thompson, Mr. John Crane Mr. W. H. Hill, Mr. H. B Cowan, Mrs (Dr.) Scott, Miss Staples Mr. D. W. Dumble, Dr Cameron, Dr Middleton, Mr. B. F. Ackerman, Mr R. Denne Mr. J. W. Worth, Mr. A. L. Killally, Mr. G. H. Logie.

Visiting Committee—Miss Aldridge, Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron, Mrs. (Dr.) Mann Mrs A. Stevenson, Miss Bennett, Mrs Scadding, Mrs. Meserve, Mrs. G. L. Hay, Mr. F.R. Yokome, Mr. Alex. McGregor, Col. J. W. Miller, Mrs. Sangster, Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, Miss Hatton, Mrs. McElheney, Mrs. H. G Park.

Entertainment Committee — The members of the committee on equipment and Adjutant McElhiney.

Mrs. Mowat presided during the meeting and Mrs. Mann performed the secretarial duties.

It was decided on a motion by Mrs. Morris, seconded by Mrs. Stevenson, that the membership fee be one dollar and that citizens contributing more than that amount comprise the association's subscribers.

Generous Support Expected.

In regard to the financial support of Public Playgrounds it was felt that many citizens desiring to further this work might not be able to afford more than one dollar, but others, in better circumstances, would make larger donations. It is expected that there will be a generous response to the association's appeal for funds to carry on this year's work. The members realize that many public demands have been made during the past year, but they also emphasize the excellent object of the playgrounds movement. Many fathers are in khaki, and mothers are thereby facing an additional responsibility in the care of their children. Public playgrounds at the King Edward and Central schools are expected to relieve the mothers to a large extent of the extra care at this time by reason of the fact that the children will be under the eye of a supervisor. Hence, there is more than ever this year, a patriotic object and appeal in the work of the Playgrounds Association.

The Entertainment Committee.

The Entertainment committee grew out of a suggestion made by Mrs. Neal that something might be carried on similarly to the outing of last year, and possibly a treat provided on special occasions. Mr. Keyes developed the idea in referring to the probable assistance of the Automobile Association, and finally a special committee was nominated. Miss Aldridge remains convenor of the Visiting committee, but she said she would be unable to attend to both.

It will be the duty of the Visiting committee which by the way will comprise all the members of the Association to provide for regular visits to the grounds that some person with authority will always be with the children.

Mr. Denne stated that the Property committee of the Board of Education is preparing to fill in and level the grounds behind the Central school this summer. This will necessitate some changes which were referred to the Finance committee.

Mrs Kendry introduced the question of the sale of carnations on Mothers' Day which was elaborated by Mrs. Mowat and will receive further consideration. Several other minor details were discussed, but particularly was it expressed that the object of the Association should be placed before the citizens so clearly that it cannot fail but win their hearties' co-operation.

Just Apply This Paste And the Hairs Vanish

(Helps to Beauty.)

A safe, reliable home-treatment for the quick removal of superfluous hairs from your face or neck is as follows: Mix a stiff paste with some water and powdered delatone, apply to objectionable hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This simple treatment is unfailing and no pain or inconvenience attends its use, but to avoid disappointment be certain you get genuine delatone.

93rd Band Concert At Simcoe St. Temple

The 93rd Battalion Band, assisted by Miss Lottie Hanson, presented a fine programme at the Salvation Army Temple last night. There was a large and appreciative audience that was more than ever impressed with the musical qualities of the Peterborough Battalion Band. Miss Hanson's singing was much admired. The band's programme under the direction of Band Sergeant Hughes was as follows:

March—"Washington Greys," Band
Overture — "Poet and Peasant," Band.
Cornet Solo—"Killarney," Bandsman F. Walno.
Selection—"Maritana," Band.
Saxaphone Quartette — Bandsmen James, Keale, Wells and Smith.
Characteristic — "In the Chapel," Band.
'Cello Solo—Selected. Bandsman Tom Smith.
Idyll—"Glow Worm," Band
Descriptive—"Motor Ride," Band.
"God Save the King."

A whole lot of good bartenders was spoiled to make poor vaudeville performers.

PETERBORO' SOLDIER ENJOYS LIFE ON THE ROLLING DEEP

Bombardier A. R. Bennett Keeps a Diary of Events Relating to His Departure From Canada and Subsequent Arrival in England—Weather Was Stormy—Now Located at Bramshott Camp

The appended communication from Bombadier A. R. Bennett of No. 1 Section, Third Division Ammunition Column, was received by his mother, Mrs. E. J. Bennett, 529 King Street. Bombadier Bennett enlisted in Toronto, but is well known in Peterborough, having resided here the greater part of his life. His narrative deals with the trip across the ocean.

March 9.—Entrained at Kingston, Ont., at 11 a.m., aboard Grand Trunk Railway train. Train started at 11.40 a.m.; meals good, accommodation fine. Travelled very slowly, not much scenery, and amused myself playing cards all day. Train consisted of thirteen coaches (hard luck number), eleven of which were full of troops. Turned in at 10.15 p.m.

March 10.—Was up and around at 6.00 a.m. Passed several places of intrest, including Father Point, Rimouski, and River du Lup (at latter point we disembarked and had two mile run). Country very hilly and rocky. Turned in at 10.00 p.m.

March 11.—Was called at 6 a.m. Will arrive at St. John's some time to-day. The district we are passing through now had a very bad snow storm; in places the drifts being higher than the train. People say it is the worst storm they have had in thirty years. Arrived at St. John's at nine fifty a.m., left train at 10.15 a.m., and boarded His Majesty's troop ship "Metagama" at 11 a.m. Saw boat in port which was captured for assisting enemy in transporting horses. This boat caught fire in hold about 4.00 p.m. and by 7.00 p.m. had big list to starboard (right) side; accommodation on boat very good; have two bunk rooms and am bunking with Corporal Meehan. Retired at 9.15 p.m. They will not allow any lights after this hour.

March 12.—To-day is Sunday; weather still continues fine. Was up at 7.00 a.m., and attended Divine Service at 10.00 a.m. Boat crew started to haul in cable at 4.40 p.m. and tug attached itself at 5.00 p.m. and we first started to move at 5.14 p.m. Kept travelling all night in very calm weather. Turned in at 9.00 p.m.

March 13.—Was up at 6.00 a.m., and noticed a slight roll on the boat, and on reaching deck noticed water was a little choppy, was talking to second steward and learned that there were 1,800 troops on board; crew numbers three hundred. Boat is about six hundred and fifty feet long and about forty feet wide, and seems to ride well in the water. Meals still continue good. Reached Halifax Harbour at 3.34 p.m. and anchored about one-half mile off land. Saw passenger boat "Calgarian," which has been converted into a cruiser, also saw battleship 'Niobe' and torpedo boat destroyer in dock. This torpedo boat destroyer is very small, but am told that she can travel at thirty eight knots an hour. Saw another liner named the 'Laplander,' which is a little larger than the boat I am on, which is also full of troops, and will accompany us across. After supper, was up on deck, but it started to hail, so went to bed early (before nine p.m. Some change.

March 14.—Was up at 5.45 and had a salt-water bath which certainly was very much appreciated after so much travelling, but you have to use special soap, as ordinary soap refuses to work. Went on deck after dinner and saw a pier in the harbour on fire, which was a pretty sight viewed from the water, but I understand one of the firemen lost his life. Anchor was weighed at 4.53 and everybody though we were off, but the boat only turned around and down went the anchor again. Another battleship came in the harbour to-day and she is to act as our guard part of the way across, when we will meet some other ships. Still have to go to bed at 9.15 a.m.

March 15.—We are still in Halifax, and do not know just when we will leave, but it is getting dreary laying around, as there is no change in scenery or anything else. 'Calgarian' pulled out some time last night; understand she is operating some where off New York, looking for contraband shipping.

March 16.—Well, this is Thursday morning and am still in Halifax harbour and 5.30 in the morning. Have just had breakfast and was up on deck. It was snowing and hailing very bad and am glad we are not on the saddle of the ocean, as I am afraid the ships would see more than what the sky is letting it have. We get fire and life-boat drill every day. It is now Thursday evening, and have just had supper; we are still sticking around and feel fine, except for my cold.

March 17.—Am very sorry to record that we are still in the same old place, but think we will pull out some time to-day, and a big barge came alongside last night, and we took on coal; also about 200 tons of mail. It is a week to-day since we left Kingston, and from present indications it will be about three weeks before we get off the boat. This is the seventeenth of March and same is very conspicuous by the absence of green neckware.

March 18.—Left Halifax last night at 7.30 p.m. and Halifax is now a place of the past for some little time at least. Have just had breakfast and am afraid it will be my last meal for a little while, as it is blowing hard, and am afraid will run into rough weather. Had fresh fish for breakfast, this morning; they took a boat load on last night. We are quite a ways out now, and riding on the boat is like going on the scenic railway; am afraid will be sick, but will try to fight it off. It is 1.30 now and half of the men are sick, but I am all right now, although the old tub is rocking about forty knots an hour, so you can imagine what it is like. Would certainly like to see some of my friends on board now, as am sure would have a lot of fun watching their clownish actions trying to walk the deck. There was hardly any one down to supper to-night, am going on deck for a while. It is now 9.00 p.m. and Art is feeling fine; have just come off deck where I have been watching the warship and transport, in front of us. We are acting rear-guard on account of having a gun on board. It certainly is some sight watching the ships ride the waves and then disappear from view. Have to go to bed now.

March 19.—This is Sunday and am feeling fine. What do you think of that? But my cold is not better yet, so am going to take it easy for a few days. The weather still continues fine, and I hope that it will continue that way. Have just had supper and one of the Stewards told me that we are running into a big storm, but I heard that before, so think he is trying to 'kid' me; but am not afraid of anything now, so 'let the wild winds blow as they may, etc.' as I do not think I will be sick now, even if the floor is coming up to my moustache but to-morrow will tell the tale.

March 20.—This is Monday morning and we have been on the boat over a week and am beginning to think that there is not a sea rough enough to make me sick. It is 7.30 a.m. now, and it would be about 4.30 in Toronto, so you see how much sleep I am losing taking this trip, but will try and make up for it. They are on deck now, but I am in my cabin and am going to have a good rest; have just had supper and, believe me, I surepunished same as I was good and hungry; am feeling fine, although we are still rocking good. They won't let us smoke after 6 p.m. on the deck, or light a match, or make a light of any kind. If they ever catch me doing it you will not hear from yours truly for a year or so, but will try and keep the rules. Have to go to bed now as it is nine o'clock, which is the hour decreed by our superior officers that we should be in bed.

March 21.—This is Tuesday morning and I am still in the land of the living and feeling fine. The weather is fine, just like summer. Saw a whale to-day, also a school of dolphins. Have just had dinner and will have to get ready right away and answer life-belt parade. We have this every day. The meals now are not so good as when we started, but possibly it is on account of getting so much of the same stuff all the time, but there is no use kicking as I am in the army now; we do not get any butter or tea for dinner; don't care much for it, but it makes the table look more like a meal, anyway. It is nine o'clock now, and time I should be getting to bed, but I am going to have a salt water bath. They say we are going to have a general alarm to-night at midnight, and everybody will have to get out with life-belts on, and fully prepared to leave the boat at once.

March 22.—We had the general alarm last night all right, but it came sooner than I expected, and I was enjoying a nice bath, and I guess you can make a mighty good guess as to what I had on besides that life belt. They gave me a good job to-day; was in charge of fifty men who had to get meat out of the refrigerator, and carry it to the kitchen; they had to get up two hundred quarters of beef. The refrigerator on the boat is an awful size and they keep the temperature down to zero all the time. They gave me this job for sleeping in this morning. Saw another whale to-day, and another cruiser met us this morning; so we are on the last half of the trip, and I only hope that all my friends feel as good as I do just at present. Will have to go to bed now, so that I won't sleep in any more.

March 23.—To-day is field day on the boat and they are having all kinds of sports; had a great time watching the boxing and there were some real good bouts. One of the soldiers boxed a stoker, who is a professional, and the going was certainly lively. The funniest of all was the pillow fight; the sailors ran a spar across the deck and two men, with pillows straddled it, and they had to fight until one fell off; they were fighting over it, under it, and every other way. The sea is beginning to get kind of rough, and the Captain will not let us get up in the bow at all, but I am a regular sailor now, and it does not effect me a little bit. They say that we may not get off the boat for two weeks after we reach Liverpool on account of measles on the boat. They say we are going to Liverpool and start a new camp somewhere near there and I hope it will not be anything like Salisbury Plains.

March 24.—This is Friday, and we will reach Liverpool some time Saturday afternoon, so you see there is not much chance of my getting sick now; and I only wish that I could see some of the people that nearly scared the life out of me by telling me all of the troubles of travelling on the ocean; would show them a few results of their falsehoods. They are continuing the sports this afternoon again, but I do not think I will watch them, as it is too windy and cold on deck. We had a medical examination this morning, but I passed with honours, so I guess my cold did not effect me any. Am getting very sick of the meals they are putting up, as it is the same thing all the time, no change at all; but I suppose they are preparing us for the firing line, so I might as well get used to it now as any other time. Will have to close now, as it is getting late, and they are getting strict on account of entering the danger zone, so will have to close until to-morrow.

March 25.—Well, this is Saturday, morning, and I can tell you that last night I was rocked to sleep in the cradle of the deep. It is raining hard and rocking bad, and the waves are going right over the deck. The only trouble is that I am very sleepy, but I guess it is the change in air. We are in what they call the droils now, and it is well named, as it is very rough. Changed some money into English monies to-day, and it certainly is hard to handle. The paper money is made of very thin paper. The wireless on board boat intercepted a message to Canada saying that this boat had been sunk; but I don't know whether they will let it get in the papers or not; but there was no foundation to it anyway. There was a rumour around that we were going to be torpedoed to-night, but I hope not, as the water is away too deep to let our feet touch bottom.

March 26.—Am still able to go down to the dining room three times a day, even if we are in the danger zone. We have to wear our life-belts all the time now in case anyhting should happen. I have two life-belts and will put one around my neck and the other around my waist, so you see I am well 'shod' in case anything should happen. Have just come up from breakfast, where we had a piece of whale for breakfast at least that is the best name I can think of for the fish they gave us, but even at that it is no worse than the meat we get, as I think everything dies a natural death before any soldier sees it. We were met by five torpedo boat destroyers this afternoon, and they sure can travel, any where from thirty to forty-five miles an hour. They are very small, but when they see a submarine they make straight for it and run over it, so you see a submarine has not much chance when they are around, as it takes one of them ten minutes at least to get under water, and one of these little boats can travel from seven to nine miles in that time. We saw the Emerald Isle this afternoon, but all you can see is what looks like three mountains, although some of the fellows say they can smell the pigs already. The Laplander, which came over with us, has left us and is goin gto some other port.

March 27.—This is the last day for us on the ocean, as we will dock some time this afternoon. We are in the Irish Sea now. It is only 5.00 a.m. now, but I am up and dressed, washed and shaved, and feeling fine but I certainly had a great trip across, and was not the least bit sick, but the next time I cross it will not be on a transport ship, if I can help it. The accommodation was fine, but the meals were not up to the standard by any means, so when I come back will try and see that my poor little stomach is properly treated and not subjected to such hardships again. We came through a string of nets that they have running across from Ireland to England, and they have to open same before any boat can get through. Of course the big liners could tear through them, but those on watch would know immediately and the Lord help that boat. Saw a fleet of twenty-two mine sweepers this morning. Can see England now, but it is too far away to give any description, but will try and furnish same later.

March 27.—1.00 p.m. Well, I guess I will have to bring my diary to a close for this trip. I have just had dinner, and we will land about 4 p.m. I expect, and I want to get this type-written before they pack up the machine. I don't think I could have ever had a finer trip. I enjoyed every mile of it. Will have to finish the balance with a pencil. Frank hasn't put the machine away yet, so will add a few more lines. 5.00 p.m., and at last we are in England; we are now in the Mersey River and pretty close to Liverpool, and will dock to-night at 7 p.m., and get off the boat some time to-morrow, and from the looks of it England looks to be some place. A couple of passenger boats passed us, and they were mostly loaded with women, but they sure could cheer. It has started to rain already and they say htat it is only beginning and that it is nothing of what we will see. Will try and add some more later.

Hello. Well, we have started to get ready to get off the boat.

7.00 p.m. We got the orders to pack up and stand to our bunks and be ready for the bugle to sound. 1.30 a.m. We are still at our bunks and no bugle sounded yet; at 1.45 the call came with kit and every man to go on parade ground. 2.00 a.m. We filed off the boat and lined up on the dock and waited until 2.45 a.m. before we boarded the train. They are surely some fine-looking cars; they look like the old Toronto horse cars; only they are all in compartments and each car has five compartments holding eight men, and the trains here sure can travel. We have twenty-five coaches on and the engines are very small. When you get in one of these compartments you can't get out until the train stops. Well, we each got one loaf of bread, one piece of cheese, and one piece of meat, which has to last us until we get to where we are going. It is five o'clock Sunday morning now and all that is left between eight of us is one loaf of bread, so you can imagine how a nice steak and onions would go now. We are just going through Birmingham now, and it is a fine city to see, as far as I have seen of it. We are now at Reading Junction, the great biscuit town. 10.30 a.m. We are stopped at Oxford till they change engines. This is only a small place, but the scenery is fine. This is the place where the celebrated Oxford University is situated, and we also saw three herd of tame deers at this point. 11.30 a.m. At last we have arrived at Liphook, at which point we detrained. This is a small place and we have got a three-mile march to camp. We are now at camp at 12.00, noon, and we had dinner at 2 p.m., and I can tell you that I enjoyed it very much as I was good and hungry and did not have much to eat on the train. The camp is quite a place, mud up to your knees, and then some. We are housed in huts, about thirty men in each. The meals are very good; the only fault is that we have no fire in our huts. They tell me they cut out the fire the end of the month, and it is very cold at nights, and last night I slept with overcoat together with blankets and then I nearly froze to death.

March 27.—We were up at six a.m. and had one hour's drill, and got breakfast at 8.15 a.m. Fell in again at 9.00 a.m. and went out for a ten-mile route march; some walk after a very enjoyable trip. They say we get six days' leave and I think I will go to London, as we are only forty miles from that city. Have just had dinner, and no more parades to-day, so I am closing my diary now. One Woman Dead As A Result of "Morphine Party"

Coroner and Pathologist of District Attorney's Office Begin Investigation—Actress and Realty Broker, Also Present, Throw Mystery Around Fatal Meeting

NEW YORK, April 18.—As the result of what the police call a "morphine party" at No. 245 West Fifty-first street, on Thursday night, one woman died at that address yesterday afternoon and another is in Bellevue Hospital under the technical charge of "attempting suicide". Her recovery is doubtful.

Dr. Otto H. Schultze, pathologist for the District Attorney's office, said last night that the poisoning was undoubtedly due to excessive doses of morphine in powdered form. Statements made to Detective O'Connell led the latter to take the same view. An autopsy will b necessary to determine the exact cause.

The dead woman was first declared by other members of the party to be Miss Mamel Raymond, but upon close questioning by the police, her name was finally given as Mrs. Mabel E. Hodge, of Niagara Falls, daughter of Thomas Murphy of that place. The same of the woman in Bellevue is a matter of doubt. At the department in the Fifty-first street house, which she leased on April 6, she was known as Mrs. Margaret Lehah, actress.

The entrance of the police into the case was brought about through Dr. Matthew Beatty, of No. 238 Fifty-first street, who telephoned Coroner Feinberg yesterday of the death of Mrs. Hodge and the serious illness of Mrs. Lahah, stating that it was advisable that an investigation be made, as there were distinct traces of narcotic poisoning.

TWO MEN IN THE PARTY

Coroner Feinberg notified the police and Sergeant John J. O'Connell with a squad of detectives accompanied him to the house.

In the apartment with the dead woman and the other woman, probably fatally stricken, they found Miss Dorothy Morgan, an actress. Also in the room was Morton A. Loeb, a real estate broker, living at No. 547 West 157th street. Coroner Feinberg and Sergeant O'Connell questioned the last two and learned that Mrs. Lehah had gone to the Grand Central terminal Thursday afternoon to meet Mrs. Hodge, who was coming from Albany. Missing her, Mrs. Lahah returned to the apartment, to find that Mrs. Hodge had preceded her in a taxicab.

Loeb and Miss Morga arrived a short time after, they explained and a third member of the party, who was known as "Lester" also was in the apartment for an hour. The police are searching for him to see what light he may throw upon the mystery.

About one o'clock Loeb told the police, Mrs. Hodge and Mrs. Lahah complained of feeling ill and retired to the only bedroom in the apartment. Loeb and Miss Morgan remained in the sitting room. At two o'clock they were startled by the screams and discovered both women in spasms of pain. They telephoned to Dr. Beattie across the street, who administered injections of strictain to the afflicted women. This seemed to relieve them and Dr. Beattie returned to his home. However, at eight o'clock the women once more began to suffer and he was summoned again. After adiagnosis he called into consultation Dr. E. E. Gardner.

At two o'clock Mrs. Hodge died and Mrs. Lahah seemed to be near death. Dr. Beattie, who had left the apartment, was recalled, and the notification of Coroner Feinberg followed.

TELLS OF BEER AND WHISKY DRINKING

Loeb and Miss Morgan, the police assert, said that the party had during Thursday night drunk seven bottles of beer and a little whisky, and that at no time was the presence of any drugs noticed. Both of them vigorously denied being addicted to and drug and were unable to offer any explanation for the poisoning. Several times during the evening, they said, they had noticed Mrs. Mrs. Hodge and Mrs. Lehah holding whispered consultations but had attached no importance to them.

The police were unable to find any containers of drugs or bottles from which the womenn might have been poisoned. Sergeant O'Connell did discover, however, a package of "aspirin" tablets and a package of headache tablets. However, both were nearly full and the only connection with these he could establish was that the women had complained of headache early in the evening. A box of grayish tablets were taken for analysis.

Otto H. Schultz, pathologist of the District Attorney's office, went to the apartment last night in company with Assistant District Attorney Renaud and O'Connell continued the investigation of Loeb and Miss Morgan. An analysis of the contents of the three packages of medicine will be made by Mr. Schultz, and an autopsy of the body of Mrs. Hodge will be made this morning. No arrests other than the technical charge lodged against Mrs. Lahah were made last night.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

YESTERDAY'S SCORES IN BIG LEAGUES

BOSTON, April 17.—Walter Johnson was batted out of the box at the close of the sixth inning to-day, Boston taking the game 5 to 1. It was the worst punishment the big fellow ever received at the hands of the Red Sox. Five safe clouts, one of them a double, were made by five of the world's champions one after the other, and four runs counted. Ruth was in great form, and although the Senators had opportunities there was nothing for them in the scoring line until the eighth when McBride and Moeller were passed. The next two men were retired, but Milan brought McBride home with a single. Rain stopped the game at the end of the eighth inning. The score:

Washington 00000001	1	8	2
Boston 10000400	5	12	0

Batteries—Johnson, Dumont, Ayers and Williams; Ruth and Thomas.

At Cleveland — Stanley Covaleski, brother of the "Giant Killer," made his debut as an Indian pitcher to-day and for 11 innings held Cunningham even at one run all. The break came in the 12th, when Turner missed Crawford's easy grounder. Hellman followed with a double, scoring Crawford. The Tigers scored again before being retired. Speaker starred at bat with four singles, while Hellman made two doubles and a single. The score:

Detroit 000010000002	3	13	1

At Chicago.—It took 11 innings for the White Sox to defeat St. Louis this afternoon 6 to 5. Fielder Jones' men started out with three runs in the first inning, and followed with one each in the second and third. Three healthy swats by the Sox sluggers brought in three runs in the fourth, followed by one more in the 6th. The Sox tied the score in the ninth on a single by pinch hitter Weiss, and in the 11th, with Eddie Collins on third, Lynn batted for Leibold and singled, Collins scoring the winning run. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
St. Louis 31100000000	5	9	1
Chicago 00031000104	6	11	2

Batteries — Davenport, Wellman and Hartley; Danforth, Williams, Cicotte and Schalk.

CINCINNATI, April 17.—The Pirates knocked Dale out of the box in the first round to-day when four hits two bases on balls, a stolen base and a sacrifice fly scored five runs. They continued their onslaught on Mosely in the second inning, scoring three more runs, and later in the seventh adding two more, the fine score being 10 to 1. Kantlehner, although allowing seven passes, was strong in the pinches. Score:

Pittsburg 50000200	10	13	0
Pittsburg 00001000	1	5	0

Batteries—Kantlehner and Schmidt; Dale, Mosely and Clarke.

At St. Louis.— At the end of the fifth it was one run for the Cubs and the Cardinals, but in the sixth Saier made a home run, scoring Williams ahead of him, and with two more runs for the Chicagoans in the seventh the Cubs won by 5 to 1. Vaughn held the locals well and with gilt-edged support behind him the Cardinals were unable to score after the second inning. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Chicago 10000200	5	10	1
St. Louis 01000000	1	8	4

Batteries — Vaughn and Fisher; Doak, Steele, Ames and Snyder, Gonzales.

The Hexathlon contest is being held this week in the gymnasium. This athletic event is conducted throughout Canada each spring on the gymnasiums of the different Associations and the scores are compared. The winning team holds a splendid cup for the following year. On account of the enlistment of practically all the senior gymnasium members, the senior contest cannot be held this year. The junior contest is divided into five classes, 80, 95, 110, and 125 lbs. Unlimited classes. Yesterday the Unlimited class contest was held and the boys of this class set a splendid mark for the others to follow. 1553 points out of a possible 1800 were scored, 86 p.c. of the total. Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Why do not the government do something with the rifle range? As it is at present it is an eyesore to the country and a bill of expense as well, as it is too far from town for the purpose it was intended for, but as it is well fenced I do not see why it could not be divided up and let to the different people in the neighbourhood for the benefit of the Red Cross or some other charitable institution.

And I sincerely hope you will see fit to bring this matter before the public by publishing this letter.

Yours truly,
Bullseye.

Comments On Hydro Situation

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., April 18. — "They would like to get Sir Adam Beck out and take the whole credit themselves," declared J. W. Lyon, of Guelph, President of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association at a conference of executives of that Union and the Hydro-Electric Railway Association of Ontario at the City Hall to-day.

"The idea is that they want to make a political machine of the enterprise," said Mr. Lyon.

"God help the Hydro if it ever gets into politics," declared Mayor Church, President of the Railway Union.

The Association will have an interview with the Cabinet on the matter to-day.

No Fireworks Are Expected

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, April 18.—While great interest is displayed in the statement which will be made to Parliament this afternoon by Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, it is not really expected that there will be any "fire works" in the House.

The Minister will doubtless make a calm statement to the House in which he will declare his willingness to have the Kyte charges fully inquired into.

It is thought to be quite possible that his statement will include a request that he be relieved from his departmental duties in order that he may give his full time to his defence before the Royal Commission. Sir Sam Hughes has engaged another legal representative in the person of Mr. Geo. Foster, K.C., of Montreal, making four eminent K.C.'s now acting for him.

THE MEXICAN GAME OF TAG STILL GOING

Special to the Examiner.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 18.—On receipt of a despatch from Gen. Bell at El Paso, declaring that the report of Villa's death had evidently been manufactured in Juarez, army officials directed a renewal of the search for the bandit leader to-day.

AN IDEAL SUMMER OUTING.

The Provincial Government of Ontario earned the gratitude of all lovers of out-of-doors when it set apart, in 1893, over two million acres of heavily timbered land starred with beautiful lakes and winding streams as a preserve for the wild things and a recreation ground for the people. They called it Algonquin Park. Away up in the "Highlands of Ontario," 200 miles north of Toronto and two thousand feet above the level of the sea, this lovely region remains to-day unspoiled, a perfect refuge for the creatures of the forest and an ideal camping ground for the sportsman and business man. The Grand Trunk have erected hotels and log cabin camps which offer first class accommodation in this wild and rugged playground. Illustrated descriptive literature may be had for the asking. HIT SOLDIER AT BERLIN

Young Man Resented Efforts to Get Him to Enlist.

Berlin, Ont., April 18.—Four hundred men are still needed to complete the 118th Battalion. A young man named Herman Schnarr, of Waterloo, was charged in the police court this morning with assaulting Pte. Joe Yauchus who, in the company of two other soldiers, accosted Schnarr on the street Saturday night and asked him "Why are you not in khaki?" They received no reply to this or other questions, Schnarr only giving a contemptuous smile. J. C. Sachs was called and Schnarr gave the officer his name and address. After the officer left he was being taken to the recruiting office a short distance away, when Schnarr turned and struck Yauchus on the nose and face. Yauchus retaliated. The case was adjourned until Wednesday.

MILITARY NEWS

A typographical error in the summary of Peterborough casualties given in yesterday's Examiner may have caused some confusion. It was stated that the number of men from Peterborough killed in action was 15. This should have been 25—a one having been substituted for two in the published figures.

The 3rd Divisional Cyclist Platoon is the latest unit to seek recruits in Peterborough. This is a very attractive branch of the service. Recruits must have a high school education, a thorough knowledge of the bicycle, and a good physique. Lieut. C. H. McKimm, of Kingston, is in command of the platoon.

Mrs. Wm. Stanley has received the following letter from Pte. A. Wood, somewhere in France with the Mounted Rifles:

Dear Mrs. Stanley, — Just a few lines to you. I suppose you will be surprised when you hear that I got the socks that you knit and sent through the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club. I thank you very much for them, as socks are one of the things that we need most, as we have to change pretty often.

We are getting very nice weather here just now. I am hoping that it will keep so. I have not seen Fred since he came up here, but I see Horace pretty often. He is looking O.K. He gets very big. I would hate to be Fritz when he gets up against Horace.

Mr. Jack Jayes, secretary of the Wine Clerks' and Brewery Workers' Association, has received the following communication from Sergt. J. W. Edwards, 39th Battalion, C.E.F.:

I guess you will wonder at getting a letter from me, but I shed you in mind for some time. The opportunity presented itself to-day when Major Carruthers called me into his room to-day and gave me a box of cigarettes, a gift from the Wine Clerks and Brewery Workers of Peterborough to our boys at the front. He asked me to make the distribution, which I did, and I wish you could have seen the smile that came over each face as I handed them over to the boys. I was asked to write this letter of thanks to the association, of which you are a member, for their kind remembrance.

39th Battalion.

In speaking of the 39th Battalion, here are very few of the original members left here now except the sergeants and some officers. The balance have gone over to one battalion or another. I am still holding down the job of pioneer sergeant, and may never get to the front, but I am doing more good here than I could at home, so I am satisfied. I often see in my mind's eye some of the faces in the old town. I am slightly under the weather with a slight attack of bronchitis, but will worry through O.K. The climate is so changeable here that you have to have a cast iron constitution to stand it. The spring is coming, and we will have better weather from now on.

A Trip to Ireland.

I have been on a trip to Ireland, to Belfast and vicinity, and I enjoyed it very much. The hotels are run more along the lines of those in Canada, and when Stanley Wade, Oscar Copperwaite and myself stepped from the boat you could hear on every side, "Here is some Canadians." I bought a black thorn, and there is not money enough to buy it from me."

Yours sincerely,
Pioneer Sergeant Edwards,
39th Battalion.

The moving picture owners are doing their bit towards the work of recruiting for the 83rd Battalion, as was evidenced last night when, with their kind permission, Capt. Widdifield was allowed to address the audiences at the Royal and Empire Theatres.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, April 18.—Further declines in some of the munition stocks and very slow trading in others marked the opening of the stock market to-day. Crucible opened off 3-8 of a point, U. S. Steel off 1-8 of a point, and Baldwin off 3-4 of a point.

After a monotonous hour and a half of afternoon's trading, Baldwin Loco declined to 95, a new low for the year. Other 'war brides' then came under selling pressure and the market closed weak.

IN MEMORY

In loving memory of Mrs. John Macpherson, who died March 11th 1916, aged 74 years, 11 months.

Death has stepped into our threshold
Chosen one so pure and fair,
But we know she's with the angels,
Watching from the golden stair.

Our happy chain, it has been broken
Her gentle voice we hear no more
But we hope some day to meet her,
Upon that bright eternal shore.

Our home is now so lonely,
Our hearts have all been chilled,
A vacant place is in our home,
Which never can be filled

Death at first seemed hard to fear,
But we know God's will be done.
So when His angel to call her
To her happy home she'd won

So now she's with her Master,
Pleading for us here on earth,
And soon we all shall greet her,
When we close our eyes in death.

RUSSIANS OCCUPY TREBIZOND, OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED

Is the Most Important Turkish City on the Black Sea

The Turkish Garrison Escaped Capture When Trebizond Was Taken

The Turks Are Expected to Make Their First Stand at the Crossing of a Small Stream Emptying Into Black Sea, Six Miles West of Trebizond.

PETROGRAD, April 18.—The Turkish garrison of the Black Sea port of Trebizond escaped capture when the city was occupied by the Russians under General Indevitch, but is being closely pressed by the Slavs.

The Turks are expected to make their first stand at the crossing of a small stream emptying into the Black Sea, six miles west of Trebizond.

Heavy fighting is expected at this point.

The Grand Duke, it is believed here, will now straighten his line by advancing against Baiburt and then against Erzingan, headquarters of the ninth Turkish army, where desperate resistance is expected.

Since the Grand Duke's advance into Armenia began, Russians have conquered nearly 20,000 square miles of Turkish territory, or about twice the area included in the whole of European Turkey, the newspapers estimated to-day.

It was generally predicted that the Russians will now swing forward in a southwesterly movement that will threaten the isolation of the Turkish armies operating against the British in Mesopotamia.

Calling Out the Reserves—Happy is the man or woman who can call upon reserves of health and strength in every crisis. Building up reserves is a question of eating the right kind of food. Shredded Wheat Biscuit supplies all the material needed for nourishing the tissues and its daily use keeps the bowels healthy and active. Eat it for breakfast with hot milk or cream.

French Make a Terrific Assault On German Trenches

PETROGRAD, April 18.—It is officially announced that Trebizond, the most important Turkish city on the Black Sea, has been captured by the Russians.

PARIS, April 18. — French have made a terrific assault on the German trenches on the Weevra plain.

SAVANNAH, April 18.—The United States military gutheritios have arrested three Germans accused of espionage and mapping United States forts.

LONDON, April 18. —The British have penetrated German trenches at two points.

LONDON, April 18. — More than three thousand non-combatants have been lost in ships sunk since the war began.

Bases Conviction On Affidavits of Two Americans

PARIS, April 18.—President Wilson bases his conviction that the Sussex was torpedoed partly on the affidavits of two Americans, which were forwarded to Washington by Ambassador Sharp, it was learned on good authority to-day. Both Samuel Bemis, of Medford, Mass., and Miss Gertrude Warren of St. Louis, swore that they saw the wake of a torpedo.

GIRLS! HAVE WAVY, THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Save Your Hair! Double Its Beauty in a Few Moments—Try This!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff: you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

Sir Sam Hughes Has Turned His Department Over To Premier Borden

Says He Had Asked Col. Allison to Get U.S. Capital Enlisted and He Thought Allison Was Entitled to Some Commissions

OTTAWA, April 18.—Sir Sam Hughes in the Commons said he had turned his department over to Premier Borden and would take his part of enquiry to the best of his ability. He said he had asked Colonel Allison to get United States capital enlisted, and he thought Allison was entitled to some commissions. On the whole he thought Allison had saved money for British taxpayers.

PARIS, France, April 18.—Germans continued heavy assaults all day, but gained no further ground. Casualties were heavy.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Papers bearing the entire Welland Canal conspiracy were seized from Von Igel's office, according to the Department of Justice agents.

LONDON, April 18.—It is reported Premier Asquith has failed to conciliate members of the Cabinet favouring immediate general conscription. The situation is serious.

LONDON, April 18.—Germany is withdrawing many troops from Russian and Macedonian fronts and rushing them to Verdun.

PETROGRAD, April 18.—Russian aviators have attacked the Turkish port of Trebizond, doing heavy damage. All returned to bases under heavy fire.

LONDON, April 18.—Italian troops with British, French and Serbian troops now on Greek soil, have crossed into Epirus from Albania.

FARMING AT FIFTY

By An Old Farmer, in Winnipeg Free Press

Is the farmer ho is able-bodied at forty or fifty years of age ready to retire to city life? It is presumed that a man raised on the farm and who has been a practical farmer all his life until he is middle-aged should be the best fitted to farm at any time of life. It ought to be the most profitable and enjoyable for him at that age. It may be, however, at this time of life that he may have children that need a higher education than that obtainable in the country schools. There are cases where it seems to be inconvenient for a farmer to get his children well educated without sending them away from home. Sometimes it is far better financially to send the children to high school away from home than to sacrifice the farm and the best interests of the family.

Then, again, should a farmer at middle age or thereabouts give up farm labor altogether after being so long accustomed to it every day? It would certainly tell very sensibly upon his health. Workmen accustomed to labor as farmers do will have a setback in "mind satisfaction" when they leave the things connected with the running of a farm. I have known many men that have made great sacrifices to get settled in the city, and the majority of these men were soon dissatisfied with the change from farm to city. Some of these were unable to retrace their steps, and the balance of their days were spent in poverty and unhappiness: I am no advocating that the farm is the best place for everybody to live and live happily, but I will say to those who know more about farm life than city life, beware, go slow when you are thinking about a weary life in the city.

To very old men and women who cannot do much work on the farm and who can rent their farms to advantage or give their children free access to their land, I would say a quiet, little home in town or city would seem to offer a fair inducement to the "old folks" as a relief from the severe toils of life.

If my personal experience would be beneficial to the readers of this paper, without giving details, I might speak of some of the changes in a life of more than seventy years. Until nineteen years old I knew nothing of city life. Soon afterward I was among the people of a small city for about nine months. Then for five years I was a farmer, but like some other farmers, I thought the city man made the money and had the easy part all the way through. So I again tried the city and small town life for about two years. I failed to make good financially and landed back on the farm. There I stayed most of the time for about thirty-four years, when I again tried town life for five years more. "Back to the farm" now again, for over five years. By this time I was old, but not infirm, and at no time of life have I abandoned my daily exercise for health. I have known many people that never took exercise only when work called them to do so.

My experience has convinced me that I am better satisfied on the farm than in city as long as I am able to walk about. Farmers have their hardships, disappointments and financial embarrassments, but, after all, to those who like country life the farm is a welcome home.

United States' Place in the World's Great Struggle Likely To Be Known To-day

(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Washington waited tense to-day for the hour of one o'clock when America's place in the history of the greatest struggle the world ever has known seemed likely to be determined.

President Wilson, appearing before Congress, was expected to give answer to the world's insistent question "what will America do."

What that answer will be was sealed in the mind of the President. He was to speak his final word an the submarine warfare, and the forecast was general that he would declare friendly relations between the United States and Germany could no longer continue.

Most of Washington believed the break with Germany was at hand.

An ultimatum giving Germany one more chance, was held, however, within the range of probability. This would be in keeping with the promise that before a step that meant the breaking of relations was taken, the President would advise Congress of his intention to take that step.

There is not the slightest doubt in Administration circles that the people will stand firmly behind the President in the course he deems necessary.

Indication of this support was found last night in the action by the Senate in passing an army bill which provides in a general way for increasing the American active and reserve forces to a million men.

HEAVY LOAD OF CEMENT PASSED OVER EMILY FARMER'S HEAD

A distressing accident took place late Monday afternoon, when a heavy load of cement passed over the head of Daniel Flynn, a well-known farmer of Emily Township. Flynn is now in the Ross Hospital suffering from a broken jaw and is badly cut and bruised about the head.

It appears that Flynn, along with two other farmers, were in town drawing home three loads of cement for Mr. Dan Duffy. By some accident Flynn was thrown from the wagon and the front wheel passed over his head, the broad, flat steel tire flattening his face out on the beaten roadway. His jaws were so badly crushed that the unfortunate man was unable to speak, but he was removed to his home and Dr. Blanchard summoned. Later on he was removed to the hospital in the ambulance. The wonder is that the victim of the accident was not crushed to death by the heavy load, but as it is reports from the hospital state that he will likely recover although his power of speech may be impaired.

STAYED ATTACK ON AULONA.

Austrian Expedition Had to Go to Other Parts of the Line.

Rome, pril 18.—Plans for an Austrian offensive against the Albanian port of Avlona have been abandoned because of activities along the Italian and Russian fronts.

The Austrians were moving troops southward through Albania when the Russians and Italian simultaneously attacked Austrian lines. The troop movements were stopped and part of the Austrian forces were sent back to the Isonso, where they have been seen in action.

General Porro second in command of the Italian army, has returned from an inspection of the Italian defences of Avlona.

RAILROADS BRING VICTORY.

French Strategic Lines Have Met Every Expectation.

PARIS, April 19. — "The battle of the Yser and Ypres were, in the first instance, won by the French railroads, and though the German lines possessed certain initial advantages over them, they have held their own throughout the war," says an officer closely concerned in the mobilization, concentration, and displacement of the French troops.

"The Germans have had the advantage of distance, since the line took the form of a triangle; inside that triangle their points of concentration are nearer to the Yser or any other part of the front than the allies' concentration points on the other side, where it is necessary to turn the angle instead of going across the inside of it."

A review of the military operations beginning with the mobilization shows that the railroads of France have accomplished everything that was expected of them, contrary to the experience of 1870.

Besides assuring the transportion of troops, the railroads have since the war added 2000 miles of regular gauge and 40 miles of narrow gauge tracks to their strategic lines, and largely transformed 158 military stations.

AUSTRIANS USED DAGGERS

After Crying Out Their Surrender, They Turned on Russians.

LONDON, April 18.—The warfare along the whole northern Russian front continues with the greatest intensity, and military critics here believe that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg is about to make a maximum effort to take Dvinsk.

On Saturday night the Russians took the offensive in the sector comprising the village of Ginovka, occupying the hills to the south. "The battlefield between these hills and the enemy's trenches were covered with German dead," declares the Petrograd official report, which adds: "During the fighting on Wednesday night at Tribouchovtse, Austrian armed not only with rifles and bayonets, but with daggers, approached our trenches. They threw away their rifles and raised their arms, crying out that they surrendered. When they reached close quarters with our troops they used their daggers and fierce hand-to-hand fighting ensued."

Thin Men and Women

Here's a Safe and Easy Way by Which You May Gain 10 Pounds or More of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. A splendid way of working to overcome this sinful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to try Sargol, the famous flesh-building agent, that has been so widely sold in America in recent years. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and see if your cheeks don't quickly fill out, and rolls of firm, healthy flesh form over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point.

All good druggists have Sargol or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee of each large package. It is inexpensive, easy to take, and highly efficient.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 to the National Laboratories, 76 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

A SUFFERER FROM

KIDNEY TROUBLE

FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

HOW TO SAVE.

Hints For Fighting the High Cost of Living.

The problem of how to lessen the cost of high living is a vital one today, and especially is this question absorbing to the poor man's wife. Her household motto should surely be to make the best of everything. Ruskin says, "Industry without art is brutality." And that is justly so of the homemaker. Her duty is to make her home just as attractive as possible, and to do that she must keep in mind that "a penny saved is a penny earned" and that every piece of food thrown out is money thrown away.

Here are four things that help much in lowering the cost of high living:

They are buy in as large quantities as possible, thereby getting a reduction. Use things in season, when they are cheapest. When egg prices soar search your cook book and household magazines for "eggless recipes." Make a systematic collection of economical nutritious dishes.

When eggs are high in making doughnuts boil and mash a good-sized potato, beat it in with the sugar and make the doughnuts as usual without any eggs.

In making pumpkin or squash pies in place of eggs roll crackers fine and use as much of them in bulk as you would of eggs. You could not tell the difference if you did not know.

When you want pudding for dinner and have no milk try adding another egg and a few more raisins and use warm water in place of milk.

Beef loaf is a fine dish in which the cheaper cuts of meat are never recognized. To make it take one and one-half cupfuls of stale breadcrumbs or cracker crumbs, two pounds of ground beef, three teaspoonfuls of salt, seasoning to taste. Mix with water or water and milk, using as much as you can, and have the meat hold together. Bake about one hour in a bread tin. Thicken the liquid left in the pan for gravy.

Pork in batter is another good way to employ the cheap meat. Make a batter of one egg beaten with one-third cupful of milk and enough flour to make the consistency of pancake batter. Fry some slices of salt pork until they look done, but are beginning to crisp, then dip in the batter until well covered. Return to hot fat until well done. Serve with baked potatoes.

Lamb a la Creole.—This is an attractive way to serve up cold lamb and is tasty and economical. Mince a green pepper after the seeds are removed and half a small onion and cook them together in two tablespoonfuls of butter for five minutes. Stir in four tablespoonfuls of flour. When it is well blended add a cupful of stewed and strained tomatoes and a cupful of the liquor in which the lamb was cooked, or, if it happens to be cold roast lamb, use water or good gravy thinned a little. Cook till the mixture is smooth and thick, season to taste with salt and pepper and turn in two cupfuls of cold lamb cut into small pieces. Stir and cook for six minutes. Make a hollow in a mound of hot boiled rice and turn the ragout into and over it.

Beef Liver Lyonnaise. — Procure about a pound and a half of beef liver, slice it thin and lay it in a wide frying pan, sprinkle with salt and pepper and two tablespoonfuls of olive oil. When ready to cook, put the pan on a brisk fire and brown the liver nicely on both sides. Take the liver out and put on a dish to keep hot. Add to pan two onions cut into thin shreds. Toss them over the fire till tender, then add a tablespoonful of flour and a tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Stir and mix well and add a cupful of hot water. When these are smooth and boiling return the liver to the frying pan and make it very hot. Arrange it on a hot platter and pour the sauce over it and send to the table with a dish of baked potatoes.

White Africans.

The Berbers, who, although African, are as white as Europeans, are the oldest white race on record, says an explorer. They are supposed to have come from the south of Europe in ancient days. The Dundee Advertiser says, and, although their language and customs are entirely different from ours and their religion Mohammedan, they are probably closely akin by descent. Blue eyes and fair hair are not at all uncommon among the Berbers, and many of them have rosy cheeks and features so like Englishmen that were they dressed in British fashion they would easily pass as natives of the British Isles.

Remorse.

"For two years after I was married I was ashamed to meet the preacher who united my wife and me in the holy bonds. You see, in my excited condition I made a blunder and gave him a five-dollar bill instead of $20 which I intended to hand him. I suppose he thought I was a cheap skate, but I couldn't very well explain it without making myself ridiculous or causing him to suspect that I was lying about it."

"You say you felt that way for two years?"

"Yes. After that I began to be sorry I had given him anything."

Reckless.

Uncle—My dear boy, it's a fact that the bacilli on paper money have caused many a death before now. Nephew—Well, uncle, you might let me have a few notes. I'm very tired of life.—Fliegende Blatter.

The best thing for any one to say who has nothing to say is to say nothing and stick to it.

How You May Throw Away Your Glasses

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one Bon-Opto tablet in ¼ glass of water. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

"A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: 'Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. It can be obtained from any druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family.'"

The Warne Drug Co., fills many Bon Opto prescriptions and will gladly fill yours.

THE CUTTLEFISH.

Its Queer Ink Sac and Its Ability to Change Its Color.

Sepia is a peculiar animal substance obtained from the ink bags or ink sacs of cuttlefish.

The cuttlefish are a group of singular sea creatures allied to slugs, snails, oysters and other so called "shell fish."

The cuttlefish has a sort of shell beneath the skin (sold under the name of "cuttlebone"), a pair of large eyes and a horny beak. Like all molluscs, they have no real limbs at all, but from around the head there spring eight or ten long tentacles, each armed with numerous suckers.

By forcibly squirting out the sea water which it has taken in the sepia can shoot backward through the water with great speed. The sepia is interesting, too, as being able to change its color in a measure so as to harmonize with its surroundings. Just under the topmost layer of skin there are distributed all over the surface of the body a number of cells, containing a dark pigment. When these cells are expanded the surface of the body becomes darkly spotted, but as they are contracted the creature looks paler.

Though best developed in the sepia and its nearest allies, nearly every member of the cuttlefish group possesses an ink sac. The ink sac contains the dark pigment secreted by a special gland. When discovered or pursued by an enemy the sepia discharges some of its ink through a sort of funnel or tube. The pigment mixes with water very quickly and forms a dark cloud of inky water, beyond which the sepia will dart into safety.

Sepias are often caught in nets with fish. The fishermen, despising the cuttles, throw them out upon the beach, and thus they may be seen lying in tiny pools of dense black liquid and continually oozing out more ink in a vain attempt at concealment.—Chicago Tribune.

Bow of the Boat.

When once a notion becomes firmly fixed into the head of the people it is strange how difficult it is to get that notion out again. For many years all ships were clumsily built, with the bow wider than the stern, because some one had declared that a log could be towed more easily that way with the butt end first and the tapering end last. One day some man who was independent enough to think for himself tried the experiment and built a ship, such as those in use now, with the bow the narrowest. Of course it increased the speed of the ship, and since that day boats have been built that way, and logs are towed with the tapering end first.

The City of Roses.

Ispahan, Persia, is known as the "city of roses," but a traveler says that the streets "are only alleys between two high mud walls, without a single window or opening to be seen—merely here and there a low, narrow doorway, always impenetrably closed. The ground is thickly-coated with dust; the streets are rarely straight, and never have they got any name. The sense of ruin is everywhere. Here a wall is falling down; there a palace is in ruins; a little farther on a deserted mosque is skirted. Such is Ispahan, which from having at one time a population of 1,000,000 is now reduced to about 100,000 inhabitants.

Palms of Muskat.

The use of the products of the palm are many in Muskat, Arabia. The sticks furnish timber which, though of a poor sort, is very valuable where no other is to be obtained; buds of the male palm are considered a great delicacy; the habitations of all the poorer natives are made of the fronds; the fiber of the stem is twisted into serviceable ropes; the seeds are pounded up and fed to cattle, while the fruit is at once the staple food of man and beast and an article of export equal in value to all other exports combined.

Gifts With a String.

Wedding gifts in olden times were mere loans, to be returned when the couple were well established in their new home. But when the feudal lord increased in power he grew to expect presents for his newly-wedded children from those dependent upon him. Later laws were passed compelling a present in value up to one-twentieth of the yearly rent of the tenant.

Man and Repose.

Repose is agreeable to the human mind, and decision is repose. A man has made up his opinions, he does not choose to be disturbed, and he is much more thankful to the man who confirms him in his errors and leaves him alone than he is to the man who refutes him, or who instructs him at the expense of his tranquility.—Sydney Smith.

THE SILKWORM.

But For Man's Aid the Domesticated Insect Would Be Extinct.

A peculiar fact about the silkworm is that it is actually a domesticated insect. Neither the animals nor the fowls of the barnyard, remote as they are from the wild types, need so little restraint as this bombyx mori, which, prodigiously industrious though it be, has never been able to meet the world's demand for its spun product.

As a matter of fact, the silkworm has been so domesticated through the ages that it would become extinct now were it not for the aid of man. Born into slavery, the caterpillars crawl contentedly over the narrow territory of their feeding trays, and, though the moths have wings, they have lost all desire to fly. This slavery began in China more than 4,500 years ago.

Nevertheless all the world's silk does not come from the domesticated insect. Not a little of the supply is "wild silk." This is the product of various insects belonging to the larger family of saturnilidae. Chief among them industrially is the Indian moth called Antheraea mylitta, the source of tussah silk.—Harper's Weekly.

Felt Safer in the Mine.

In an article in the Atlantic Monthly Joseph Husband describes a thorough examination of a coal mine in the middle west. Work was discontinued for the time, and the miners were obliged to stay "on top" for a number of days. So great was the interest taken by the men in this work of examination that there was little complaining. One morning, however, as I walked back from the power house to the town I met Luke Davis, an old miner of about sixty, who came limping down the street toward the mine, and from him I heard the first complaint of the kind, and many like it followed, that I had yet encountered.

"The air on top ain't fit to live in," he said. "One day it's cold; next day it's hot. I've had rheumatism ever since the mine shut down. The only place a man keeps his health is underground." There were many others who shared his views.

Future of Lake Geneva.

The lake of Geneva, lying in the deep valley between the Alps and the Jura mountains, performs a remarkable work for the benefit of man. During the summer its waters store up a great quantity of heat, which is slowly radiated into the air in the course of the following autumn. Thus the freezing currents descending from the snow topped mountains around are warmed and tempered, and the atmosphere along the shores of the lake is maintained at a moderate temperature. But the remote descendants of the present inhabitants will experience quite a different state of affairs, for it is estimated that in 64,000 years the river Rhone will have turned the lake into a broad plain by means of the soil it is constantly carrying down from the mountains.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

The Templars.

The order of the Templars was organized about the year 1118 for the purpose of protecting pilgrims on their way to the Holy Land and back. The founder of the order is supposed to have been Baldwin II., king of Jerusalem. For a long time the Templars was the most highly honored organization in Europe, but jealousy on the part of the sovereigns, coupled with their desire to get hold of the great wealth of the Templars, caused the persecution of the order, which finally (about 1308) resulted in its practical extinction. The order was abolished in 1312.—New York American.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HIS CHEF D'OEUVRE

It Gained Him a Reputation Which Profited Him Not

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

George Ashley at twenty-two was an artist with a highly artistic temperament. He had been brought up among women who were of the very best, and he idealized woman in the abstract. Having had nothing to do with others, he knew nothing about them. Indeed, he had his own conceptions of the spiritual beauty of a good woman and knew neither her strong points nor her foibles. Possibly he might have come nearer the composite of an excellent woman had not his associates been very youthful and their characters not entirely formed.

Ashley was ambitious to paint a picture of his ideal of womankood. He did not care to portray a Madonna; there were already sufficient Madonnas in the world, some of them painted by artists that he could not hope to emulate. He desired to give his ideal the garb of the twentieth century. Of course all depended on his model. His conceptions were like a flock of birds, flying in the air and refusing to remain quiet long enough to be photographed. Genius must have a foundation on which to build, and when the foundation is established there must be a starting point. A novelist who evolved in words one of the great pictures of the world said that he paced the floor for days dreaming it, but had he not finally begun to write his dreams would never have been anything but dreams.

Where was George Ashley to find a woman through whose physical perfection shone this purity that he wished to depict? He was not rich, but had the means to go about looking for his model. This he did. He visited different countries. On the street, in hotels, in public gardens, he was constantly peering into the faces of women he met looking for that which would serve to concentrate his dreams and reduce them to reality. Many a countenance he noticed, thinking that it was the one he wanted, but on examination was found deficient. Friends became interested in his search, and his attention was called by different persons to a number of women who it was supposed might serve his purpose.

The artist while in Florence, Italy, having run short of funds, established a studio for the purpose of keeping in practice and recouping his finances. He soon achieved some reputation as a portrait painter and received orders enough to maintain him and keep him reasonably busy.

One day an American lady and her daughter came in to his studio, the mother saying that he had been recommended to her to paint her daughter's portrait.

If Miss Helen Laurence was not beautiful she was at least comely. Ashley looked at her inquiringly, as he did at all women who might possibly serve his great purpose, but saw nothing in her face to indicate that he had found his model. After an inspection of pictures he had made Mrs. Laurence took him aside and made a bargain with him to make a full length portrait of her daughter, offering a price which was at once accepted, for Ashley's ideas of money were more vague than was his ideal of a good woman.

When Miss Laurence appeared for her first sitting she was arrayed in spotless white clinging drapery that showed her fine figure to the best advantage. Her coiffure was of the simplest. All that dress could do to represent purity was effected. Then, too, the girl's face was stamped with innocence. She looked with her blue eyes into those of the artist with a perfect trustfulness.

"Paint me as I am," she said to him. "Don't flatter me. If you should make a Madonna of me I should not like it. I am imperfect, and a perfect person represented on the canvas would not be I."

Ashley questioned her as to what she considered imperfections and was convinced by her replies that she did not know the meaning of the word—that is, she was innocent. While working on her features he chatted with her to draw out her individuality. Her voice was sweet, and it was evident from what she said that she was profoundly ignorant of the wicked part of the world she lived in.

Ashley made a discovery. He had been looking for a woman whose countenance expressed purity. He now formed a theory that innocence and purity are synonymous. Whether he was right or wrong is an open question. It began to dawn upon him that having found innocence it would serve to influence him in portraying purity. He did not realize that for some time he had already been under this influence. He was first made aware of it by noticing in the face he was putting on the canvas evidence that he was on the way to realize his ideal. He was not so impractical as to suppose that he would ever realize that ideal, for he well knew the impossibility of any such realization. He simply knew that he had found an inspiration.

He found something more than an inspiration. He found that which he had never before experienced—love. This was quite naturally the result of peering into the face of a pretty girl for hours at a time and striving to consider her at her best that he might make a successful picture of her. His determination to make her his model for his masterpiece was an additional reason for his falling in love with her. There was a fascination about his subject which he supposed had been revealed probably to him alone. He could not see how any other man should be enthralled as he had been, for he laid his enthrallment to his peculiar perceptive faculties which enabled him to perceive a perfect embodiment of purity.

When the picture was finished it was a marked success, not as a portrait, but as a representation of purity. The model's mother accepted it without comment, though it was not a likeness of her daughter, for it was a beautiful picture. It was placed in a conspicuous position and much admired, but few of those who were acquainted with the subject recognized it as her portrait.

Meanwhile Ashley had become so absorbed in his model that he failed to be elated with his success. During the last sittings his subject, by frequent casting down of her eyes under his gaze, by pouting her pretty lips at any inattention on his part, had given evidence that her innocent heart had gone out to meet his. Since he was poor and had not yet made a name for himself in his profession, he hesitated to declare his love.

Nevertheless he was unable to tear himself away from Miss Laurence, nor did she seem inclined to part with him. After the finishing of her portrait, or, rather, his conception of purity, he was unable to work. The mornings usually found him in one of the galleries, where he expected to meet the girl who had captivated him. He was seldom disappointed, though she was not always alone. While she was sitting for him, so far as he knew her time was exclusively his own, but now that she had no engagements with him she was free to go about with whom she liked, and since he was not occupied he had an opportunity to meet her in other company.

Although Ashley suffered the pangs of jealousy upon seeing Miss Laurence with other cavaliers, she always reassured him with one of her sweetest smiles on such occasions and not infrequently would make it plain to him that she wished him to join her. When relieved of her other attendant she would take him to the Boboli gardens, in rear of the Pitti gallery, than which there is no more fitting place for lovers. These gardens are representative of the medieval method of cultivating shrubbery and flowers. The perfume of the latter alone is conducive to love.

In the evening they would walk together on the Arno embankment, which when the lamps are lighted is as near fairyland as any real scene that can be produced. But it was in the apartment occupied by Miss Laurence and her mother, where the lovers were alone together, that Ashley broke down and confessed his love and his fears.

She received this confession and his fears with no definite response.

He was hoping one morning that a reputation would come from his masterpiece to enable him to muster courage to propose to his model, when, taking up a morning journal, he saw an announcement that a young American had the night before committed suicide by jumping from the Ponte Vecchio, a medieval bridge, into the Arno. It was hinted that the young man had taken himself off for love of a fair countrywoman. Ashley recognized the name of a man he had seen with Helen Laurence one day in the gallery of the Pitti palace and to whom he had been introduced by her.

As an American, Ashley considered it his duty to go to the lodgings of the young man to learn if anything was to be done in the premises. On reaching the house—a pension on the Lung Arno, which means in English the Arno embankment—he made inquiries of the proprietor. He told the artist that the suicide's mother and sister were there and a brother was expected during the day.

"I noticed," said Ashley, "that an American lady was the cause."

"Yes, signor; the lady whose portrait is now attracting so much attention. This episode will likely make the artist's fortune."

Ashley seemed turned to marble. He stood looking at the man as if stricken by some fearful calamity. The other, who was handing a key to a guest at the moment, did not notice his changed appearance and continued:

"The American is not the only one who has suffered from this same cause. An Englishman made a great ado when the lady refused him, and one of our own citizens, a prince, fell into the same pit. Among her victims she is named La Belle Dame Sans Merci, after an English poem."

Ashley staggered out into the open air. Standing with a hand on the stone coping that protects the sidewalk from the river, it seemed for awhile as if he would be another victim to La Belle Dame Sans Merci. But presently, steadying himself by the coping, he walked slowly in the direction of his studio.

The idle prediction of the landlord was fulfilled. The story attached to his picture of purity was well known, and every one visited it from curiosity if for no other reason. Since the name of the artist was attached to it, he might have taken advantage of the reputation it gave him to make a fortune, but he never painted another picture and was never seen again in Florence after that morning.

After the suicide a glory concerning Miss Laurence's part in the matter was hushed up. It appears that, having heard of the young American who was hunting for a model of purity, she made a bet that she would sit for the picture and that it would be a success. She, too, left Florence immediately after the tragedy and returned to America, where it is to be hoped she repented of her many sins.

BACKACHE, LUMBAGO AND RHEUMATIC TROUBLES.

Dear Mr. Perry—I wish to state that I suffered greatly from backache, lumbago and rheumatic troubles. I used "Anuric," the latest discovery of Doctor Pierce for backache and kidney troubles, and I can cheerfully recommend the "Anuric Tablets" to anyone suffering from any of these maladies.

Yours truly,
J. P. Gardner.

Note: It is now asserted with confidence that these painful effects due to uric acid in the system are entirely eradicated. A new remedy, called "Anuric," has been discovered by Dr. Pierce, and is the cause of a drainage outward of the uric acid with which it comes in contact within the body. It will ward off backache, headaches, and the darting pains and aches of articular or muscular rheumatism—of those diseases which are caused by too much uric acid, such as gout, asthma, sciatica, renal calculus. "Anuric" prolongs life because old people usually suffer from hardening and thickening of the walls of the arteries, due to the excess of uric acid in the blood and tissues.

Dr. Pierce, who is director and chief physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has been testing this wonderful medicine for the relief of over-worked and weakened kidneys. The relief obtained by sufferers has been so satisfactory that he determined to place "Anuric" with the principal druggists in towns where people could get this ready-to-use medicine. "Anuric" is not harmful or poisonous, but aids nature in throwing off those poisons within the body which cause so much suffering, pain and misery. Scientists assert this remedy is 27 times more potent than soda. Send 10 cents for large trial package.

"Anuric" is building up a reputation as good as Dr. Pierce's other well-known medicines which have been proved reliable during nearly fifty years, such as Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the ills of women, Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the liver regulator, and Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for red blood.

Was Troubled With BOILS
ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him; "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck; I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and corrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. R. Cockerill, Gelt, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do anything. My boss told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils, and they all say it is great medicine. I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. H. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

RUN TO AVOID KILLING.

Court Rules It's Murder to Stand When Life is Threatened.

In an opinion filed in Trenton, N. J., by Chief Justice Gummere, sustaining a conviction of murder in the second degree the Supreme Court says:

"A person upon whom an assault is made, so violent in its character as to endanger his life, or threaten him with serious bodily injury, is not justified or excusable in standing his ground and killing his assailant if he can avoid the impending danger by retreating."

The case was that of Nunzio di Maria of Harrison who was sentenced to from twenty to thirty years in prison for shooting Frank Barber.

MAN IS AS OLD AS HIS ARTERIES

THE failure of the arteries is one of the tragedies of modern life. Men in the very prime of life, and in the midst of business activities, are suddenly cut off. In many cases the blow comes before they realize their condition.

And what is the cause? Most usually overeating and drinking, combined with too little bodily exercise. The blood becomes overloaded with poisons. The kidneys break down in an effort to filter the blood, degeneration of the arteries takes place, an artery in the brain bursts, a clot is formed and paralysis results. Or it may be an artery in the heart that gives way and causes heart failure.

And how is this condition to be avoided? By moderation in eating and drinking, and by keeping the liver, kidneys and bowels regular and active. If you do not get sufficient exercise to accomplish this, it is necessary to use such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. It is only by the action of these organs that the blood can be purified and the poisons removed from the system. In using you are not making any experiment, for they have no equal as a means of awakening the liver, kidneys and bowels to healthful activity. They prevent such serious troubles as hardening of the arteries, and thereby promote comfort and health and prolong life.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

NOBLES NOT GENTLEMEN

Hun Officers Must be Closely Guarded by France

A Paris correspondent writes as follows: I have just been permitted to visit Belle Isle where German officers are kept prisoners of war. The island is twelve miles off the coast of France and the approaches to it are very closely guarded. Earlier in the war no restrictions were placed upon the prisoners, and they were given full freedom within the limits of the island. The result was a great disappointment, for the officers, although many belonged to aristocratic families in Germany, insulted the inhabitants of the islands. So a French colonel of cuirassiers was placed in command of the citadel and it took him exactly a week to establish perfect discipline.

There are about 1,500 Germans on the island. The officers who had to be placed under discipline number about three hundred, the flower of the German nobility, and every one of them wears half a dozen decorations, among which is invariably the Iron Cross. Not one of them deigns to speak to any of his fellow prisoners of less noble rank. Most of their time they spend at outdoor games dressed in sporting costumes of the most amazing colors, and among the French soldiers who are guarding the island they are known as the "Parrots."

For the return of these men the Kaiser would undoubtedly gladly sacrifice an entire German division of ordinary troops. They are very closely guarded, for many suspicious letters have been found among their correspondence, mystic pinpricks have been discovered in apparently harmless books sent them from home and on two occasions submarines have been noticed hanging around the island but there were immediately driven away by French destroyers that are constantly on the lookout.

HAIG COOL IN ECYPT

Daring of Young Officer, Now Leader of Hosts

Absolutely fearless, Gen. Haig has had many a narrow escape on the battlefield. In the Soudan campaign of 1898 the General was With Lord Kitchener, who entrusted him with a lot of the necessary scouting before the Battles of Atbara and Khartoum. On one occasion he and three others came across a big zareeba—a fortified enclosure of thorns and spiked palisadings—big enough to hide an army. As the zareeba was in the way of the British advance it was necessary to find out approximately what was behind that thorny defence in the desert. Gen. Haig calmly rode within 300 paces and sat his horse, eeing the Dervishes within. Though a fusillade of bullets from Arabs' muskets was fired in his direction, he escaped by a miracle, and was able to give Lord Kitchener information vital to the success of the dash for Khartoum.

SERB WOMAN SOLDIER

Gentle Looking, But Fierce as Lioness is "the Sergeant"

Among the heroines of the war Slavka Tomich, the Serb girl komitadji, known throughout the Serbian army as "The Sergeant," deserves a place. Slavka, is the niece of the army doctor, Captain Splawski. She is seventeen and has already over two years' service in the fighting line to her credit. She began her career as a private, and ever since the Battle of Serajevo has been fighting and marching with a bullet in her knee. She is very proud of the fact that she won her stripes while fighting against the Germans. Miss Slavka has a gentle girlish face, but her eyes, which are light chestnut and rather small, flash fire when she hears the name of Austrian or Bulgarian. She fought like a lioness at Babouna Pass, and refused to follow her retreating comrades through Albania, preferring to go to Saloniki and join the Anglo-French forces in the hope of continuing the struggle against her deadly foes, the Bulgarians.

Later "the sergeant" was walking alone down an unfrequented street when two Greek soldiers stopped her, ostensibly to congratulate her. There was nothing extraordinary in this, for along the quay her compatriots, who all knew her, frequently gather round her and salute her with a brotherly kiss. But while one of the soldiers was shaking hands with her, his companion relieved her of her purse, which contained her whole fortune, $60. When afterwards, "the sergeant" discovered that she had been robbed, she vowed that she would have her revenge. For two days she scoured the town, and at last found herself face to face with the two Greek soldiers. Darting at them, she seized them by the collars of their tunics, and thus, one in each hand, marched them to the Place de la Liberte, where she handed them over to the gendarmes. In the pocket of the culprits was Mlle. Slavka's purse with $40 still in it.

Three Complete Turkish Divisions Tied Up

PETROGRAD, April 18.—Having occupied the strongly fortified Turkish position on the left bank of the Kara Dere, on the Turkish Black Sea coast, the Russian forces have passed the last of a series of natural obstacles along the coast, the defensive advantages of which had been made the most of by the Turks. Thus they have entered the immediate area of the Trebizond fortifications.

Only 11¼ Miles Away.

Yesterday's official statement dealing with the Caucasian operations says:

"In the coast region our troops, after occupying Surmeneh, pursued the retreating enemy and reached the village of Arsene Kelessi, eighteen versts (about 11¼ miles) east of Trebizond.

"The fighting continues to our advantage in the upper Tchoruk basin."

The Russians are now separated from the city of Trebizond by only eleven miles of roadway, no part of which is considered capable of sustained defence, although since the fall of Erzerum the Turks have undertaken everything possible to perfect the defensive power of the Trebizond fortifications, and greatly increased the garrison, which is now said to contain three complete divisions.

Stubborn Defence Expected.

Therefore the word "imminent" no longer is used here in predicting the occupation of Trebizond, and it is realised that the city will be taken only after the hardest kind of struggle, which is likely to outclass in stubbornness and duration the one which resulted in the fall of Erzerum.

The capture of the Kara Dere position, which necessitated the crossing of the swift stream, which is particularly swollen and turbulent at this time of the year, was made possible by fine assistance rendered by the Russian fleet. The Turks, apparently believing the recent appearance in the Black Sea of their cruiser Breslau had caused the Russian fleet to abandon the operation which it had so successfully executed in connection with the land forces, and not anticipating a bombardment from the sea, set up no shore batteries, and limited their construction of defences to an elaborate system of wire entanglements. A vigorous bombardment from the sea, which demolished a great part of the Turkish fortifications, was followed by an infantry attack which met with little resistance.

Hot Fight Near Erzerum.

The Turks are still fiercely opposing the Russian forces operating against Baiburt, sixty miles northwest of Erzerum—fighting in which the Russians, if successful, are expected to unite their two groups of forces operating along the coast and to the west of Erzerum in such a way that further Turkish efforts to prevent a solid advance of the Russian armies over the whole width of the front would be useless.

A SureWay To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better

Bill—There is only one way to get shirts cheaper than by watching the advertisements in this paper, and that is to watch the neighbor's clothesline.

Margaret—You ask why the blonds are most popular with the young men. It is because, of course, "All's fair in love."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The dresses for girls just now show that what is new style for mother is good style for her daughter. So, if you are one who has been longing for an idea as to how the new dress should be made so that it will bear the stamp "dainty and smart," it will be to your advantage to copy the dress that is pictured as No. 7,050. This design shows the employing of a separate guimpe in the making that buttons at the back; you will choose the material to make the guimpe according to the texture, etc., of the material that will be used to make the dress proper. One feature worthy of notice is the closing of the dress, almost on the surplice order. It gives a neat effect to the guimpe and the vest continues its line much below the regulation line for a vest. There is certainly nothing ordinary in the treatment of the waist section, which is gathered under a belt of the material that is arranged at a lowered waistline because of the popularity of buttons for fastening, and as trimming they can well afford to take signal line and many are satisfied with using two of them. The shirt section here claims to seven backward turning plaits in each half, and has the rip piped away that belongs to the garment for a scallop. Edging is used to trim the collar of the guimpe and, as well, the cuff of the short sleeve.

The pattern is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years.

To copy this design for 8 year size will take, for the guimpe, 1⅝ yards 36 inch material, 2⅝ yards for the dress and 2⅝ yards edging.

By sending [illegible] to the office of this publication you may obtain the pattern.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 15c.

GENERAL STAFF NOW ARMY'S NERVE CENTRE

How Big British Armies Are Handled —Food and Ammunition Supply Are Well Organized

The British General Staff is the brains of the British army in the field. The Adjutant-General is assisted by two deputy Adjutant-Generals, one of whom is in charge of the administrative section, while the duties of the other are confined to the enforcing of military discipline and the punishment of any dereliction thereof. The administrative section deals with the supply of men to the armies, and attends the verification, publication, and classification of casualties, lists of which are telegraphed daily from all along the firing line. When military action has been decided upon the Adjutant-General is the first person to be consulted, so that he may make his arrangements for having troops ready in numbers sufficient for the project in hand.

Specialized

We now turn to that other most important lobe of the brain of an army, the Quartermaster-General's Staff, which has charge of army supplies of all sorts. It includes a Director of Supplies, a Director of Transport, a Director of Army Ordnance and a Director of Medical Services, all of whom are responsible to the Quartermaster-General for the work of their particular departments. The organization and foresight involved in the feeding and munitioning of a large army on foreign soil is almost superhuman.

The Director of Supplies is kept duly informed as to the number of men to be fed. Every day the requisite quantity of rations is forwarded from the supply base to the nearest railhead, where it is transferred to the mechanical transport of the Army Service Corps and conveyed to the distribution centre, where the regimental horse transport wagons cart it up to the firing line. Ammunition is sent up to the trenches in somewhat similar fashion. Each division sends in daily telegraphic reports stating the exact amount of ammunition expended, so that the department knows exactly how much to order from the base. An important part of the duties of the Director of Supplies is concerned with requisitions and billetings. There is a Claims Office at General Headquarters, to which the farmers and peasants who have supplied goods or accommodations must send in their receipts.

The Wounded

The Director of Medical Services in the Quartermaster-General's Department at General Headquarters receives almost hourly telegrams from all the clearing hospitals, informing him how many cases are ready for removal to the base hospital, so that the necessary arrangements can be made for hospital trains, motor ambulances. The Royal Army Medical Corps have now numerous motor ambulance convoys, each with fifty ambulance cars and repairing outfits, cars for officers, and motor cyclist attendants attached to the army in the field. When a man is wounded he is taken to the regimental aid post, which is usually situated immediately behind the firing line. There the regimental doctor, assisted by a corporal and five Red Cross orderlies, attends to him. He is then sent down by horse ambulance to the field hospital, whence, after receiving further attention, he is removed by motor ambulance to the casualty clearing station, and so ultimately to the hospital train and the base hospital.

Finally, what might be called the nerve centre of the army is the Army Signal Headquarters Office, installed and staffed by the signalling corps of the Royal Engineers. From this office, which pulsates with the tick of machines of different kinds, radiates the tentacles along which flash messages to and from every part of the field of operations. Not only are the telegraph and telephone kept busy, but messages are constantly being received and despatched by motorcycle despatch riders and by wireless telegraphy, often from aviators actually engaged in their dangerous reconnaissance work.

RUSSIA'S CARD FAMINE

More Important Duties of Venders Since War Began

Many Russian papers complain that playing cards have become very expensive and are almost unobtainable in the smaller towns and rural districts. The sale of the cards is a monopoly of the Empress Marie Federation, which has the rank of a Ministry, and the large profits are used for the support of the many schools and homes for impoverished aristocratic ladies. Since the war began the director of the foundation has decided that this institution had more important things to do than to ship millions of packs of cards to all parts of the empire. For a long time no cards were sent out at all and the supply of the distributing stations became exhausted. After many conferences it was finally decided that the cards should be sold through the post offices, but the postmasters objected, because they were all short of clerks and over-burdened. The result was that most Russians had to spend the long winter evenings without their beloved games of cards and will probably have to get along without them till the war ends.

DEATH FOR DESERTION

Strict Discipline Maintained in France's Polyglot Army

If in the country near the rear of the French battle line you see an unmarked soldier's grave, with no cross, or wreath above it, most likely it is the last resting place of an executed man. Discipline is strict in war time. Each French division has a regular permanent court-martial attached to it, which collects evidence of military crimes, tries offenders and carries out sentences. One of the officers of such a court-martial was induced to talk about his sombre duties. He said: "You must remember that armies to-day are made up of millions of men, men of all shades and colors of political sentiments and religious creeds—anarchists and socialists, Republicans and Royalists, atheists and ultramontanes, Jews and Mohammedans. Out of this material we have welded together an army the like of which the world has never seen. And this applies equally to our allies, and no less to our enemies.

"In these armies absolute obedience is demanded of every man, and a high plane of intelligent efficiency is required of the individual in order that he may maintain the standard of discipline of modern armies. Yet when I tell you that I have been continuously occupied in my present functions with my division, and we have brought before the court-martial only 215 men, of whom 16 have been executed, and 9, who received capital sentences, pardoned, you can see for yourself the astonishingly fine discipline of our armies.

"You would perhaps be surprised, but most of our cases are due to thoughtlessness on the part of the 'poilu.' Every soldier knows that to abandon his post in the face of the enemy, no matter for how brief a moment, is punishable by death, and sometimes the best of men have been shot for this seemingly small breach of discipline, which, nevertheless, is the most heinous crime in the whole military code."

In Tropical Countries Liver Chill Very Common

In Northern latitudes also the liver is a very unruly organ and requires careful watching. The concentrated vegetable juices in Dr. Hamilton's Pills act directly upon the liver and stimulate its action to a normal basis. The blood is purified, the skin grows clear, headaches disappear and robust health is firmly established. No medicine for the stomach, liver or kidneys can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. box all dealers.

MANY BOGUS SOLDIERS

Swindlers Play Upon Feelings of Relatives and Live Well

It is one of the unfortunate phases of the war that there are hundreds of despicable scoundrels going about in Britain, using their wits and their wiles to fleece the relatives of the gallant lads who are fighting so nobly. Relying on the fact that at a time like this the general public are swayed by sympathetic, generous, and patriotic feelings, these swindlers practise a variety of tricks which it is essential the public should be warned against. A favorite dodge is to impersonate the comrade of a soldier at the front. Dressed in khaki, the swindlers call upon the parents and wives of men in the fighting line, claiming to be home on short leave. The usual tale is that they have been asked to call, and having made themselves acquainted beforehand with particulars of the regiments of the men they claim to know, they are able to tell a story which is readily believed by the unsuspicious relatives. The plausible tale is poured into their eager and sympathetic ears, and it is not until later that they learn that the man they welcomed so heartily, providing him with food, little luxuries, and money, in the belief that he had come from their son or husband in the fighting line, was merely a swindler who, when he had got from them all he could, moved on to another town where he proceeded to carry on the same game.

FRENCH SHELL SUPPLY

Joffre Encourages Attacks, Reserves of Munitions Being Ample

The following order of General Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French army is asserted in Berlin to have been found in the possession of a French officer: "Order to the commanders of the different army groups. The enemy has made local attacks on different points of our front lately and all of them have been successful. This condition cannot continue without depressing the spirits of our army. I will not permit the period of waiting to lead to stagnation.

"Our troops must make every effort to repulse the German attacks, or to forestall them by attacking first. The efforts of the enemy can be rendered useless without sacrificing our infantry if the commanders make full use of our entire artillery, heavy and field, and our trench mortars. There is no necessity of saving ammunition, as we now have plenty of shells of all sizes. The Germans must in all circumstances be prevented from fortifying territory captured by them. Wherever they advance their new lines must be taken under concentrated fire at once and our troops must counter attack quickly after the necessary artillery preparation."—(Signed) Joffre

Praised by Lord French

"I cannot speak too highly of the valuable services rendered by Sir Douglas Haig," said Field Marshal Sir John French in his despatches describing the Battle of the Aisne. This war has been our new commander's big chance, and he has seized it so well that he has added enormously to his already great reputation. The Aisne, Ypres and Neuve Chapelle all showed Sir Douglas to be "a leader of great ability and power," in Sir John French's words.

FOUR DOCTORS DISAGREED

Pains Disappeared After Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wilmington, Del.—"I was suffering from a terrible backache and pains in my side, with bearing down pains and was very nervous. I was always tired, always drowsy, never could get enough sleep and could not eat. I had four doctors and each told me something different. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I got good results and I now feel better than I have felt for years and I am gaining in weight. I can gladly recommend it to all women."—Mrs. GEORGE W. SIEGOLD, 1611 West 4th Street, Wilmington, Del.

TROOPS TO QUELL RIOT.

Detachment Hurried to Fort Weller, Where Bulgarians are Disorderly.

St. Catharines, Ont., April 18. — A detachment of the 98th Battalion has just left for Fort Weller, to take charge of a strike among labourers on the ship canal. A body of Bulgarians demanding 25 cents an hour instead of 20 this morning quit work, and then chased Russians and Italians and men of other nationalities off the work by pelting them with stones.

Telephone message to the police and militia resulted in the soldiers being hurriedly despatched. It is not likely there will be any trouble between the strikers and the military, as the strikers are not armed. Several hundred men are involved.

MARRIED BY CONTRACT

Words "Love, Honour and Obey" Omitted from Ceremony.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Miss Anna Page, second niece of Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, and Robert Leopold Wolf, son of L. J. Wolf of Cleveland, were united by the third contract marriage ever held in New York County on April 8. The fact came to light yesterday when the contract was filed in the County Clerk's office.

Dr. Grant is said to have told Judge La Fetra that he was not surprised at the action of Miss Page, as she "had a mind of her own." She was a student at Bryn Mawr and is a graduate of Radcliffe College. She is twenty-three years old. The bridegroom is twenty-nine years old, a graduate of Harvard.

The contract marriage papers contain the phrase: "We promise to perform faithfully to the community all the duties of marriage necessary to his welfare."

DRINK HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST

Says you really feel clean, sweet and fresh inside, and are seldom ill.

If you are accustomed to wake up with a coated tongue, foul breath or a dull, dizzy headache; or, if your meals sour and turn into gas and acids, you have a real surprise awaiting you.

To-morrow morning, immediately upon arising, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is intended to first neutralize and then wash out of your stomach, liver, kidneys and thirty feet of intestines all the indigestible waste, poisons, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal.

Those subject to sick headaches, backache, bilious attacks, constipation or any form of stomach trouble, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin enjoying this morning inside-bath. It is said that men and women who try this become enthusiastic and keep it up daily. It is a splendid health measure for it is more important to keep clean and pure on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing disease, while the bowel pores do.

The principle of bathing inside is not new, as millions of people practice it. Just as hot water and soap cleanse, purify and freshen the skin, so hot water and a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Limestone phosphate is an inexpensive white powder and almost tasteless.

How Many Fathers Do This?

By Daniel Boone.
(President of Midland Life.)

I know a man who has five sons. He believes in Life Insurance, and this is what he did for the boys. When each of the boys reached the age of seventeen, he insured his life for $5,000 on the 20 PAYMENT LIFE PLAN in favor of the mother, and said to them. "My son, I am going to pay the premium on your policy and keep it in force until you go to work and are earning enough to pay the premium yourself, and then I am going to give the policy to you. You can continue your mother as beneficiary, or if you should marry, you can change it and make your wife the beneficiary. IT WILL BE A NEST EGG FOR YOU IN LATER YEARS, AND WILL BE AN INCENTIVE FOR YOU TO SAVE."

All of the sons are STILL LIVING. All of them are IN BUSINESS FOR THEMSELVES, and all of them are paying the premiums on their policies. Two of these policies will soon mature.

It was a wise thing for the father to do. IT GAVE THESE BOYS A START IN LIFE, and was the easiest and best possible method to assist them, and create a desire in their mind to save money.

This is a true story. I know it to be true because I am the man who wrote their applications.

If your Boy is not already insured, why not give him a start in Life by placing a policy for him in the Sun Life Assurance Company, Canada's Leading Life Assurance Company.

THE UNITED STATES SENDS ULTIMATUM TO GERMAN RULERS

Calls Upon Huns to Stop Submarine Warfare Immediately! Friendly Relations Are to Be Maintained---Note Has Already Gone--Heavy Bombardment on the Verdun Front.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—"Unless the Imperial German Government should now immediately declare in effect an abandonment of its present methods of warfare against passenger and freight carrying vessels, this Government can have no choice but to sever diplomatic relations with the Government of the German Empire altogether."

This declaration was made by President Wilson to Congress this afternoon at the climax of a message in which he indicted, in severest terms, the German submarine campaign.

"This decision I have arrived at," the President added, "with the keenest regret."

In the course of his speech Wilson said: "Vessels of neutral ownership, even vessels of neutral ownership bound from neutral port to neutral port, have been destroyed along with vessels of belligerent ownership, in constantly increasing numbers. Sometimes the merchantman attacked has been warned and summoned to surrender before being fired upon or torpedoed; sometimes passengers or crews have been vouchsafed the poor security of being allowed to take the ship's boats before she was sent to the bottom.

"But again and again the warning has been given, and no escape even to the ship's boats allowed to those on board.

"What this Government foresaw must happen, has happened. Tragedy has followed tragedy on the seas in such fashion, with such attendant circumstances, as to make it grossly evident that warfare of such sort, if warfare it be, cannot be carried on without the most palpable violation of the dictates alike of right and of humanity. Whatever the disposition and intention of the Imperial German Government, it has manifestly proved impossible for it to keep such methods of attack upon the commerce of its enemies within the bounds set by either the reason or the heart of mankind.

"One of the latest and most shocking instances of this method of warfare was that of the destruction of the French cross-Channel steamer Sussex. It must stand forth as the sinking of the steamer Lusitania did, as so singularly tragical and unjustifiable as to constitute a truly terrible example of the inhumanity of submarine warfare as the commanders of German vessels have for the last twelve months been conducting it. If this instance stood alone, some explanation, some disavowal by the German Government, some evidence of criminal mistake or wilful disobedience on the part of the commander of the vessel that fired the torpedo might be sought or entertained, but unhappily such instances are many.

"Again and again the imperial German Government has given this Government its solemn assurance that at least passenger ships would not be thus dealt with, and yet it has again and again permitted its undersea commanders to disregard those assurances with entire impunity.

Great liners like the Lusitania and the Arabic, and mere ferryboats like the Sussex, have been attacked with a moment's warning, sometimes before they had even become aware that they were in the presence of an armed vessell of the enemy, and the lives of non-combatants, passengers and crew, have been sacrificed wholesale, in a manner which the Government of the United States cannot but regard as wanton and without the slightest color of justification. The ominous toll of lives has mounted into hundreds.

The President was grave and earnest as he spoke. Congress and the galleries scarcely stirred until he finished. No applause interrupted. A full minute after the President ceased speaking a brief storm of applause broke, with the member on the floor and in the galleries participating. A "rebel" yell, given when he entered the Chamber, was not repeated. At the height of the cheering President Wilson stepped down from the speaker's platform and departed from the chamber. He entered his automobile and was driven directly back to the White House.

The President had made no request of Congress. He had simply fulfilled a promise that he would advise Congress in case he took action such as he reported to-day having taken.

The senators returned to their Chamber and the House resumed consideration of its Agricultural Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—President Wilson to-day served notice that Germany must stop her submarine campaign immediately or diplomatic relations will be severed. The note to Germany has gone.

These two facts became known to-day following a conference between President Wilson and members of the Senate and House Foreign Relations committees this morning.

President Wilson has sent an ultimatum to Germany calling upon her to stop her submarine warfare immediately if friendly relations between the two countries are to be maintained.

The communication to Germany, held up for twenty-four hours until the President could make arrangements for addressing a joint session of Congress and for laying the plan of his action before the members of Foreign relations committee, is now on its way.

Presumably the United States' demand to stop the submarine campaign refers to that part of the submarine campaign which allows the sinking of ships without warning. It will be noted that this note is different from previous ones, in that it is a virtual ultimatum that friendly relations will cease after one more offence by Germany or her submarines.

(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, April 19.—A spirit akin to war pervades Washington this afternoon following the President's message to Congress.

In the corridors of the Capitol, on the street, in the different departments, and among officials generally, the common expression is "Germany will not yield."

But the President and his official family continue hopeful that Germany may concede the United States demands.

For the first time in German-American difficulties Ambassador Bernstorff left the State Department to-day unsmiling. He was plainly nervous. "I have not been given my passports. I know nothing of your Government's intentions," he replied to questions. Bernstorff's attitude was strikingly different from that he has affected with reporters heretofore.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—German Ambassador Von Bernstorff had an appointment to see Secretary of State Lansing at 11:30 o'clock this forenoon.

It was presumed Bernstorff sought to make an eleventh-hour effort to stave off pending German-American developments.

No Infantry Fighting On Verdun Front

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official Communique), April 19.—A rather violent bombardment occurred last night north of Verdun in the region south of Haudremont, the War Office stated to-day, but bad weather is hindering infantry operations.

Heavy rainstorms occurred on the Verdun front yesterday, and a thick fog overhung most of the western theatre of war, making definite operations out of the question. On the west bank of the Meuse the Germans contented themselves with dropping shells at infrequent intervals on Hill 304 and on Dead Man Hill positions.

LISBON, April 19.—The Norwegian steamer Terje Viken, 3,579 tons, has been sunk.

COALITION GOVERNMENT.

LONDON, Eng., April 19.—After a three-hour conference of the Cabinet to-day, Premier Asquith appeared in the House of Commons and stated that no agreement had been reached on the conscription issue, and we must postpone a statement regarding it until Tuesday next. He said that unless an agreement was reached there would probably be a break-up of the present Coalition Government.

HON. J. R. STRATTON PASSED AWAY THIS MORNING AT HOT SPRINGS AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

THE LATE HON. J. R. STRATTON

The public and readers of the Examiner will learn with much greater sorrow than surprise, that Hon. J. R. Stratton, died at Hot Springs, Arkansas, this morning. This is the end of a tedious illness that has lasted since November, 1913. It is well known that every resource of medical science or other amelioration was employed. Mr. Stratton has spent one winter at Clifton Springs, and the last two winters at Hot Springs, Arkansas, Mrs. Stra ton and a nurse always accompanying him. This winter passed, he and Mrs. Stratton were looking to returning home in May, but this morning death closed the scene, and up to the time of writing no details have been received.

Nothing cannot yet be decided as to funeral arrangements. Mr. Alderman Stratton and Mrs. J. B. Ormond left this afternoon for Hot Springs, to be a help in time of trouble.

Hon. James Robert Stratton was the eldest son of the late James Stratton, at one time public school inspector of this county, and later Collector of Customs, at the port of Peterborough, and of Rosanna Armstrong, his wife. He was born at Millbrook on May 3rd, 1857. In early life the family removed to Peterborough, so that Mr. Stratton has been virtually a life-long resident of this city, whose welfare and interests lay close to his heart and influenced his actions through all the years of his adult active life. He was educated at the Public and High Schools, and at an early age, while still a minor, he entered journalistic life as the opening to a public career for which his ambition and temperament specially fitted him. He took over the Examiner printing business, at that time conducted by his father, and his energy and aptitude for business soon manifested themselves in the steadily progressing character of the newspaper to whose weekly publication was added daily publication in 1883. What the Daily Examiner became as an influence in the community under his able control, we have evidence to-day.

As a citizen, Mr. Stratton took an active interest in the welfare of the town, and at while still almost a youth he was for several terms a member of the Board of Education. In the general elections of 1886 he was selected as the Liberal candidate for West Peterborough, a constituency regarded as a stronghold of Conservatism. He was opposed in his candidature by the then sitting member, the late John Carnegie, the strongest opponent that could at that time have been brought against him. In spite of such handicaps, Mr. Stratton, by the exercise of his energy and the merit of the political cause he championed, was successful, being elected by a majority of 32, a striking tribute to his popularity and popular recognition of qualities of good and effective faithful representation; and the long and brilliant services he rendered his riding, justified in the fullest way the confidence reposed in him by the electors of West Peterborough on his first appeal for their confidence and support. His great victory in this election, and his promise of ability, were recognized by the government of the day, and Hon. A. S. Hardy, at that time head of the government of Ontario, selected him to move the Address in Reply in the Legislature.

Mr. Stratton's first election set the pace for still greater successes in this respect. His faithful and efficient services to his constituency and constituents, his consistent recognition in principle and practice that he was the representative of all classes in the riding without respect to party affiliations, without regard to support or opposition, made his subsequent re-elections increasingly eloquent in their expression of popular appreciation of good service. At the succeeding general election in 1890, he was returned by a majority of 450. In 1894 his majority was increased to 750. In the election of 1898, his majority over his opponent reached 750, and at the elections of 1902, his majority reached the figures, 999, and he was elected by acclamation on occupying the office of Provincial Secretary and at a subsequent election after a faithful service of his riding and its interests, popular confidence culminated in an electoral majority of 1200.

In October 1899 he was made Provincial Secretary in the government of Hon. G. W. Ross. So highly was Hon. Mr. Stratton esteemed by his constituents in West Peterborough, he was, on returning for re-election, returned by acclamation, an honour accorded to no other of his colleagues in the government. On this occasion he was recipient of signal honours at the hands of fellow citizens. He was tendered a public banquet organized and attended by both his political friends and his political opponents, one of the most able and prominent Conservatives in the riding, Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, presiding as chairman. It is a matter of record that in his official capacity he applied the same principles of business and organizing efficiency that had contributed to his success in business and in his representative capacity. In November, 1904, for business reasons, he retired from official and public life to devote himself to the large business interests he had, with all the other demands upon his time and energies, so successfully built up. From the beginning of his parliamentary career the energy of Mr. Stratton's character, his broad views on public questions and his aggressive instinct in the direction of doing large things, attracted the attention of his associates in the legislature. He was an optimist and had strong faith in the resources of the province. He was the pioneer of the marvellous development that has taken place and is still taking place in what is called New Ontario. In a debate on the budget in the late nineties, Mr. Stratton delivered a remarkable address. At that time the northern region of the province now known as New Ontario, was popularly terra incognita. Mr. Stratton had, however, studied the region, and in his address he graphically pictured its possibilities, its great mineral, forest and agricultural resources, and made strong appeal for a vigorous policy of investigation to be followed by a programme of development. In pursuance of this strong appeal, the Ross government took measures to thoroughly explore the new territory; its potential wealth was revealed and the government entered upon the construction of a development railway. In the very work of building this railway was furnished justificaton of the work. In excavating, the silver was discovered that, with fuller development, has made Northern Ontario the site of the richest silver camp in the world.

But Mr. Stratton could not be contented out of politics. In the elections of 1908 he became a candidate and was elected to represent West Peterborough in the Dominion Parliament where he served with equal fidelity, the interests of his constituents, but in the elections of 1911, he was an unsuccessful candidate, amongst many other Liberals who went down under the peculiar influences that prevailed at that time.

It is recognized that in his twenty years of public life and representative service, Mr. Stratton had developed a deserved reputation as a man of high public spirit, broad views and practical grasp of public questions, and that in all ways he was one of the best, if not the best, parliamentary representative West Peterborough ever had. He not only was watchful for Peterborough in the legislative arena, but did many things to promote its interests. He was influential in having the waters of the Trent watershed, then partially under provincial control, brought under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Dominion government, with possibilites of more practical development and utilization. He is to be be credited with procuring

To-day's Casualties Add To Local List

MOUNTED RIFLES HEAVILY SHELLED BUT LOSSES LIGHT

Pte. Norman Darling, Peterboro' Boy Says Many Shells Fell—Describes An Exciting Bombing Party in No-Man's Land

AN INTERESTING LETTER

That the Canadian Mounted Rifles Brigade have been heavily bombarded is the information given by Pte. Norman Darling who left here with the 8th C.M.R. and is now at the front with the 1st Battalion Mounted Rifles in an interesting letter to his mother, Mrs. Frank Darling, 542 Water street. Pte. Darling says writing on April 1st: —

"Have a few minutes to myself to-night and as everything has been of an extra hard nature these last few weeks, why naturally my thoughts go back to where everything is peace and quietness and I'll sure know how to appreciate the comforts of home and parents as I never did before. Came out of the front line last night and am now a short way back and after three or four days of working party, etc. will go still further back for a few days rest. This is sure a busy corner and while in supports or front line trench, between bombing parties, rifle grenades, shrapnel and high explosives one has to be on the go all the time. Coming out last night we got shelled pretty heavy but only had a couple of casualties and this First is sure a lucky outfit. Else we would have had a heavy list as several shells burst right among us and no one was hit. The other regiments in this brigade have all had heavy lists but while we are in, they shell away just the same as at the others, but never seem to hit the right spot.

A BOMBING PARTY.

"We sure had some fun the other night and before I knew where I was I was nearly into the German trench. They started to toss over bombs and we immediately came back at them. I'm a bomber you know and four of them climbed over the parapet and took after them. I got away with fifteen bombs and when I found I had none left I began to realize I was getting too far away from home, so beat it back fast as I could and arrived safely, although a machine gun was popping away as hard as it could. Our post is only forty-five yards away from Frits so we are almost close enough to toss bully beef tins over to them. Two nights ago Fritz fired about 2,000 shells of all descriptions at us or at least they covered about two miles of our front and we could hardly believe that only three men were wounded. It sure was a pretty sight to watch, but rather trying on the nerves but I've run out of nerve myself for after the close call I feel sure I'm proof against anything, so don't worry.

Guide: The sad intelligence has reached Port Hope that three of our most honored sons, Thomas Foster, Wilbur Joyce and Jack Edmunds, who have been defending their king and country, "somewhere in France," have been wounded. Private Foster's wounds are not serious, as the report says he is convalescing. It is feared however, that the condition of Private Joyce is still serious. He is suffering from shell shock, and while not injured, the effect of the shock may prove serious. Private Edmunds' wound is in the neck, but from the fact that he was well enough to be removed to the hospital gives the hope that his condition is not serious.

The hockey team of the 61st Battalin of Winnipeg, holders of the Allan Cup, and triular champions of Canada, are fairly on the way to harder battles than those in which they fitted themselves on the ice last winter. They are among the 5,763 soldiers of the Empire whose arrival from Canada on the Olympic is reported from England. This is the greatest number of men ever carried on a single transport on a warlike errand in the record of all time.

Lance Corp. Ed. T. Shrimpton, bomb thrower with 21st Battalion, 212 Aylmer street.

Four more Peterborough boys appear in to-day's casualty list, a total of nine in the last two days. One of to-day's casualties is Gunner F. W. Eggleton of the 33rd Battery, the first member of that unit to be hit.

SIGNALLER F. E. WISE.

Official word of the wounding of Signaller Frank E. Wise, of the 19th Battalion, formerly of the 39th, was received by his father, Mr. Frank Wise, superintendent of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, in a wire from the Adjutant General's Department last night. The telegram stated that Signaller Wise had been shot in the face, arm and breast. On Saturday Mr. Wise had been informed in a private cablegram that his son had already reached hospital in England, and that his wounds were slight. Signaller Wise was born in Peterborough 21 years ago ago, and enlisted here early last year with the 39th Battalion. When that battalion reached England he was drafted to the 19th Battalion, and has been at the front with that unit.

PTE. PATRICK DUGGAN.

Mr. Chas. Duggan received a telegram this morning that a relative of his and a former resident of Peterborough, Pte. Patrick Duggan, of the 14th (Royal Mounted) Battalion, had been wounded and admitted to No. 23 General Hospital on April 10th. Pte. Duggan formerly was employed at the C.G.E. and enlisted in Montreal with the first contingent. He was reported wounded in the battle of Langemarck a year ago, but the report was in error, although he was admitted to hospital soon after that fight on account of the effects of exposure.

GUNNER EGGLETON.

Gunner Frederick William Eggleton is another Peterborough member of the Canadian Field Artillery to appear in the casualty list. According to the official message received by his wife, who resides at 539 Gilchrist street, Gunner Eggleton was wounded in the right leg. A son, Pte. F. R. Eggleton, enlisted in the 39th Battalion, but since his arrival in England, has been transferred to a Nova Scotia regiment. The latter was only seventeen years of age when he enlisted. He has been in the trenches since September last and nothing has been heard of him for over a month. His father enlisted in the 33rd Battery here last autumn and is the first member of that battery to appear in the list. It is only a short time since his wife received word to the effect that her husband was leaving for the front.

Prior to enlisting Gunner Eggleton was employed at the Canadian General Electric Company's works. He resided in Peterborough for upwards of ten years. His wife and four children reside at 539 Gilchrist street, while a son is in the trenches.

LANCE CORP. E. T. SHRIMPTON

On to-day's casualty list appears the name of Lance. Corp. Edward Shrimpton a Peterborough member of the 21st Battalion who is reported wounded. Lance Corp. Shrimpton was a member of the Grenade Company of the Battalion to which also belonged Pte. W. H. Saxby who was on yester-

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19, 1916

THE LATE MR. STRATTON.

In his two score years of life of unusual public, political and business activity, as well as in the public and private life of Peterborough city and county, Hon. J. R. Stratton occupied a prominent place. He was, in both ambition and aptitude, a born politician. While still in his boyhood, he took an active part in political movements and early in life entered actively into them, through the medium of representation of West Peterborough in the Ontario Legislature. In 1883 he became Liberal candidate, against one of the strongest Conservatives in the history of the riding, and though West Peterborough was a Conservative stronghold, he won the contest by a small majority, the forerunner of increasingly large majorities for many years, till on the occasion of his last appeal to the people his majority reached 1200. This was a success won upon sheer merit in representation and generous recognition of it by well served constituents for as Mr. Stratton's most bitter political opponents speaking from their hearts admitted, and still admit, the West Peterborough never had a more painstaking, efficient and faithful representative, nor one who discharged his duty to his constituents more conscientiously and impartially irrespective of party considerations. His influence as a private member was exercised to obtain many substantial benefits for Peterborough city and county. He had a nice appreciation of the duties of a representative in his personal relations to his constituents. He regarded every one of them, no matter whether political friend or political foe, as having claims upon his good offices. His influence as a public man was used for his constituents in many ways outside of the claims that could be urged upon a member of the Legislature. His delight was to do a kindness—to help the lame dog over the stile—and his innate kindness of heart and geniality gave grace to the favours it was his habit to bestow. With all his political and business success he still remained to his old time associates the same genial and generous friend and he considered an opportunity of doing a kindness as a kindness to himself.

In all respect, Mr. Stratton has been a citizen whom Peterborough delights to honour. In his business career, where was displayed his character of energy, positiveness and enterprise, he achieved a large success. His personal relations to Peterborough, which were those of a citizen strictly alive to its interests in every way; his thirty years of devotion to public life in the interests of the province and his constituency, both combine to form a record of faithful and fruitful representative service, conquest of public confidence, and personal esteem, seldom achieved by a public man and citizen. He has gone from our public life and from the ranks of citizenship after a strenuous life of usefulness, service and a large achievement which so set him apart in the ranks of active life as to make applicable to him the tersely eloquent words of Shakspere:

He was a man take him for all in all,
We shall not look upon his like again.

GOOD OLD KINGSTON.

"The past few years have witnessed a wonderful change in Kingston. She is no longer slow and effete. Today she pulsates with new life and energy. Evidences of this are noticeable on every hand. Miles of paved streets, a new 'White Way,' an expensive causeway, the beginning of a national harbour, extension of the municipally-owned public utilities, new industries, extension and enlargement of our factories, the erection of many fine homes, the attraction of additional population, a rejuvenated Board of Trade, the growth of Queen's University, an enlivened and enlightened public spirit — all these point to advancement and progress of a healthy and vigorous type. Kingston to-day has the right of way. Progress and prosperity are her..."—Kingston Whig (Prosperity Editor).

RED HERRINGS.

The London Free Press with other agitators and mischief makers of its kind, think it strange that Mr. Rowell, who had luncheon at the Rideau Club, Ottawa, at which the same day Sir Wilfrid Laurier also had luncheon, did not discuss bilingual schools, with the Liberal leader; and the Journal adds that "it is discouraging to learn from Mr. Rowell that in his meeting with Sir Wilfrid the topic of bilingual schools was studiously avoided. Why should it not be avoided? Sir Wilfrid, as the leader of a party, has no more to do with bilingual schools than the question has at this time to do with the national duty of Canada. He can only have an interest in the subject in common with any other citizen. Bilingual schools are solely a provincial question, the Confederation Act giving the provinces exclusive jurisdiction in the matter of education.

The Free Press also says that an appeal has gone up for this province—Ontario—to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to call off the bilingual agitation in Quebec." From whom does the appeal come? From those who want to make political capital, from those who want to put Sir Wilfrid—a political opponent—in an embarrassing position? If an appeal should come from Ontario to federal statesmen to "call off the bilingual agitation of Quebec," it should be to Sir Robert Borden. It is he that has influence with the element, chiefly behind the bilingual agitation, especially in the political aspect that has been recently forced upon it. Sir Robert Borden has his chief Quebec support from the bilingual agitators of Quebec, the Nationalists, who in virtue of their compact with the Conservative party, force Sir Robert to give the bilingual agitators place in his cabinet and on the Speaker's dais. Sir Wilfrid has no relations with the Nationalists who are his declared and bitter enemies, for whose political destruction Nationalism was fostered, encouraged and officially recognized by the Conservative party, to which Nationalism owes its very existence and the development of its sinister influence in our national life.

The resuscitation of the bilingual question at this time may easily have behind it the desire to provide an anti-climax to the shells investigation, if it has not a deeper influence behind it, the influence of German intrigue such as has provoked the Mexican-American embroglio.

It can easily, at bottom, be due to German influence, for the agitation at this time has the effect of weakening Canada's effort in helping on the war. Without any reference to the merits involved in the bilingual agitation, its activity at the present time is sinister and dangerous. Above every other issue Canada's business is exclusively to help win this war. Anything that prevents unity of sentiment and action in regard to the discharge of our national duty is inopportune and impertinent. Bilingual interests can wait, but our war work can't wait. The agitators who have at the present time dragged bilingualism to the front of the political stage and given it a political character that does not belong to it, are the sinners, and the chief sinners are those in Ontario who for the sake of party gain are the protagonists in the work of national interruption of duty, such agitation involves if it does not produce. For the present the bilingual question can be shelved without injury and with advantage—to its interests. The interests that will thus be reserved for later attention cannot suffer much from delay till after we have finished this war. The German spirit of intrigue and obstruction inherent in Nationalism has corrupted the populace mind in Quebec as the German spirit has corrupted the German people. It is no doubt due to this influence alone, plus perhaps the apathy of the government to recruiting, that has lessened recruiting in Quebec. Under normal conditions the people of Quebec, with the fatherland in peril, with more than the French language—the very existence of France at stake, would have come forward en masse if they had not been tricked, duped, blinded, prejudiced and misled by the Nationalist element which has, by the help of a political alliance, destroyed the work of Canadian participation in naval defence and forced us to play second fiddle to Australia, which has a splendid navy of her own—a live factor in the war, such as Canada would have had, the Nationalists permitting.

The Nationalist red herring has crossed the scent on Canada's upward way in many ways and the bilingual flurry is the latest development in prevention of Canada doing her honest duty in waging this fate-deciding war.

HATS OFF TO THEM.

A significant tribute to the magnificent defence of Verdun by the French in that paid by Dr. Max Osborne, the correspondent at the front for the Berlin Vossiche Zeitung; it also reveals the feeling of disquiet that has begun to prevail in Germany because of the prolongation of the conflict which has been so costly in lives. Dr. Osborne, writing on April 7 from German headquarters under censorship, says:

"Those who have looked on impatiently from a distance at the systematic slowness of the advance before Verdun would be filled with shame if they could survey the situation personally."

He speaks of again, by a visit to the battlefield, having "gained a conception of the colossal difficulties [illegible] all of which he says "speak a language that can be understood."

Who in Canada that attempts to appreciate the kind of task that the defenders of Verdun are wrestling with so nobly these days can help a feeling of the sincerest admiration for our French allies who, on the shell-torn banks of the Meuse, are fighting Canada's battle as well as their own against the Teuton spoilsmen.—Ottawa Free Press.

"INDUSTRIAL CANADA" CONTRIBUTES TO GRAVITY OF THE SHELL CHARGES

"Industrial Canada," the organ of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, has now added its contribution to the grave charges which Sir Sam Hughes is called upon to answer. In the leading editorial of its current issue, it refers to the way in which the Shell Committee handled the munitions contracts as a "national misfortune," and it finds little excuse for the Government in connection with the matter, since the Government were warned again and again by their own friends. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association approached the Government in a spirit of helpfulness and warning early in the war, but their help was refused and their warnings unheeded. At last, when the situation became intolerable, "the license to loot had to be terminated."

This is strong language, as coming from the official mouthpiece of the men who put the Borden Government into power, and it shows the depth of feeling aroused by the scandals which the Government have been trying to hush up. As for Sir Robert Borden, "Industrial Canada" cannot believe that he wished to shield corruption, but it records the fact that instead of getting help from him in shielding the national honour, those who had determined to terminate the "license to loot" had to "smash down the barriers of reserve and uncover the rottenness that lay beyond, regardless of feelings that might be hurt, of reputations that might be damaged, and of heads that might have to be sacrificed"

"Industrial Canada" then proceeds to make a remarkable revelation on its own account. It is shown that Messrs. T. A. Russell and Lloyd Harris, of the Russell Motor Company, who tried to obtain for their company fuse orders that had lain in the hands of the Shell Committee from November, 1914, to April, 1915, were referred by General Hughes to Colonel Allison in the Manhattan Hotel, New York, for details. They sought, instead, to do business with the Shell Committee, but were again referred to Allison, who was said to have the matter in hand with prospective contractors in the United States. Finally, they obtained a promise from the Committee that one million of the five million fuses required would be held pending the receipt of a tender from them. They were given two weeks only in which to make their enquiries and calculations and to put in their tender.

On May 25, 1915, they tendered for a million fuses at $4.20. On May 19, six days before their tender was put in, and regardless of the promise to hold the business open, the Shell Committee awarded contracts for the whole five million fuses to companies promoted by Allison and his associates. Of the fuses a small portion was to be made at $4.09 each, but the price for the majority was $4.50. Later the Russell Motor Company made a contract under which these fuses are being made for $3.70 each. "Industrial Canada" asks: "Were binding commitments regarding this business made over the heads of the Shell Committee? If so, by whom and for what purpose?" It adds:

There would seem to be something behind all this calling for explanation. For over five months the committee had been waiting on the convenience of the United States promoters to get over $20,000,000 worth of contracts signed. At last a real opportunity presents itself of getting the business placed in Canada. For the sake of gaining only six days' time, not in the actual delivery of the fuses, but simply in the signing of a contract for their manufacture, and without waiting those extra six days to see what the competitive tender was going to be, a committee of Canadian business men violate a promise, pass up honest Canadian capital and honest Canadian labour in order to provide a feast for a bunch of Yankee grafters, and incidentally assent to an arrangement for plundering the British Treasury to the tune of $2,000,000? There must be a reason, and the reason should be made known.

Sir Sam Hughes declares he is ready to submit the whole affair to the light of day, and to assist to the extent of his power in the inquiry which is to be held. With such demands as that of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association coming from the Government's own party, it is to be seen that no further attempts to hush up will be tolerated. The inquiry must be a real one, and Sir Robert Borden and Sir Sam Hughes might as well recognize this at once and act accordingly.—Montreal Herald.

A True Response.

Experience has shown that the German Foreign Office is capable of making different kinds of replies to friendly inquiries as to the fate of neutrals who chance to fall victims to the policy of frightfulness at sea, but the most convincing response is that which is recorded from day to day in the list of new outrages and assassinations.—New York World.

Clean-up Campaign.

The "clean-up and brighten up campaign for Havelock, launched last week by a few of our public spirited citizens, and endorsed by the town council, bids fair to prove a big success. Elaborate preparations will be made to make the first week of May a memorable one in the history of Havelock and the week's work is to culminate on Arbor Day, May 5th, with every man, woman and child cleaning and beautifying the village streets.

On Wednesday evening, April 19th, a public meeting will be held in the town hall, when complete information will be given as to the aims and purposes of the campaign, and all arrangements made to carry on the good work. The meeting will be enlivened by the the use of coloured slides, illustrating the result of similar campaigns in other places. Another splendid attraction will be a one-act play entitled "Civic Friends and Foes," which will be put on by twenty-five school children, and which strikingly illustrates the value of cleanliness.

Question of "Who Is An American" Proves Puzzling

WHO IS AN AMERICAN?

Here is a Question that Arose in a Canadian Hospital.

"I'm an American," you say proudly to a French officer.

"Ah! North or South American?" he says.

"North."

"Ah! From Mexico or from Labrador?"

"United States."

"Ah, yes, I understand."

"I'm an American," you say to a Canadian.

"So am I," he says delightedly. "I'm from Canada."

"I'm from the United States," you explain.

"Shake," he says, "Always glad to meet an American."

"I'm an American," you say to a war correspondent from South America, speaking in French.

"So am I." "Ah, you speak Spanish, then? What Republic do you come from?"

"From the United States."

"Lucky none of us Americans are in this war, isn't it?" he says.

After a few experiences like this you make your claims to nationality more definite. You say "I'm from the United States."

The big question is, "Who is an American?"

Salonika, Greece, April 19.—There were three parsons in our hospital staff. One was an Episcopalian from Toronto. He had been a member of a committee of clergymen from that city who had gone to Philadelphia to look into the matter of inviting Billy Sunday to Toronto, and had reported on their return that "there was nothing doing; too strong medicine."

But this one person, here in Salonika, was for Billy Sunday strong.

"It isn't the right way to preach religion," he said, "but he's right about alcohol. He's a powerful opponent of whiskey, and his work in that direction is beyond criticism. He is in Toronto now, I believe, or at least he was scheduled to be there at about this time."

Interested in Sunday.

The parson was right. Billy Sunday was there and the next batch of newspapers that came in from Toronto were splashed with Sundayisms. The nurses began talking Billy Sunday. So did the Canadian order lies. The British officers began asking:

"Who is this extraordinary person Sunday?"

The nurse tried to explain. So did the orderlies.

"He preaches slang" was the gist of their explanation. "He's a revivalist."

"Who goes to hear such sermons as that?"

"Everybody," said one nurse. "The papers say that thousands of Toronto people go to hear him."

"I never can understand you Americans," said the officer who had asked the question.

"It's just as hard for us Americans to understand you old country folks," said the nurse.

The question, "Who is this Billy Sunday person?" became persistent. All the home newspapers from Toronto told of his meetings and all the home talk of the Toronto nurses was of the Sunday meetings.

One British officer finally appealed to the Canadian Episcopalian person.

"I've got a book about him and his work," said the parson quietly. "That will answer your question better than I can."

The next day a big book on Billy Sunday appeared in the ward. It became so popular that the parson donated it to the hospital library.

Like American Slang.

No growth in grace was evident as a result of Billy's religion; no abatement was noticed in the usual vain evening demand for "hot toddy" as a result of Billy's anti-alcoholism. But there was a tremendous rise in respect for American slang, and an increase in wonder at American institutions.

"Most astonishing place, America," was the verdict of most of the officers after they had completed the book on Sunday sermons.

But the last you saw of the book, which was number 312—it was the grimiest and most bethumbed volume in the library.

Every morning at 6.15, into the dim morning twilight of the tent stepped a huge man in military uniform, walking carefully so as not to disturb the sleepers. He went to the cot next to yours and bent over the blanket-buried form of an Irish officer who had taken 200 men on to a hill in Serbia and had come away with only 26 and—a wound. You heard the huge man whispering, and in the dim light you saw him making the sign of the cross. Then you saw him tip toe out again. This was another one of the parsons, who, after his Catholic forms, gave communion in his morning rounds, to those of that faith, calling to the attention and care of the Most High these men who have been in the valley of the shadow of death, and who will go into it again, most likely, before the great war is ended.

Parsons Prominent.

And then there was the third parson—for we had specialists in religions as we have specialists among the physicians—who was a Presbyterian. He has a Christian Endeavor meeting once a week, and "Onward Christian Soldiers" was his favourite musical number, though the nurses in his little congregation seemed to prefer the old 'Glory Song.'

They were always about, these parsons. They talked politics and war or whatever else the common topic; they helped to write letters and they were pleased to bring books or dainties from distant Salonika, but all three of them seemed to know and by their constant presence they pleasantly showed it, that they were there as guides for all who, by the fortunes of war, must take the long journey. They pointed by three different roads, to the same place.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—The story is told of a number of students who decided to play a trick on their professor, who was a specialist on the study of insects, etc. This professor could name at sight any bug or beetle that came in his way. These students, it is said, got their heads together and manufactured a bug, by putting together very dexteriously a piece of this, that and the other, beetle and bug. They brought their specimen to their professor and asked him to name it. "Name it," said the professor. "Yes I can name it; it is a humbug."

Now, Mr. Editor, this incident reminds us of another just such trick that a number of so called modern scholars have attempted to play on the Christian public. These so called modern scholars, they call them "higher critics" (although there is nothing high or holy about them), they got their heads together and manufactured a new theology. They first got a big piece of Darwinism with his evolution, or "bruteism," as Darwin's theory of evolution is more properly called. Then they added a very large percentage of German nationalism, then to that was added a lot of "Pastor Russelism" which denies point blank the resurrection of the man Christ Jesus. Then with a lot of unitarianism mixed up with the whole mess they come to the people with their new theology labelled "assured results of the higher critics." But Mr. Editor the men with their wits about them, or as St. Paul would express it, men "who have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil,) Heb. 5:14, or to come near home, men like our own Conners, Cowan and Pogue. These men and many others label this fearfully and wonderfully compounded mixture of the destructive critics, "Humbug."

FRENCH DEFENDER OF VERDUN SKIPS ROPE FOR EXERCISE

General Petain Insists Upon Remaining a Plain Soldier

PARIS, April 19.—General Petain, the defender of Verdun and now in supreme command in that sector, after rising from a Colonelship in 19 months, thinks no more of climbing trees, sleeping in a hayloft or wading through ice cold water than he does of eating breakfast in the morning.

The latest hero of the French army refused to be a hero. He insists upon remaining a plain soldier. He usually makes his headquarters in one of the poorest houses of a war-zone village and instead of the usual flag, sentries and buzzing motor-cars about his front door he stations a couple of men in citizen's clothes to keep off visitors, and lets it go at that.

Although 58 years old, he skips the rope ten minutes every morning before breakfast. A shave and bath add to his appetite and so his day gets off with a flying start. He is willing himself to do anything he asks the humblest private in his command to do. If manoeuvres in the rain and mud are necessary, he often puts himself at the head of some company and walks with them bareheaded and minus waterproofs.

Must Have Ability.

Officers desiring a place on his staff can't have the job simply because they are chic; they must be able to do rough service, ride a bicycle, run a mile in record time, eat plain food and work any and all sorts of hours.

One of the general's favourite ways of taking observations is to climb to the top of some high tree and see for himself what is going on. He can get to the top of such a tree quicker than any man on his staff. He watched the Verdun fighting in an armoured motor car in which he dashed up and down the line. He has had 17 chauffeurs in two months. He goes so fast he wears them out in a day or so.

Philippe Petain was born April 24, 1856, at Cauchy-la-Tour, Department of the Pas-de-Calais, or near the English Channel. His career was not brilliant, though he was an honour man of his class at the war college, for he was not made a colonel until he was 55 years of age. This was his grade when the war came on and brought to light his real military value.

Thirty days after hostilities began he was brigadier general and three days more saw him acting general of the division, to which grade he was advanced a few days later. The three stars of a corps commander were given him Oct. 25 when he went to the head of the 33rd which was to cover itself with glory at Carency, Notre-Dame-de-Lorette and Azlain, in Artois.

In April, 1915, he was acting commander of the Second Army and in June the title became permanent. He was one of the main springs in the Champagne fighting.

General Petain, soon to be 60 years old, a colonel less than two years ago, has won his way considerably on merit. He has never had a "pull," as proved by the fact that when the war began he was on the point of retiring from the army with a low rank for a Continental army man.

KELLY LOSES LEGAL FIGHT

Must Return to Winnipeg to Face Charge of False Pretences.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Thomas Kelly, wealthy contractor, wanted in Winnipeg in connection with alleged frauds in the construction of the Parliament Buildings there, to-day lost his fight against extradition in the Supreme Court. The high court affirmed the Federal Court in Chicago, which refused to release Kelly on habeas corpus.

Canada asked for Kelly's extradition that he might be tried on a charge of obtaining $1,250,000 by false pretences on the Parliament Buildings contract. His case was argued only a few days ago, and the court at special request gave speedy consideration. Apparently no legal process now is available to prevent Kelly's extradition to Manitoba.

DUBUC AND JAMES NOT FIT FOR EARLY SEASON GAMES?

One of the recruit pitchers may be forced to work in regular turn with the veterans of the Detroit club this spring, if Manager Jennings makes good a threat he recently uttered, according to writers who have been travelling with the club. Dubuc and James, veterans, have not been able to do much work thus far and Jennings is said to have informed them that he would release them if they did not soon get into condition. Dubuc's pitching arm has been bothering him.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

MANUFACTURERS SHOW CONFIDENCE IN THE DEPARTMENT

Present Chief Howard and His Assistant Chief With Sums Equivalent to Those Cut Off By the Council's Salary Cutting Scheem

WAS A BIG SURPRISE

Tme manufacturers of the city placed on record in no uncertain manner last night their sincere confidence in the administration of the Peterborough Fire Department and their condemnation of the city council's policy of salary-cutting in that department when a deputation visited the Fire Station and presented Chief Howard and Deputy Chief Geo. Jamieson with sums of money representing the reduction in their salaries, effected by the council's action.

The deputation presented Chief Howard with $230; $63.75 for the Deputy Chief and $61.25 for the Firemen's Fund.

The affair was a complete surprise to the Fire Department officials. Included in the manufacturers who were present were Messrs. W. C. Ackerman and Mr. Borbidge of the B. F. Ackerman Sons and Co., Geo. C. Gladman of the Wm. Hamilton Co., W. R. Breyfogle of the De Laval Dairy Supply Company, W. H. Denham of the Quaker Oats Co., Will Richardson of the Peterborough Canoe Company, Reg. H. Turner of J. J. Turner and Sons, Felix Brownscombe of the Can. Canoe Co., E. J. Patterson of Canadian General Electric Company, Daniel Holland of the Campbell Milling Co., G. Walter Green, A. E. Coulthard of Colonial Weaving Co., and Adam Hall.

The presentation was made soon after the gathering had convened and after Chief Howard had demonstrated the uses of the pullmotor to those present.

The following address was read by Mr. W. C. Ackerman:

Mr. W. A. Howard,
Chief Fire Department,
City of Peterborough:

Dear Sir,—The undersigned manufacturers of the City of Peterborough desire to express their great appreciation of the remarkable efficiency of the Peterborough Fire Department, as developed during your term of office. We strongly disapprove of the recent action of the City Council reducing the remuneration of the city's employees particularly in view of its effect on the safety and security of lives and property which must be involved where the strength of your department is affected.

We wish to express our great regret that a number of the firemen fearing further attempts on their positions have resigned which obviously in view of the demand for good men in almost all lines of trade is a natural consequence of the Council's action in salary reduction.

It is our feeling that even if it is necessary to contribute from among ourselves the amount of the salary reductions affecting your department, the efficiency of the Peterborough Fire Brigade must be maintained. We therefore wish to tender to you the amounts substracted from your own, and the salaries of your Assistant Chief, and as well to contribute a small sum to the Firemen's Fund.

(Signed)

Chief Howard was visibly moved by the address and presentation. The spirit of the thing he said was a great encouragement to him. The money itself could not have come at a more opportune time but apart from the dollars and cents feature of the affair, the fact that the manufacturers of the city were behind the department and appreciated their efforts was most gratifying. He assured the deputation that their address would be always treasured by him. As a civic servant he had accepted whatever had been required of him by the council. He had not discussed the salary reduction publicly and had nothing to say against any Alderman. It was not seemly for an official of the city to do so. He regretted that he had had to part with some of his best men recently and in this connection read to the deputation several letters of resignation received from men of the department who had resigned. Chief Howard remarked that he would do his best to bring the brigade up to its former efficiency as soon as possible and he asked the co-operation of the manufacturers in his efforts at fire prevention. Two serious fires had nearly resulted recently on account of the failure of the nightwatchman in each case to properly operate the alarm box. Chief Howard impressed upon the deputation the need of great vigilance in regard to the protection.

Several of the deputation spoke briefly but pointedly in regard to the council's action. A fire that cost the working man a day of lost time would be a greater loss financially than it would financially through the salary reductions of the chief and assistant, said one manufacturer.

The following letter to be sent to the fire underwriters Association was appointed by the manufacturers present.

Letter to Underwriters.

The following letter, signed by the manufacturers of the city, has been sent to J. A. Robertson, Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association,

Dear Sir,—It has probably been brought to the attention of your association that the council of the city of Peterborough have voted a reduction in the salaries of the chief of the Peterborough fire brigade, and also the assistant chief, and they felt this measure necessary in order to economize in city affairs. In order to prevent the disorganization of the Peterborough fire brigade, the manufacturers of the city of Peterborough have contributed personally, a sufficient amount to make up the reduction in the salaries of the chief and assistant chief of the fire brigade and these amounts have been presented to-day and we feel that owing to our action, any feeling of dissatisfaction, which may have existed, is now eliminated. We want your organization to feel that the manufacturers are behind the fire brigade in the city of Peterborough, and are determined that their efficiency will not be impaired. We would ask you to kindly place this matter before the members of your association.

BUYS NO "GAS" NOW.

New York Chemist aHs Substitute for High-Priced Motive Power.

New York, April 18. —Louis Enricht, chemist and inventor of Farmingdale, L.I., has, or claims to have, a liquid that will make gasoline a thing of the past, put automobiles within almost every one's reach and break the Standard Oil Company's control of the petrol market.

A transparent greenish liquid is the new genie of the automobile. Four ounces of it, Prof. Enricht says, mixed with five gallons of plain water, will make five gallons of motive power more stable and explosive than gasoline. And the beauty of it is that the preparation exclusive of the water, will cost only 1 1-4 cents a gallon.

He has been working on his fluid for three year. At last, four weeks ago, he solved the problem.

PAY CHEQUES TO RUSSIA.

How Canadian Military Staff Overcame a Difficulty.

LONDON, April 18.—Finding it most awkward, chiefly from linguistic reasons, to send the pay cheques due the wives of Russians serving in the Canadian army straight to the women in Russia, the Canadian pay and record office has adopted an ingenious way of overcoming this difficulty.

Russian being an impossibly hard language for any of the staff, a phonetic spelling of the payees' names is made out, with other particulars by the office and forwarded on a list to the British Ambassador in Petrograd, who sees that the money is duly paid over. Fortunately the list is a fairly short one.

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 310 College Street, will be answered on Wednesdays—questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating, may be sent to The Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

E.H.D., Peterborough, Ont.: Why does the paint on my floor seem so greasy? I gave it a good coat and let it stand two days and even now it is not dry on the bottom. The top is dry all over, but when I walk on it the top sort of slides over the bottom.

Answer: The trouble is a common one with amateurs. You evidently "daubed" instead of "painted." A floor is not the simple thing to paint that so many think it is. One has to use lots of "elbow grease" to lay the paint on evenly and sparingly. There is always greater danger of applying too much paint rather than too little. In future, lay on the paint first with the grain of the wood, i.e., with the long way of the boards; then brush it unsparingly across the grain, finally finishing with the grain and your troubles will cease. Always remember 'daubing' is merely applying paint to a surface; painting is infinitely more and, among other things, must be brushed in.

Autoist, West End: Can you explain why an auto, finished by a first-class auto painter, using the best obtainable material and finished under ideal conditions, shows signs of premature age in the form of dull portions and minute lines criss-cross like? I am sure many auto owners will appreciate this "Arts and Crafts" question column if you can throw any light on the subject.

Answer: The answer is simple and contains but one word, "Ammonia." How to avoid it is another matter. It is a well-known fact that where there are horses there is ammonia gas. Thus it where an auto is kept, in a livery barn, or is housed in the same building as horses, that the greatest danger lies from the air, as such places are usually impregnated with it. The action of ammoniacal gas is said to be as follows: The gas rises and having an affinity for almost anything, settles in the form of a powder upon each mite of dust floating in the air. The dust settles on parts of your auto and so long as it remains dry, is harmless, but the least dampness starts the ammonia to work. Or an auto in a separate and isolated garage gathers some of this same destructive dust from the city streets, and the frequent washings and usage in damp weather all assist the ammonia in its mission of destruction to varnish. You will notice the dull portions are those exposed to falling dust.

A Reader, City: Please print in the Examiner question column the right way to make paste to hang up wall paper.

Answer: There are probably a dozen 'right ways.' However, here is a common and satisfactory way. Put about three pounds of flour in a pail, pour on luke warm water to form a stiff batter, now beat this up thoroughly to remove all the lumps. Then pour on the batter boiling water, (it must be boiling), stirring until the mass has swollen and changed colour, when you must stop pouring the water; after which, set aside to cool. Some add a little borax or alum to the paste to preserve it.

Mrs. J—, Reid Street: In your very valuable paper, will you please tell how to remove finger and pencil marks from paint work?

Answer: Cut a lemon in half, dip it in Spanish or Gilder's whiting and rub the spots. This usually answers.

Eleanor, Peterborough, Ont.: Is Boracoline Red used as a mahogany stain?

Answer: Yes, but it is not the most popular.

Reader, Ashburnham: I put some regular bathroom paper on the walls of my bathroom, and it is all full of bubbles or blisters. What is the reason? Is it bad paper?

Answer: Some varnished papers need to be pasted and allowed to stand a while before hanging, in order to prevent blistering.

Jane, Cavan, Ont.: What will prevent hair from turning grey?

Answer: This is just a little out of my line. It properly comes under the heading of "Art," but it is tonsorial 'Art.'

C.R.F., Peterborough, Ont.: I will feel oblized if in the "Arts and Crafts" column of your ever popular Examiner you will publish the ingredients of putty.

Answer: Pure putty is composed of whiting and linseed oil. There is very, very little pure putty used. The ingredients of the average putty sold in the stores is a mystery to me. But there is little doubt fish oils are to a large extent substituted for the linseed oil.

Doubtful One, Peterborough, Ont.: I read in The Examiner that good paint is made of 70 per cent. white lead and 30 per cent. zinc oxide. Does that make the best paint for all purposes?

Answer: No! It does not. Moreover many good paints do not contain any lead or zinc whatever; for instance, purple, bronze, green, chocolate, brown, etc., none of these and hundreds of other colours and hues contain no white whatever, and are the best for their own particular purpose, providing the thinners or vehicle used is pure and in proper proportion. The percentage above mentioned would be exceedingly good for an outside purpose, while, for instance, thinned properly and even for outside, in some atmospheres, the above would be unsuitable, and in many instances would not do at all for inside, as it would turn yellow in a very short time. Let me repeat what I have said many times in this column: That there is no rule or formula to make paint suitable for all purposes. Each condition is a law unto itself, and all good painters make or mix the several ingredients to suit the particular conditions.

You rarely run across a man who has fallen exhausted from following the dictates of his conscience.

Poor Man—"I've never been able to save anything." Millionaire—"Then you've saved yourself a lot of worry."

Maud—"I see the old Colonel is married again." Tom—"Indeed! I thought his fighting days were over."

"Banish Pimples!"

Pimples, Boils, and other skin eruptions are an almost infallible indication that the blood is impure.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt is the simplest and most positive Blood Purifier that can be used. When we have perfect digestion we must have pure normal blood, which supplies healthful nutrition to all the organs and tissues of the body; and as a result we must have healthy functions and the absence of disease in any form. Abbey's Effervescent Salt produces this condition by ensuring healthy digestion and the elimination of all morbid matter from the system.

"ROLLING STONES" TO BE SEEN HERE ON APRIL 27TH

One of the Finest Attractions of the Season---Only Playing in Six Canadian Cities---A Comedy of Adventures

"Rolling Stones" aptly described as a comedy of adventure will appear at "The Grand" next Thursday, April 27.

It comes to Peterborough on its first visit after six months of success at the Harris Theatre, New York, and a long run at the Park Square Theatre, Boston. This comedy is essentially a product of the talented and successful Selwyn family as the firm of Selwyn and company present it and Edgar Selwyn, who by the way is a Canadian, is the author. Its success is augured by many indications, the principal of which was the long run of Edgar Selwyn's previous play, "The Country Boy" and the great success "Nearly Married". Mr. Selwyn whose adeptness as a narrator of up-to-date romance with a typical breezy American smack to his dialogue, is undoubtedly at his best in "Rolling Stones" and it is rumored that the incidents leading up to the main situation of the play were a chapter from his own life, at a time when royalties and play profits were not swelling his bank account to the proportions they are at present. At any rate the opening act of the play develops a situation as unique and as pregnant with possibility as has ever been unfolded for American theatregoers. Two young men out in Chicago have about given up the struggle for existence. Both have spent their last penny and tramped the streets for days looking for jobs to no avail. So one decides to end it all by jumping into the Chicago river from the famous old Clark street bridge while he other decides to go out and hold up someone to wrest from the world the living he believes due him. The two meet on the bridge and the would-be holdup attempts to rob the would-be suicide. The humor of the thing strikes them both at the same time and they straightway form a partnership and determine that they will succeed. The manner in which they do succeed and win the love of two charming girls forms the plot of this fascinating play. Selwyn and Company have retained the veritable New York cast which includes Leonard Doyle, Harrison Ford, Arthur Aylesworth, Margaret Brainard, Marie Carol, Sash Whitford, Frank Kingdon, Jean Temple, Harry Bradley, George F. Smithfield, Nina Chapman, Frederick Malcolm, Adrian Morgan, James Kearney and Daniel Jarrett.

HOW TO REGAIN STRENGTH

The great factor that retards recovery after sickness is that weakened devitalized condition, and it will interest our readers to know that our local druggists, McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne, have a reliable, non-secret strength creator called Vinol, which contains iron for the blood, the curative medicinal extractives of fresh cod livers and the nourishing properties of beef peptone, all combined in a delicious native wine. For weak, run-down conditions and to regain strength after sickness, there is nothing better.

No woman is satisfied with a photograph that looks like her. Any photographer who can't knock fifteen years off a woman's age might just as well quit and go to work on the sorting gang.

"THE REDEMPTION"

BY KNOX CHURCH CHOIR

Gounod's "Redemption," sung last night by the choir of Knox Church, under the direction of Mr. George Kenyon, provided one of the musical surprises of the local season, now drawing to a close. The success attained in this production upset the generally accepted opinion that works of this order are within the scope of only two or three choirs that could be readily specified. It did not wrest the musical leadership from those whose consistent exhibitions of ability have been clearly recognized and generally acknowledged. But it did secure for the choir of Knox Church a position to which it had not previously been admitted, a place among the choirs that have more than ordinary achievements to their credit. It is expected that 'The Redemption' is but an earnest of future efforts. Certainly Parnassus cannot be scaled in one flight. But in their first endeavour well deserved congratulations should be extended to Knox Church choir and its organist and leader. Mr. Kenyon; not that the Redemption was as finished as perhaps it might have been, but congratulations upon the large measure of success attained, and the ambition and ability to present an oratorio of Gounod standard. Mr. Kenyon has laboured assiduously with Knox Church choir since assuming its leadership, and while there is tangible satisfaction and reward in the present results, there is also the promise of more enduring benefits that should gradually present themselves. Success begets success, according to the aphorists; besides, there is the unconscious improvement that follows upon the preparation of such a work, the courage, industry, and other qualities that are choral essentials.

Knox Church choir is not strong individually and in that respect is similar to most of Peterborough's church choirs. But Mr. Kenyon, on last night's demonstration, has obtained a fine ensemble effectiveness. Thus, the choruses were splendidly sung, and with a spirit and tone that entirely overcame the monotony which Gounod's tendency to repetition sometimes produces.

There was precision of attack and execution, choral depth and balance, and a confidence that was not the least pleasing feature. In fact the choir has a fine resonant, smooth tone that is very effective from piano to forte.

It is scarcely necessary to mention Mr. Albert Downing and Mr. Arthur Blight of Toronto, who carried the tenor and baritone solos, respectively. Their singing was most satisfactory. Miss E. Hinchcliffe made a fine impression in the soprano lines, and also in several trios, with Miss Penrose and Miss E. Williamson. Her solo "While my Watch I am Keeping," was well within her range, and was rendered with fine expression. Miss Hinchcliffe's enunciation is clear and most satisfying. The quartettes were taken by Miss Hinchliffe, Miss Williamson, Mr. Blight and Mr. Downing. "And When the Air was Filled," sung in duet by Mr. Blight and Mr. Downing was particularly appreciated.

The final chorus was probably the choir's best work, but the very first ensemble "The Earth is My Possession," was specially pleasing in its piano measures. Mr. Blight scored in "Weep Ye Not For Me," "Pardon their Sin My Father," "Then With Words They Blaspheme Him" and "Now From the Sixth Hour." Mr. Dowling sang with fine dramatic effect "Ah! and Fearest Thou Not," and his other lines were equally effective. Miss Hinchliffe sang with chorus accompaniment the opening to the third part, providing one of the best numbers of the evening.

Altogether "The Redemption" was a thoroughly satisfying production, and gives to Knox Choir a "place in the musical sun." Mr. Kenyon's organ accompaniment left little to be desired. The incidental music at the part 'The Darkness," was vividly presented, as was also the stirring finale.

The wives of the elders and managers provided luncheon for the chorus and soloists at the conclusion of the Oratorio.

It is worthy of note that the Pastor of Knox Church, Rev. Mr. McKenzie, has given the choir his utmost cooperation in its rehearsals of "The Redemption," and last night he occupied a position in the baritone section. There is no doubt but that his active interest has been of material assistance to Mr. Kenyon and also an additional incentive to the rest of the choristers.

TO MAKE THE A.O.U.W SOLVENT

Private Bills Committee Passed Measure This Morning — Reduces Amount of Insurance to Holders.

The Private Bills committee of the legislature concluded its work for the session yesterday by passing unanimously the bill for the reorganization of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

Make it Solvent.

The effect of the bill is to place the order in a position of actuarial solvency that it has apparently not had since its establishment. W. D. McPherson, chairman of the sub-committee which was responsible for the production of the measure, read a lengthy report of the findings of the sub-committee. It stated that at the end of 1915, in spite of the attempts made previously by rate revision to improve the condition of the society, it had liability to insured of $8,471,000, and assets of $830,000 to meet it. By the bill some $30,000,000 of unsound insurance will be converted into $20,800,000 of sound insurance.

The bill provides for a readjustment of rates according to the National Fraternal Congress table of mortality and for a reduction of the insurance in force, amounting in case of each certificate to about 20 to 30 per cent. Mr. McPherson said the reorganization provided for would, in the opinion of Prof. McKenzie, who had been consulted, make the society actuarily solvent henceforth. If the society had gone into liquidation there would not be $15 for each member.

SMALLER BAGS FOR THE DUCK HUNTERS

Sportsmen must content themselves with smaller bags when shooting ducks, and must forego entirely for a period of years the pleasure of hunting the whirring partridge, the elusive black and grey squirrels, the quail and Hungarian partridge and the capercaillzie, if changes proposed in the Game and Fisheries act becomes effective. A schedule of proposed changes in the act, covering waterfowl, upland birds, big game and fur-bearing animals, has been compiled by Game Protective Associations and individuals throughout the province.

It is planned to reduce the season's bag limit for wild ducks from the present 200 to 100, and to establish a daily bag limit of 15. Shooting will be reduced to four days per week, namely, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. All wild ducks and feathered game, except such as are bred and reared on private preserves will be prohibited from sale.

Stopping the spring shooting of wild geese and swans is in view. It is hoped to prohibit the shooting of quail and Hungarian partridge, black and grey squirrels, for a period of three years. There will be a closed season on capercaillize until Sept. 15, 1920, and on partridges for two years if the changes become effective.

It is proposed to change the open season for big game in the territory lying north of the Canadian Pacific Railway, from Mattawa to Manitoba boundary; from the present October 16 to November 15, inclusive, to November 1 to November 30, inclusive.

The shooting of muskrats at any time is to be prohibited, as also is the digging or smoking out of foxes. All trappers, excluding farmers trapping on their own farms, are to be licensed for a fee of $5.

The tendency of the proposed legislation is toward game conservation. The contemplated changes in the act are meeting the approval of all sportsmen who are thoughtful of the future.

To Celebrate The Langemarck Battle

Sunday afternoon at four o'clock an open air memorial service of the Battle of Langemark will be held in Central Park. There will be a monster parade of the Sunday school which will meet at different points and march to the place of assembly carrying banners. They will be headed by a band.

The speakers will address the crowd from different positions in the park. At least three bands will be present to render music for the occasion, and will alternate with the speakers. No meeting will be held Sunday night, as the clergymen will confine their sermons to this subject on that night.

As the Battle of Langemark lasted three or four days there will be a large meeting in the Armouries on Monday night, when slides will be shown of all the Peterborough men who have been killed, wounded or taken prisoners.

New York Stock Market

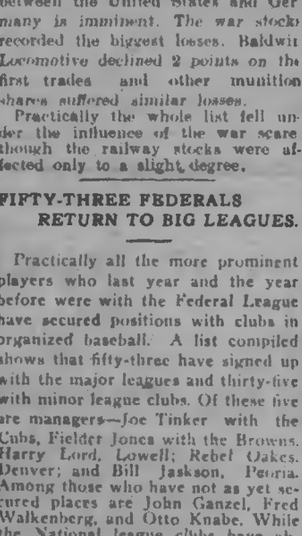
Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, April 19.—The Stock Market broke badly to-day on reports from Washington that a break between the United States and Germany is imminent. The war stocks recorded the biggest losses. Baldwit Locomotive declined 2 points on the first trades and other munition shares suffered similar losses.

Practically the whole list fell under the influence of the war scare though the railway stocks were affected only to a slight degree.

FIFTY-THREE FEDERALS RETURN TO BIG LEAGUES.

Practically all the more prominent players who last year and the year before were with the Federal League have secured positions with clubs in organized baseball. A list compiled shows that fifty-three have signed up with the major leagues and thirty-five with minor league clubs. Of these five are managers—Joe Tinker with the Cubs, Fielder Jones with the Browns, Harry Lord, Lowell; Rebel Oakes, Denver; and Bill Jaskson, Peoria. Among those who have not as yet secured places are John Ganzel, Fred Walkenberg, and Otto Knabe. While the National league clubs have absorbed thirty-seven of these players, less than half that number have signed with the American league, the St. Louis and New York clubs being the only two in the junior major organization that have former Feueral players on their rosters.



Lady Colebrook—Who, with 28 other ladies of title, signed up for six months service in munition plants. Lady Colebrook worked eight hours a day and received the minimum wage of about 58 cents a day.

BELLEVILLE, April 17.—A cablegram reached this city to-day announcing the death in action in France of Sergt. Horace E. Yeomans, better known as "Pat" Yeomans, a Signaller in the Canadian Artillery. He was only about twenty years of age, and gave promise of a very brilliant career. He led in sports and church and Y.M.C.A. work. He was the eldest son of Dr. Horace A. Yeomans of this city, and enlisted with his brother "Ted" at the outbreak of the war. He was recommended for the Distinguished Conduct Medal for rescuing a wounded soldier at Ypres in the face of a murderous fire. He had been promoted from Signaller to Bombadier to Corporal and then to Sergeant. His death is mourned by all classes of citizens.

MAN WAS FIVE TIMES REJECTED

Twenty Thousand Claims for Exemption —Waifs and Strays Employed at west-end Shop

No fewer than 20,000 claims for exemption or postponement have been lodged with the City of London, England military service tribunal. One firm applied for 1,100 forms. The burden has been increased by the recent order that where there is a local appeal on personal grounds as well as a business appeal in the City, the whole case is to be dealt with in the City. The Advisory Committee and its sub-Committee are making recommendations which relieve the tribunal of much of the work.

"Didn't you apply for work at the Royal Small Arms Factory?" asked the military representative of a conscientious objector at Chestnut the other day.

"Yes, for Sunday work only," he replied.

The Clerk: Don't you think it wrong to make munitions of war, and on Sunday, too? Yes, but I applied for that job to get out of combatant service.

The Chairman: And that's what a lot more have done who are now in the factory. Application refused.

A clerk who claimed exemption at the City of London tribunal stated that he had been rejected five times, and he was subject to epileptic fits, and that on one occasion he had a fit at the headquarters of the "Queen's Westminsters".

The Chairman: The doctor did not pass you on that account.

Applicant: He did. I was leaving Scotland Yard with a rejection paper when I was called back and passed. My paper was stamped "epileptic fits" and marked "General Service."

"I don't see what they want him for at all, but as they do he must go, I suppose," said a member. Appeal disallowed.

On the ground that he owns a chip potato stall largely patronized by munition workers ,a young man of Italian parentage, but born in England, claimed exemption at Woolwich. He said his takings were £20 a week. Claim refused.

TEXT FOR TEXT

"The New Testament says, 'Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's'" said the Chairman of Bethnal Green Tribunal to a conscientious objector. "It also says 'Love your enemies,' was the retort.

"My principle is that I cannot take human life or the military oath. I'm a Socialist. I've always been against the Government," said a Shoreditch tobacconist's manager. "The Government is not forcing military service, it is the Germans" said the Chairman. "What punishment are you prepared to undergo in support of your principles?" Death ,if necessary." Appeal dismissed.

"If put in the firing line I will allow myself to be shot," said a butcher at Wallasey (Cheshire) when his plea as a conscientious objector was refused.

"I can't bear to think of meeting my cousins or other Westphalian relatives on the battlefield, and would not be able to face them in a bayonet charge," said a naturalized alien at Bethnal Green. He was passed for non-combatant service.

"One can only get elderly men in these times, and all the best of the girls are taken by the banks. In fact, my staff is now largely composed of waifs and strays." said Mr. John Lewis, the well known Oxford-street draper, in claiming exemption at Marylebone for two buyers.

"STARRING" UNION OFFICIALS

The Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress is being asked to take steps to arrange for the "starring" of a certain number of Trade Union officials in each district in order that Labour organization may be maintained.

The Edmonton tribunal are writing to the War Office on two matters which are characterised a scandals. It was stated that a recruiting officer had helped a man in his expressed intention not to join the Army. The man was said to be a fine strapping young fellow, twenty-nine years old, with no one dependent upon him, and working with a firm who paid the men who enlisted full wages while they were away. He had served with a Yeomanry regiment for two or three years, and had obtained from the recruiting officer an exemption as a time-expired man. The tribunal was emphatic that this was a scandal. It was also complained that large numbers of single men had within the last few weeks been allowed to "creep in to munition works," whereas strong, ablebodied men over military age were refused work. One member foreshadowed trouble as a result of the scandal when the tribunal has to consider the appeals of married men.

At Pewsey, a Wiltshire farmer who farms 1,000 acres, applying on behalf of his son, said the day after the declaration of war the two sons tossed to see which should join the Colours, realising that both could not be spared. The son who won the toss went, and had been killed. Postponed for six months.

As only £8,000 of Bognor's £13,500 income tax has yet been received, the most troublesome men yet having to be dealt with an auctioneer secured three months' delay in calling up his clerk, who gets an income tax collector.

He found that bushel crates of the apples could be delivered throughout the second zone at a cost of 64 cents, including postage and packing. THE WORLD OF SPORT

DON'T COMPARE BEN KAUFF WITH COBB: JENNINGS

"Benny Kauff?" Hughey Jennings, master of the greatest baseball player the game can boast, Ty Cobb, repeated the last two words of a query and a hundred freckles lighted up as he smiled. "O, he's a good ball player—a fair ball player. But it isn't fair to mention him in the same breath with Ty Cobb. Selling platers don't stack up with stake horses."

Jennings saw the two pitted against each other as centre fielders in a game between the Tigers and the New York Giants at Houston, Tex. Ty Cobb, playing his first game of the year without a workout, made Kauff look awkward, says the boss of the Bengal ranch.

A few days ago John McGraw, Benny Kauff's master, came forth with a statement after seeing Cobb in that game that the Tiger without doubt was the greatest natural ball player he had ever seen. Jennings agrees with him absolutely. And he has a few good things to say of McGraw's star.

McGraw Praises Cobb.

"Kauff will hit .300 in the National league," the "ee-yah" singer declares, "But that isn't as difficult a job as hitting .300 in the American league. The former Federal leaguer would be only an average ball player in the American league. We're a lot faster than the National."

"What would Cobb hit in the National league then?" he was asked.

"I can't think of such big numbers," the answer came back.

Likes Work of Sullivan.

Hughey Jennings is enthusiastic over this year's American league race and he's fairly fond of his own ball club's chances in that scramble. Billy Sullivan probably has caused a large part of that enthusiasm. The old White Sox catcher has been in charge of the Detroit pitchers this spring and Jennings is mighty well pleased with the way his hurling staff looks right now. Flingers always have been the downfall of the Tigers in the past. But this year the team is going to have a handsome list of tossers. Jennings admits it.

CHURCH BOWLING LEAGUE

Murray Street closed their bowling season by taking three games from St. James last night. These victories for the Baptists draw St. James' and Murray Street closer together for the cellar position and will be decided by the George Street—St. James' series, which will close the schedule of this league. The scores:

Murray Street:
Fitzgerald	189	115	126	430
Lewis	109	149	125	383
Somerville	147	147	138	432
	445	411	409	1265
St. James:
Sanderson	112	119	115	346
Wilson	154	137	109	400
Wylder	146	123	135	404
	412	379	359	1150

BOWLING

Owing the impetus given to the bowling club by the executives of recent years, their able management is now bearing fruit. This season bids fair to be the most successful of the series.

Many new members are in sight and there is no financial debit of any kind upon the club.

At the general meeting, at Mr. Fitzgerald's next Tuesday evening, every member and every prospective is expected to be present.

Appointing a caretaker and other matters in connection with the club will be considered.

If you fold up the napkin it is a sign that you expect to be invited to eat another meal in the house, and if you don't fold it up it is a sign you are a hog, so what is a feller to do? Hank Tumnis solves the problem of sticking the napkin in his pocket and taking it home with him.

Austrians Hurl Bombs at Surgeons While Operating

SALONIKA, Greece, April 19.—Seventy-five girls from Canada, standing among their hospital tents on a little hill seven miles out from Salonika, looking into the sky.

Above them a circling Austrian aeroplane shells; three terrific explosions on the earth nearby; a heavy thud of one shell that didn't explode and that would have killed a tentful of wounded men if it had—this was my first glimpse of No. 4 Canadian hospital. The Austrian killer sailed away.

In the name of God and humanity why did he try to kill nurses and surgeons and sick and dying men? You feel these things more when you see them yourself than when you read about them. In one of these tents, at the time, not a hundred feet from where an Austrian shell fell, a great surgeon from Canada whose name is known and honoured among the surgeons of Germany and Austria, was toiling with his knife on the vitals of a young officer, using all the skill and science that twenty centuries of study have afforded the art of surgery; and one of these Austrian shells might have wiped out that scene, actors and all—the surgeon, the man who was holding the merciful ether cone, the nurses who were standing nearby with the surgeon's tools and the senseless man himself. Or might it not, with the strange trickery of shells, have killed all except the man on the table and left him to come to his senses, with no kindly ether pouring into his lungs and with the vital operation only half done? The possibilities are too terrible to consider. Not a shell hit the great group of hospital tents. But the point is that the Austrian tried to hit them.

You feel strongly, as I have said, about an incident of this sort, especially if you are marked to go on the operating table yourself the next day. And also, if you are scheduled to spend a couple of weeks in one of the tents lying helpless until the surgeon's cuttings have begun to heal.

Hospital Now Normal.

By this time the hospital has become normal; the excitement of the patients has abated under the assurances of the nurses and the aeroplane has gone. You are escorted to a tent by an orderly who, you discover later, first learned his business in Bellevue hospital in New York. A sweet-faced nurse meets you at the door of the tent; she used to be in a hospital in Brooklyn.

"Take any bed you please of these five," she says. "And you must undress and go to bed right away, too. The bed is a cot; the covers are heavy, warm blankets.

Everywhere about you are men in uniform, or in bed. They are all British officers. Your entrance, as a civilian, creates something of a furore, for a man in civilian's clothes, in these days in Greece, is an oddity worth attention.

A soldier in uniform brings you your tea at five that evening; another soldier brings you a cup of hot malted milk at eight in the evening and at nine a soldier in uniform—one of Canada's most noted surgeons, who has given up his work in the city of Toronto to "do his bit" for the British empire—comes to your cot-side, looks you over and says, "You mustn't expect any breakfast this morning, young man, because we'll take you to the operating room at 10 o'clock.

In the morning there is more men in uniform, busying themselves about you cot. One takes off your blankets; two bring in a stretcher; another asks you to get up and lie on it. "Are you from New York?" asks another, who walks beside you as you're carried out of your tent toward the operating tent. "You are. So is he. He used to be in the Roosevelt hospital. "Do you know Karl Kitchin, the New York reporter?" he asks. You do. "Funny fellow," says the soldier, walking along beside you with his chin on a level with the stretcher. "Came to Roosevelt hospital while I was there and wouldn't get any better or any worse; fever kept up; one night he begged me to help him sneak away and I did, in a taxicab. He used to give me the nine tickets galore and I hated to see him leave the place."

In the Operating Tent.

By this time you're in the operating tent. There are soldiers enough there. The surgeon is dressed like a soldier, but he is covering his uniform with a white apron as you enter. You get onto the table. A soldier stands at each side of you; each holds one of your hands.

"Crook your little finger and let me hang on to it," says the soldier who used to be at the Roosevelt. "I can tell when you're going that way." A uniform is only partly hidden by the white apron of the soldier who comes toward you with the ether cone. He stands at your head.

"This will taste nasty for just a minute," he says, reassuringly. Then he claps it down over your face. Two or three big steam boxes, in which instruments are sterilized, are hissing. The soldier from Bellevue squeezes your hand reassuringly.

"All right," he says, "many a time I've done this."

"Not when aeroplane bombs might drop on you," you try to say, but you're only mumbling; he can't hear you; you'd like to answer him just now to show him you're not nervous; but what's the use trying to make him understand?"

"Are you cold? Wouldn't you like a hot water bag at your feet?"

You open your eyes. The cone is gone; so have the soldiers. You're back in your brown tent. You see double, or triple. The sweet-faced nurse who is talking to you has four faces; now there are only three. You squint and she has only two; you feel encouraged. Just to see if you can talk you say you will have a hot water bottle.

Somewhere in the world there is a terrific pain; you don't associate this pain with yourself. Somewhere some poor devil is suffering with a terrible hurt. Gradually the pain begins to be connected with yourself; slowly it comes to you that the poor devil is yourself. Well, it's lucky for the rest of them it's none of them. Still your appendix will never ache again.

"Too breezy for German aeroplanes this afternoon," you hear an officer on a nearby cot remark.

And that remark brings you clear back to the world; back to the loudly flapping tent; back to the war; back to the killing and the dying.

Greece Depends On Britain For Food Supplies

ATHENS, April 19.—Greece won't come into the war on the side of Germany. In mind Greece may be with Germany; in stomach, she's with the allies. In the great Grecian conflict he cocoa thought and digestion, digestion wins.

Greece may be with the Germans, but if you're from the United States and run around this town talking to Greeks you don't think so. You can't talk Greek, of course. But you find plenty of Greeks who have been to the United States and who talk American. And you can't find a Greek in Athens or in all the rest of Greece who isn't with the allies, if he has ever been in the United States. But even that part of the Grecian public that hasn't been in the United States is with the allies in stomach, if not in heart.

The British navy has a long, long arm. This arm reaches right into your hotel room every morning, before you've got your night gown off. You can't have a fire in your room because there's a scarcity of coal: British navy holding up Greek ships.

$7 A DAY FOR ROOM AND BOARD

When they bring breakfast you look to see whether you've got one or two rolls. If it's one, that's all you get, even if they do charge you $7 a day for room and board. If it's two, that's a sign that a ship has come in with some flour. The day when there was no roll hasn't come yet; the British navy can't be that cruel. But the point is that, if it wanted to, the British navy could make Greece a breadless, coalless, oilless, ammunitionless, saltless, sugarless country within a week.

At that little narrow neck of water Gibraltar, which is the only ocean route to Greece, and the only route used now that the allies have Salonika, Greek ships stop at the order of the British navy. They wait, too, until the British navy tells them to proceed.

The British navy always seems to know just how much flour, sugar, oil and so forth there is in Greece. Just about the day on which Greece thinks it is going to starve or suffer for lack of one of these necessities of life the British let a ship, perhaps just one little ship, pass Gibraltar and start on its way to Greece.

SHIP ARRIVAL GREAT EVENT

It's a great event in Athens when the ship arrives. The newspapers tell about it. "Thirty-five hundred tons of coal arrived to-day", one item says. "Part of it will go to the electric company to keep the cars running and the city lighted."

"A shipload of flour was released at Gibraltar to-day and will be here within four days," the papers say. "The govenrsortd dsortd dodtwifww "The government food commission will distribute it among the bakers." Within three or four days you get two rolls for breakfast. If the ship happens to contain sugar you'll get five or six pieces instead of three.

Thus the British navy doles out life to Greece. It doesn't require any diplomacy to keep Greece neutral; bread beats diplomacy.

The allies are not tolerating any "nonsense" these days on the part of pro-German Greeks. Greeks who are spies for the Germans are arrested and put into Greek jails until they can be moved to the military one. A Greek newspaperman, who was being paid by the Germans to send pro-German articles to his paper was arrested by ally soldiers. The pro-German Greeks don't like this; neither do some of the New York ones.

"But," the Greek stomach warns, "go easy! Don't get mad!" And so Greece "goes easy."

Hungarians Better Off Than Austrians

Considerable apprehension has been excited in Austria by the announcement that the Hungarian flour mills are being organized into a powerful trust. Almost wholly dependent upon Hungary for wheat and other breadstuffs, the Austrian millers and bakers fear that this new corporation will increase still further their subjection to the other half of the monarchy.

Among the other various questions which have arisen during the war, where the interests of the two nations have been divergent, none has occasioned more bitter feeling than those connected with the grain trade. Austria is chiefly an industrial country and Hungary an agricultural one, exporting enormous quantities of grain every year, a very large proportion of which goes to Austria.

When foodstuffs began to get scarce in the dual monarchy, Austria naturally suffered first. While in Hungary everybody had plenty to eat, and prices were moderate, the Austrians were on short rations, paying exorbitant prices, and having to suffer all their conveniences and annoyances of the bread ticket system.

Charges of selfishness and attempted extortion were made against the Hungarian landowners and peasant farmers, but the millers were also accused of taking unfair advantages of the situation. They managed to get the government in Budapest to put all kinds of obstacles in the way of sending grain to Austria, insisting that they ought to have all the milling profits.

Remembering this, the Austrian millers are the more alarmed now at the prospect of this new trust in Hungary, feeling certain that very little grain will be allowed to cross the frontier. The bulk of it will be converted first into flour and meal in the country where it is grown. Moreover, the Hungarian millers will be able to fix the buying and selling prices of both grain and flour.

In the struggle the Austrian millers are handicapped by the fact that many of them are in a small way of business, whereas the Hungarian mills are mostly of considerable capacity. And in addition the natural advantages are all on the side of Hungary so far as production is concerned.

Hungary cultivates over 25,000,000 acres of grain, against Austria's 16,000,000. Hungary's chief products, however are wheat and corn while Austria's are oats and rye.

On any kind of labour that demands machinery and horses the expense per acre for those items must be disproportionately large on the farm of thirty acres or less. In one instance the machinery cost $15 per crop-acre on a farm of from 30 to 40 acres as against a charge of $9 per crop-acre on a 160 acre farm. The small farm, then, is really an economic luxury.

Hon. J. R. Stratton Passed Away This Morning at Hot Springs for Peterborough the splendid water front between Hunter street and the Canadian Pacific bridges; and he took an active interest in industrial development.

His business life was a strikingly successful one, and in his aggressive initiative and his organizing genius had full play. As remarked, he made the Examiner as it is, one of the most influential and most widely circulated newspaper between Ottawa and Toronto. His business activities were wide and varied, as shown by the fact that he occupied the important position of Vice-President of the Traders Bank of Canada, President of the Dominion Permanent Loan Company, President of the Trusts and Guarantee, President of the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company, president of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. Of these successful business enterprises, he organized two or three of them and was prominent in organizing or establishing two or three others. Mr. Stratton was also President of the Home Life Association of Canada, a director of the Canada Starch company, and a director of the Imperial Cotton Company. In his business life he has shown a splendid aptitude for effective organization, successful management, a foresight and practical grasp of affairs that made his judgment of value and his efforts most effective in carrying on successfully the various enterprises with which he became associated. Mr. Stratton threw his whole heart and physical powers into his political as well as his business activities. He was unrestingly industrious. He took no time for recreation, and in filling in the blank forms supplied for compiling the Parliamentary compound, opposite the item "recreations," he wrote, "none." It is to his unremitting devotion to business and the duties of his public life, that his breakdown in health may be attributed. For some years he made a brave fight against the ravages of an insidious disease, malignant diabetes, but in November, 1913, he was prostrated by a paralytic stroke. Since that time he has struggled manfully against his double burden of illness, and at the time of his death was taking the baths at Hot Springs, Arkansas, and was looking forward to coming home when the warm weather of May came. But a sudden change for the worse resulted in his death this morning.

In August, 1881 Mr. Stratton was united in marriage to Miss Eliza J. Ormond, of this city, daughter of the late J. R. Ormond, who survives him, and has been in the truest and fullest meaning of the term a helpmeet, both in relation to his public associations and successes, and his civic and home life. At all times a devoted wife, she has been especially faithful through all the dark and discouraging days of a long illness, and if loving devotion and untiring care and tendance could have averted the inevitable, we should not have the sad record of to-day to make. Mr. Stratton besides leaves behind the following immediate relatives: Mrs. (Dr.) J. B. Hunter, Miss Stratton, Miss Mary Stratton, Hamilton; Mrs. T. F. Matthews, sisters and one brother, Mr. Alderman A. H. Stratton and Mrs. Harris Ardiel, Toronto, a niece, who resided with Mr. and Mrs. Stratton up to the time of her marriage.

THE SON OF BARON SHAUGHNESSY.

Actions of Baron Shaughnessy will do more to encourage recruiting in Canada than the words of Baron Shaughnessy could do to discourage recruiting in Canada.

Critics of Baron Shaughnessy did not unanimously exhibit the patriotism revealed by the president of the C.P.R.

People whose gains from Canada are smaller compared to the gains of Lord Shaughnessy, and whose services for Canada may be small also, have submitted themselves to the sacrifice that took the light out of their homes and brought the darkness into their lives.

The Shaughnessy home did not send out its sons to safe appointments. Lord Shaughnessy did not exert his influence to install his son in a position where he could wear an officer's uniform and draw an officer's pay, and do clerical work that could be better done by a capable girl. Untitled Canadians have not always proved themselves to be as willing as Lord Shaughnessy proved himself to let the sons of influence take the same chance as the sons of industry have to take.

A native Canadian was never inspired by a more loyal heart to Britain and Canada than the heart of Thomas Shaughnessy, the Milwaukee-born peer of the British realm. The Canadian born son of Baron Shaughnessy was no shirker, no grabber after military sinecures, but a soldier who offered up his life for liberty and earned the praises that speak in the words of Col. John A. Currie, M.P.:

"Fred Shaughnessy was as fine a boy as ever lived, a most lovable character; his whole heart was in his work, and in his men, and he died where he would want to die, fighting at the head of his platoon."—Toronto Telegram.

Choice Recipes

Potato Trifles.

Into a small saucepan pour three-fourths of a cup of cold milk, add one tablespoon melted butter, and when the milk reaches the boiling point one-fourth cup flour that has been thoroughly blended with two tablespoons cold water. Add two well-beaten eggs and stir rapidly for three minutes. Into the mixture place three good-sized freshly boiled potatoes and continue the stirring until the potatoes are thoroughly mashed and taken up in the liquid. Season with one teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon sweet paprika and one tablespoon minced parsley. Have ready a deep pan of boiling fat. Take up the potato mixture one tablespoon at a time and drop into the fat and fry for ten minutes. Turn the potatoes occasionally, but lift them gently while doing so in order to prevent the trifles breaking. Serve on a heated platter in a folded napkin.—Woman' World for May.

Oatmeal Cookies.

To two and a half cups of oatmeal, two cups of brown sugar and one cup of shortening, add two beaten eggs and water which has previously had a teaspoon of soda dissolved in it. Roll out and bake till brown.

The United States' Break With Germany Can't Be Avoided

WHOLESALE MASSACRE OF GREEKS AT ADRIANOPLE

GIRLS' NECKS NOT FOR PUBLIC GAZE

At Least That's the Case in Paterson, Where Students Are Ordered to Simplify Dresses.

NEW YORK, April 18. — High school girls of Paterson must abandon high heeled shoes, cosmetics, painted lips and roughed cheeks, open neck waists and jewels, according to an edict issued yesterday by Miss Carolyn Hemmingway, assistant principal and preceptress for the girls.

"I have spoken about extremes in the dress of girls before," reads the statement by Miss Hemmingway, "and most of the girls have been wise enough to see the folly of such things. Those girls who have not abandoned items or methods of dress that attract undue attention will be spoken to by me privately, and I am certain they will conform to the rule."

Miss Hemmingway said that all cosmetic boxes, vanity cases and powder puffs should be thrown away, that the girls should comb their hair in a becoming but not flashy manner, that they should wear sensible shoes with skirts of a sensible length and waists that do not show the neck and shoulders.

Observations have been made recently, some of them orally, to the principal and to city officials that the wearing apparel of certain high school girls should be censored. Besides the modern high kid bots it was observed that they wore very short skirts to expose silk hosiery above the high boot tops. Also, it was commented, the bottom of the open "V" neck of their waists should be nearer the neck than the waist. Miss Hemmingway herself said many of the girls were using cosmetics instead of athletics to promote complexion and that no girl in school should use powder. Soap and water were strongly advised.

"The Kaiser Is The Only German Who Hopes To Win The War" Says a Prisoner

People Are Worrying Because So Many Men Are Being Killed--Officers Are Afraid to Lead Against Canadians

TORONTO, April 20.—That the Kaiser still believes Germany will win the war, but that the German soldiers have given up hope, was the statement of a captured Teuton officer to Lieut. D. M. Goudy, of Toronto, who is now on active service with the 21st Battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Force in Belgium.

In a letter to a friend under date of March 31st from "20 feet from No Man's Land," Lieut. Goudy says:

"I had a fair view of a good-sized battle the other day when some British troops took 600 yards of German lines I cannot tell you much about it for a time to come.

"I had conversation with a few prisoners taken from the 13th Jaeger Regiment of Prussians. They all expressed themselves as being delighted with capticity. As many as forty at one time threw down their arms and deliberately surrendered without need. One boy of 18 who attempted to do so, was shot down by his officer, said officer regretting his action when our Tommie laid hands on him a few minutes afterwards.

HAVE GIVEN UP HOPE.

"One officer captured was asked if he thought Germany would win the war.

"'The Kaiser does. We don't,' he said, as he shrugged his shoulders.

"I asked a private through an interpreter what the German people thought of the situation.

"'They are worrying because so many men are being killed,' he replied. 'It was getting on my nerves and I am glad to get out of it.'

"Several prisoners said they were glad to be captured by English instead of Canadian troops, as from the latter they expected no mercy at all. Their officers refuse to lead them in an attack against us. They were treated very kindly by both English and Canucks.

"There are a lot of British and German plants above me. Both sides are shooting at them, but an anti-aircraft gun very seldom hits its mark. It's funny to sit here and listen to the high explosive shells passing by overhead. They are fired from so far away that I do not hear the guns go off, and the shells are dropping half a mile up the line. One comes over about every five minutes. As they go through the air they make a searing noise like a trolley pole on a frosty wire. When they land it sounds like two freight trains coming together.

"The shrapnels (or whizz-bangs, as the Tommies call them) make the music. When they come over fast it sounds like a giant whip being cracked. It would be a great thing if the noises of the firing line could be reproduced on a record. They would chill the spine of a person who has never been here and get used to them. It's a regular hell when they slap the shrapnel in on you at the rate of 30 shells aminute—like ten cyclones striking the same point at one time.

"Just at present I am very much at it, for if I were so fortunate as to have a chew of gum in my mouth I could blow it from where I sit, over the parapet into No Man's Land.

"It is a bright sunny morning and almost all but myself and a few snipers are sleeping after the night's vigil. Everything is quiet with the exception of a couple of guns in our rear, which are dropping occasional shots behind the German front line. In such circumstances here the silence is like that of a tomb. No rifles or machine guns are cracking and there is not even the sound of human voices.

"The danger in ordinary trench warfare, where you are simply holding the line, is nothing to worry about."

BOY 15 CARRIES LOADED REVOLVER

John Agmietti, Arrested at "Movies," Says He followed Custom of the Cowboys.

NEW YORK, April 18. — Clad comfortably in a bath robe at the rooms of the Children's Society last night, where he was held on a charge of juvenile delinquency, John Agmietti, fifteen, of No. 435 West Thirty-first street, declared that his principal pastime was "beating the law" which prohibited children under sixteen from going to "movies" without a guardian.

John was arrested in the afternoon in a motion picture house at No. 806 Eighth avenue. When searched at the Children's Society a loaded revolver was found tucked snugly in the pocket of a belt which he wore under his clothing. He laughed at the surprise of the attendants and said that he carried a revolver because every cowboy that he ever saw in the "movies" had one.

Detective Smith, of the Third Inspection District, made the arrest. He also arrested Elisio Bregoli, twenty-nine years old, of No. 249 Eighth avenue, who is alleged to have sold the ticket to John. Bregoli was arraigned at the West Thirtieth street police station.

What About Starchy Foods?

Aren't starchy foods all right? They certainly are. The starch of grains is one of the chief sources of food energy.

But some stomachs are not able to digest the starches as presented in ordinary foods, such as white bread and white flour products, which are often the unsuspected cause of digestive troubles—imperfect assimilation, fermentation and gas, biliousness, headache, constipation, anemia, and other common ills.

One food that supplies the valuable starch elements in easily digested form is

Grape-Nuts

It is made of the energizing grains, whole wheat and malted barley, the starch cells of which are largely converted by long baking into dextrin and grape-sugar which are readily assimilated by even weakened digestive organs. Grape-Nuts digests in about one hour.

This food comes ready to eat, nourishing and delicious; and as it retains all the nutriment of the grains—including the mineral elements largely lacking in the usual dietary—it is a wonderful builder of well-balanced bodies, nerves and brains.

DR. SCHEELE WILL RETURN SAYS WIFE

NEW YORK, April 20.—Mrs. Walter T. Scheele opened the door of her home, No. 92 Palisade avenue, Bogota, N.J., yesterday afternoon and admitted reporters who wished to question her concerning the whereabouts of her husband. She is about fifty years old.

Mrs. Scheele is not in the least disquieted by the report that her husband is being sought by federal agents and the police. She even asserted that somebody was going to "get it hot and heavy" when Dr. Scheele returned and found that his laboratory had been entered. She said that she has the key to the Hoboken place and intends to remonstrate with the Hoboken police for permitting such things to happen in her husband's plant.

"My husband's not here, but there's nothing strange about that," said Mrs. Scheele. "He left about two weeks ago for Pennsylvania to look into a mining property. I have not seen him since. However, he often went away without saying a word. It was customary with him.

"It is true that we recently bought this house. I paid for it with my money—$700 down. I have often helped him in money matters. My husband is so honest that I can tell you that he refused $10,000 twenty years ago to swear falsely in a murder case.

"Dr. Scheele has always worked in a laboratory. He came to this country in 1891 and, of course, was educated in Germany. We have been married twenty-two years. This country owes him a living. Do you know that valuable discoveries and inventions have been taken from my husband by big chemical concerns?

"Mr. Von Kleist worked for my husband. He was sent away and I heard that Mr. von Kleist swore that he would get even with Dr. Scheele for discharging him. I did not know that there was all his excitement about my husband until last night. Do you know, I don't believe that he even knows of it? I don't know when he will return, but he will come all right."

RUN-DOWN WOMEN

We Have a Remedy That Will Cost You Nothing If It Does Not Help You.

Peterborough women will please realise that we mean just what we say in the above heading. Letters like the following prove the efficiency of Vinol in such cases:

"For the benefit of the other tired women, I want to say that I keep house for seven in my family. I became run-down, all played out. I did not seem to have any life in me and looked badly. I read so much about Vinol I decided to try it and I must say it helped me in every way. It built me up so I felt like a new woman, and my friends said they could see a great change in me." Mrs. John M. Waldron, Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

We recommend Vinol to our customers as the greatest strength creator we know—due to the extractive medicinal elements of fresh cod livers, without oil, combined with peptonate of iron and beef glycerine, all dissolved in a pure medicated wine.

RUNNING NOSE COLDS CURED SNEEZING STOPPED INSTANTLY

Keep Catarrhozone on hand — it kills colds instantly. Something magical about the way it cures catarrh and bronchitis. Catarrhozone is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way; it heals, soothes and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket, use it occasionally and you'll never catch cold —that's worth remembering.

Beware of dangerous substitutes, meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone, which is sold everywhere; large size containing two months' treatment costs $1.00; small size, 50c.; sample size, 25c.

FATAL FALL ENDS EFFORT TO RESCUE

KENNETH D. COLLINS ATTEMPTING TO AID WOMAN, IS HURLED FROM FIRE ESCAPE AND DIES.

New York, April 18.—In his efforts to rescue two women who were not in imminent peril from a burning building, Kenneth D. Collins, of the manufacturing firm of Collins & Aikman, No. 135 Fifth avenue, fell from a fire escape on the apartment house at No. 545 Columbus avenue last night and died later in the Knickerbocker Hospital.

In passing the five story apartment house at the northwest corner of Columbus avenue and Eighty-sixth street Mr. Collins heard women in the windows screaming and crying that the place was on fire. Smoke was coming from some of the windows. He hurried to the entrance in Eighty-sixth street and up the stairs to the third floor. There he found Mrs. Mary Mallory and Mrs. Ella Ludwig hysterical and ushered them to a fire escape on the Columbus avenue side of the building.

By that time a crowd was gathering and persons in passing elevated trains could see the frantic women and children squeezing out of the windows on to the fire escapes.

After Mr. Collins had the two women on the fire escape platform he struggled to release a ladder. In doing so he lost his balance and fell over the rail into the street. His skull was fractured, one leg was broken and he was internally injured.

As the fire was not serious the police called on those on the fire escapes to go back into the rooms and descend by the stairs. Most of them did so, while others remained in their rooms. Several, however, were carried down the fire escape ladders before they knew that there was little danger.

The fire started in the basement and spread to three small shops on the first floor. It was extinguished after $5000 damage had been done. A large crowd gathered and the police reserves were called from two stations.

ZEPPELINS SCARE GOLFERS

Links Deserted for Fear of Bombs, Says Scotsman.

Pittsburg, April 18. — "Golf and Zeppelins won't mix," was the plaint here to-day of George T. Duncan, of London, who is in this country trying to book business for Scotch golf ball manufacturers.

"Golfing has gone down in Europe, especially in England and Scotland," said Mr. Duncan. "This decadence is the result of the Zeppelins. People who live anywhere near the east and south coasts are timid!

"Thousands of golfers have had clear views of the 'Zeps' sailing over links scattered throughout the islands, and they are taking no chances with the bombs. Along the east coast of Scotland, one of the greatest golfing sections of the United Kingdom, the sport is dead."

Food For Warm Days.

"Heating" foods, as the expression implies, should not be used in the warm weather now approaching. Starchy and fatty foods are those which heat most, because they are concentrated, i.e., have not enough waste matter to stimulate intestinal activity. The result is absorption into the blood of decomposed products which irritate the skin, clog the organs of elimination, and reduce vitality required to withstand the heat. Dr Jackson's Roman Meal positively prevents all decomposition within the digestive tube, preventing the possibility of absorption of matters which "heat the blood." In summer make porridge at night and serve cold in the morning.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat and Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Have Done

"I suffered a great many years with kidney trouble; tried several remedies, and also doctors' medicine, with no result.

Two years ago I read an ad. in a newspaper of "GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS," and sent for two boxes. They did me more good than all the medicine I had ever taken. After I used the first two I sent for two more boxes, and I am satisfied, and also know, that Gin Pills are the best kidney remedy made.

I used to have to rise three or four times in the night; now I can sleep and don't have to get up at all, thanks to GIN PILLS. Am seventy-two years old. 24

GOT TO COME IN

When it Rains this Spring to Save Finery.

New York, April 18.—Purchasers of new suits for the present season are warned by the National Association of Clothiers in a circular just sent out, that if the garment fades "they must learn to accept the situation as one over which no mill, manufacturer or retailer can exercise control."

"The complete cessation of imports of coal tar dyes," the letter, which is sent to all retail clothing merchants in the United States, continues, "the rapid exhaustion of domestic supplies, and the inadequacy of American production, have caused most woollen and worsted mills to refuse color guarantees of their fabrics for the fall and winter season. Surely, the American public can be trusted to meet this condition cheerfully, if everybody is frank about it."

HAIR COMING OUT?

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff.

Some Apsley News Paragraphs

APSLEY, April 19.—We are sorry to hear that Pte. Hugh Jones is ill with pneumonia. Dr. Shepherd is in attendance, and we hope to see him out again soon.

The doctor is kept busy these days attending to patients with measles and la grippe, but we have no cause to worry as he is a very good shepherd, and is right on his job. There are seven cases of measles now in the isolation hospital here.

Mr. Alex. Simpson, of Galway Township, paid a visit to our village on his rounds inspecting the reservoir dams for the Dominion Government.

Mr. John Buchanan had the misfortune to lose a very valuable horse last week.

Has the Municipal Council of Burleigh and Anstruther become a secret society, that a councillor who is honest enough to tell the ratepayers what business is transacted in the council chambers is called a news-carrier? The ratepayers would like to know why the minutes of the council meeting of December 15, 1915, and also the first meeting of January, 1916, were not printed in some local paper, so they might know who got the $10 salary as caretaker of the hall for 1915, and what service was given for same.

We are pleased to hear that Mr. Levi P. Bullied is able to be out again after a long illness, and is able to resume his duties as municipal clerk of Chandos.

There is another question the ratepayers would like some information on. When is the sucker creek bridge going to be built? $66.00 was granted by the Dominion Government some two years ago. Is the said $66.00 bearing interest?

Coughed Almost All Night
WITH THAT DRY, TICKLING SENSATION
IN YOUR THROAT.

How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty tickling sensation in the throat?

The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a specific for just this kind of a cough, as it is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs, roots and barks known to medical science.

Mrs. Joseph Riley, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. I took a severe cold, had coughed almost all night with that dry, tickling sensation in my throat. The first bottle did me so much good I thought I would try the second one, and I am pleased to say "Dr. Wood's" resulted in a complete cure."

There is nothing that can take the place of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. There is nothing "just as good."

"Dr Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years.

It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

A splendid tea, such as our grandmothers and great grandmothers used to prepare was served from 6 to 8, and, needless to say, was greatly enjoyed. A large number of the Leaguers succeeded in securing some very quaint costumes, which in many cases were indeed quite pretty. One 'Grandma' wore a lace shawl which was over a hundred years old.

Refreshments were served by the members after the selling of the 'Shadows'.

The Rev. Slimon of Lakefield Baptist Church, who occupied the pulpit of the Norwood Baptist Church, on Sunday, April 16th, addressed the Norwood Platoon of the 93rd Battalion. His feeling and eloquent discourse on Nehemiah as a Patriot, was delivered with so much earnestness and sincerity that everyone present, including those in khaki, must have been inspired with a new desire for a better, purer, nobler life of usefulness, not only for our King and country, but for the King of Kings. In the evening he spoke to a large audience on "The Centurion at the Cross," impressing his most interested hearers with the need of a closer walk with Jesus.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Straight Flush.

(Copyright, 1 , by C. McClure.)

It was a wealthy train on the Union Pacific road in the days when Cheyenne was its western terminus. Major Crenshaw, army paymaster, was playing cards with several men. A woman on the train warned him by a look that they were sharpers. Her warning was unheeded—indeed, resented.

When the officer was a thousand dollars ahead he looked back at the woman and smiled superciliously. She answered by shaking her head. He was still holding his own when he looked again. She was sleeping, or pretending to. Then of a sudden luck changed. The professional gambler does not always have to resort to trickery. The fickle goddess is apt to smile on him as on the novice. There was a square deal of cards in which three of the four got good hands, and the betting was lively. The major held four tens and kept boosting the pot until his winnings were at stake. Then he called to find four queens out against him. One more hand cleaned him out to his last dollar, and he rose up to give place to some one else. He looked at the woman, and there was a smile of pity on her face. It angered him. He chipped with government greenbacks. He won and he lost.

For two hours the major made three losses to one winning. Two of the others also lost. Luck favored only one man. Whenever during these two hours the officer looked at the woman she was either napping or looking out of the window. She did not try to catch his eye again. She gave him no attention when he finally rose up and returned to his old seat. He hadn't $5 left in his pocket. He had used up over $5,000 of government money. He sat stiffly in his seat, staring straight ahead of him, wondering how he should die. He was not the man to turn cur and run away. All his friends combined could not raise that amount of money offhand. He had lived under army regulations as an officer and a gentleman, and he would die that way. It was to be suicide pure and simple, either before reaching Cheyenne or directly afterward. The major didn't shrink from the idea. He was trying to plan the time and place. As he was busy with these thoughts the woman rose up and passed down the car to the gang he had played with. The three men were not playing at that moment.

"Jim, how much have you won?" asked the woman of the lucky man.

"About $9,000."

"I'd like to play a hand with you—just the two of us."

The three men looked at her in surprise, and a number of passengers gathered around.

"I mean it," insisted the woman as she produced money and drafts. "We'll cut for deal and have a showdown. The biggest hand takes the stakes."

"That isn't regular. Besides, I'm playing in great luck today and would be sure to beat you."

"Then you will be welcome to my money. Don't be a flunker."

"What are the stakes to be?"

"Six thousand dollars."

"Whew!" whistled three or four men in chorus. It was a big sum of money to be lost or won on a showdown. It staggered even the professionals.

"If you will agree that we may discard and draw after the deal I'll go you," said Jim after taking a moment to think and wondering if his luck would stand by him.

"All right."

The woman sat down, the cards were cut, and Jim got the deal. With so many eyes watching him he dared not attempt any tricks. The woman said her five cards would do, and the gambler held up two aces and drew three more cards. When he saw that he had drawn two more aces he felt sorry for the woman.

"We agreed on a showdown, but I should like to bet on this hand," he observed.

"Well, let's call the agreement off," replied the woman. "What's your bet?"

"Only five hundred to begin with."

"I'll see it and raise you five hundred."

In less than ten minutes there was $10,000 in the pot. Jim had put up his last dollar and had to call. He laid down his four aces with a bland smile.

"A straight flush, queen high," said the woman as she began to gather up the money.

The major had neither heard nor seen. His face was turned toward the window, but he might as well have been blind for all he saw. He was thinking of the penalty. By and by a hand was laid on his shoulder and a package of money was laid on his knee, and the woman quietly said:

"Jim Daily wants you to take this back. He let you play just to win your money and show you that you were not in the game. Jim used to be a soldier, and he wouldn't beat Uncle Sam."

"Do you mean it?" asked the major as he came to life again.

"Of course I do, and if there is anything over what you lost you may donate it to the hospital at Cheyenne."

"And—and they cheated me?"

"Twenty different times. That's their business. You thought you could play poker; but, you see, you don't know shucks about the game. Lucky for you that Jim used to be a soldier."

"And let me go and thank him," said the major as he rose up.

"But he's gone forward to see a man, and here we are in Cheyenne. Remember the hospital if there is anything over, and good day to you."

IDYLLIC MONTENEGRO

Easy Prison Life a Sign of Kingdom's Simplicity

While the population of Cettinje, the capital of Montenegro, took the capture of the city by the Austrians rather coolly, the few dozen inmates of the so-called state prison near the town were heartbroken, because they have now been really locked up for the first time. Some of them tried to escape, but they were quickly recaptured. Formerly these convicts had a very pleasant idyllic life. They were permitted to leave the one-story, square prison building at will, and to visit their friends in the town whenever they felt like it. Most of them spent their days smoking and playing cards in the cafes. Only after sunset they had to return to their quarters. That one of them should abuse these privileges or make his escape was almost unknown.

With two or three exceptions convicts are mountaineers who kept up the vendetta after this ancient tribal custom had been made a crime by King Nicholas many years ago. Most of the crimes with which the courts of civilized countries have to deal are practically unknown in Montenegro. The only serious offences besides the vendetta murders are occasional robberies and abductions of young girls.

IMPREGNABLE EGYPT: SUEZ LINK ASSURED

Antipodeans Recover Health by Hard Work on Wonderfully Complete System of Defense Works

W. T. Massey writes: If it has been necessary for Britain to make a vast expenditure in money and labor to secure the freedom of the waterway connecting the seas of the East and the West—the expenditure is an insurance premium which no home or colonial Briton will grudge—how much greater must be the adequate preparations of the Germans. He has to cross a practically waterless waste, with nothing to sustain his army except what he can carry from his base, 100 miles away. Prudence prompted the British to construct numerous light railways on the eastern side of the canal, and to lay an elaborate system of pipe lines for the water supply. Unless the Turks make similar arrangements over ten times the mileage they cannot bring an army equal in numbers to that which they have to meet, nor keep them opposite the British lines for more than two days, even without a shot being fired at them.

British preparations are planned to resist the most serious attack that could, in any circumstances, be made against Egypt. The British have stores carried miles into the desert by rapid little trains over 100 miles of metalled roads made for wheeled transport. The hum of the motor is carried far in the desert air, but even the aid of almost every modern appliance for speedy locomotion is not sufficient for the purpose.

Use Ancient and Modern

While long clouds of dust are raised on the roads by self-propelled vehicles tell the story of an up-to-date transport service, you see camel trains moving, as in Pharoah's time, larger, perhaps, than ever before in history, carrying different loads, but in the same slow, methodical, follow-my-leader way. This curious blend of ancient and modern transport is necessary and desirable, to bring to the service of the army every possible means of carriage, and it is due to the employment of all available resources that such astonishing defensive works have been completed.

It is certain that if ever there were chances of a Turkish success they have completely vanished. During a visit to the front line of defences I was much impressed with the character of the work and the enthusiastic labor of the troops. In this sector the preparation of the lines has been given to a division composed of veterans who proved their courage and martial spirit in the stern days on Gallipoli. Some had held on their duties longer than health warranted, because they wished to see the quality of the reinforcements, and to impress upon them how vital it was that the younger nations should show the mother country that the stock was true.

New Work For Heroes

They came to Egypt with nerves unshaken, for the Gallipoli ordeals merely tempered them; but jaundice and other forms of sickness preyed on troops who had lowered systems. After recuperating for three weeks at the desert rest camp, they were ready for fresh trials. Indeed, the Divisional Commander told me that the news that his men were to prepare and occupy the first line gave intense satisfaction, and though the subsequent toil was heavy and the calls upon cheerfulness and endurance great, their health was splendid. Work for the Empire has acted as a tonic, and the rate of sickness among these war-worn heroes has fallen to 3 per 1,000.

TRENCHES IN THE DESERT

How British Defenders of Egypt Tackle Big Difficulties

In preparing Egypt against possible attacks hired labor is used for railway and road construction, but only troops are employed on the defences. For weeks the troops, British and colonial, dug, levelled, sand-bagged and so on, until they produced a system of earthworks incomparably superior to any made in Egypt before. Those who watched them were amazed at their skill and pride in their work. They have done magnificently, and in the whole of the wonderful line the men see to it that there is not an idler. There is no room for the drone in that hive of bees.

Trench-making in the desert used to be never-ending and heart-breaking. You cut a hole and the sand filtered in like water. Even should the air be still, tiny particles drift in, but when the Khamseen blows, as it does with the force of a moderate gale, heavily charging the air with sand, there comes over the trench parapet and the guns' emplacement a fog of dust, which quickly fills the laboriously cut holes. This is bad enough, but the loose sand is easily distributed when the storm subsides. What is to be feared is that the walls of the trenches will fall away, then the whole previous exertion will have been in vain.

A new form of trench has been planned to meet this difficulty. The latest design involves infinitely more labor in the initial stages, but it prevents damage by storm or pressure of sand. These elaborate trenches will stand the ravages of time and the desert storm. Perhaps some future excavators for relics of an ancient people will come upon these and wonder what they are.

Russia's Wealthy Partners

Russia cannot face financial failure so long as her fields are tended and produce the average quantity of food. Indeed had she exercised greater foresight and begun to manufacture war munitions in her own factories, she would not only have been driven out of Galicia and further east beyond Warsaw, but she would have probably arrived at the gates of Budapest, so was the anticipation when she captured Przemysl and seized most of the Carpathian passes that led down into Hungary.

If You Bake

YOU will want to try Crisco. The experience of thousands of practical housewives throughout the country has shown it to be the ideal cooking fat.

It makes cakes that are as tasty and wholesome as if made with the best creamery butter. It costs no more than ordinarily good lard.

Foods made with lard are likely to produce indigestion and give a "heavy feeling" after eating. When made with Crisco, they are light and easily digested.

ANNA CASE
The Miracle Girl

IN New York there are two phrases always used in conjunction in describing Anna Case: "A wonderful voice and a raving beauty." She is of surpassing physical charm—and she has a voice—such a voice, fresh and silvery; a soft caress, and yet youth's virileness in every note.

Hear Anna Case

on concert tour or at the Metropolitan in New York. Miss no chance to hear this miraculously endowed American girl. The story of her life reads like a romance. She is the miracle girl of music.

It was Anna Case who first sang in comparison with Edison's Re-Creation of her voice to test his new art—to determine whether the Wizard had in fact achieved his ambition to Re-Create the human voice so perfectly that a singer's performance could not be distinguished from his record of it. Anna Case was the first to prove this to the world. Today over one hundred thousand of the most critical and cultured music lovers in America have heard similar tests. The musical critics of more than one hundred of the leading newspapers in this country have confessed that their trained ears cannot distinguish, by actual and direct comparison, an artist's performance from Edison's Re-Creation of it. Booklet of critiques will be furnished on application.

SIR SAM HUGHES' SPEECH DOES NOT MEET ESSENTIAL CHARGES

OTTAWA, April 19. — Sir Sam Hughes still sticks to Allison, to General Bertram, to Colonel Carnegie nd to the Shell Committee. He still sticks to his department—somewhat precariously and vicariously through Premier Borden. He does not stick to the Canadian manufacturerers. The Kyto charges in their essential details still stick to him. In broad outline that sums up opinion as a result of the Minister of Militia's hour and a half reply under dramatic conditions to the Kyte-Carvell charges.

His speech in the Commons in the afternoon was awaited with intense interest by the members on both sides of the House. There was a full attendance on the floor and the galleries above were crowded to their fullest capacity with curious or sympathetic listeners, many of whom had waited for an hour previous to the opening of the House in order to be sure of admittance in the first rush. After the speech was concluded and Sir Sam had taken his seat, displaying emotion almost to the breaking down point, following his allusion to the seriousness of the situation at the front, and a declaration that the members of Parliament might be better engaged in helping on the cause than in discussing the "piffle" of the munitions contract charges, the galleries and chamber emptied.

Opinion is unanimous that the whole situation can be cleared up only by a searching investigation by the Royal Commission.

Sir Sam sat at rest early the uncertainty as to whether he was to continue in the Government and remain as Minister of the department. He declared that when he had to be absent from his department attending to the investigatiin, Sir Robert Borden would act as Minister for him. Incidentally the Prime Minister evoked the only real furore of the day by his declaration that there must be a most searching investigation and that the Minister of Militia himself desired it.

NOT WHAT WAS EXPECTED OF HIM.

Sir Sam spoke on a question of privilege and consequently there was no opportunity for any debate. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, however, took occasion in a brief three minutes to point out that Sir Sam had not done what was expected of him and explained his own personal connection with the fuse contracts, nor had he explained why it was necessary to give them to foreign firms, and Sir Wilfrid closed with he significant promise of further explanations being needed as to new charges which would be made in regard to the disposal of small arms ammunition from the Quebec arsenal to private contractors for their own profit.

Sir Robert Borden, in closing the chapter, asserted that the Government had granted the Royal Commission on the slightest and slenderest foundation of insinuation against the Minister of Militia, and declared that the opportunity had been given to the Minister of Militia to-day to dissipate the impression created that he had any connection with secret profits, which secret profits, so far as was yet known, had never been divided.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Daintiness and simplicity are the talking points in the younger girl's dress that attract. Just now there are many designs excellently suited to contrasting materials; especially may this be said of the one illustrated in No. 7,662, a fascinating little model that may have either a plaited or a gathered skirt and to be made with your choice of sleeve length. In the shoulder edge of each front two tucks are made. They shape the upper part of a blouse that is full below and which fastens with neat small buttons that are rather close together. The dainty "point collar" finishing the neck is of contrasting goods and has an edging to make it richer. A belt of the material marks the joining of the waist to a skirt with fourteen plaits. Marking the hem line, a broad strip or band of the material goes round the skirt and proves an attractive trimming idea. Just above it another band, in similar width, shares the honors for adding charm to the dress. A cuff in fanciful outline and in contrasting goods finishes the short sleeve.

In making the skirt "gathered" embroidered flouncing will serve beautifully. The features of interest in the dress with the plaited skirt, with the exception of the belt, are to be found in the model with the gathered skirt.

The pattern is cut in sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 years. To make for a girl of 10 years 3⅝ yards 36 inch material and ⅝ yard contrasting goods will be necessary. Or use 2¾ yards 21 inch embroidered flouncing and 1¼ yards plain goods 36 inches wide.

To obtain the pattern send sixty cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Look, Mother! If Tongue is Coated Clean Little Liver and Bowels

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if the breath is bad; stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

FRENCH OFFICERS YOUNGER

PARIS, April 11.—The age limit of Colonels and general officers in the French army was discussed to-day in the Chamber of Deputies on a motion to reduce the limit of 70, 68 and 62 years respectively. The motion was referred to a committee.

During the debate General Roques, Minister of War, said that the age of Generals of armies and of army corps now ranged from 49 to 64 years. The army, he said, was on the way to a complete rejuvenation. This remark was greeted by applause.

Deputy Andre Maginot, who spoke with difficulty owing to wounds received at the front, was also applauded for the statement that "after twenty months of war we are justified in asking the chief command for more activity and more war like energy."

To remove grease from a kitchen table scrub well with hot water to which half a teaspoonful of whiting has been added; wipe and then dry thoroughly with a clean cloth. This will make the table look equal to new.

To restore old gilding take some cut-tags and form it into a hard putty, as large as a nut and then dip in strong liquid ammonia, and apply it to the old gilding as not worn off.

NATIVE IGORROTES ARE BECOMING FASTIDIOUS

San Francisco, April 11.—Back in the mountains of the Philippines, where digestions have flourished with ostrich like invulnerability, American pastry is coming to take the place of dog meat as the native food of the Bontoc tribe of the Igorrotes.

A little fragment of a tribe which for a year has been travelling about America, is now in San Francisco unwilling to return. Their agreement with the Federal Government has expired and they must return. But it has been learned that the tribesmen have learned to eat pie and they will only eat dog once a week now. The natives are making a fight to remain in America because they like to see movie shows and ride in jitney busses.

INGENUOUS IF NOT INGENIOUS.

After May 1 all the clocks in Germany are to be set ahead one hour. So on order of the Federal council commands and as orders are obeyed in Germany with beautiful docility, no donbt the thing will be done. The object is to make people go to bed earlier and so to save the cost of an hour of artificial illumination.

The economy is not a trivial one, and its desirability, with Germany's situation given, is not incomprehensible, but the device for effecting it does seem a little—well, naive. The clocks though set forward, will deceive nobody as to the time of day or of night either, for that matter, and the power of suggestion hardly goes to the extent of producing at 6a.m., say, or at 11 p.m., the desire to get up in the one instance or to retire in the other that is or may be felt at 7 and 12.

The purposed saving could as well and even better because more reasonably obtained, it would seem, by settings acts ahead, not clocks. The troublesome change of habits is the same in both cases and after all there is a certain satisfaction in knowing that clocks and watches are right, not wrong.

But there! to call 11 o'clock noon goes well enough with clamming that other nations, not Germany, started the war, and that America is "prolonging the slaughter" by selling arms to the Allies. It is Teutonic to be thoroughgoing in inaccuracy as in everything else.—New York Times.

"Doing" the Railway.—He was a country "gentleman" and had never travelled in a train before. He bought his ticket, and when he was carefully seated in the train he thought he would not need the ticket any longer so the ticket collector had seen it, and had put him into the carriage. So he threw the ticket out of the window. When he arrived at his destination, as he had no ticket to give up, he wanted to pay the railway fare again. Some weeks after he travelled again by train. The people in the compartment noticed that he seemed very pleased with himself, and kept bursting into fits of laughter. One of them ventured to ask him what was the cause of his merriment. "I've done the company this time," he replied with much glee. "The last time I travelled by train I threw away my ticket and they made me pay my fare a second time. But I'm even with them now. I've don the company well. I've taken a return ticket, and I'm not coming back."

MARKET FEATURES.

Eggs at 18 in country.

Sugar up ten cents. Is now practically ten pounds for $1.00.

Hogs bringing $11.25 locally, a new record price.

Easter oranges very cheap.

Butter around 30 cents.

Sugar advanced another ten cents on Wednesday morning and is now reaching a price that makes even a spoonful a quantity to be handled with consideration. The retail price is ten cents a pound, two pounds and one-half for twenty-five cents, and ten or eleven pounds for a dollar. No attempt is made to learn the various prices charged by grocers, for some consider sugar as an advertisement and sacrifice it as such. But on the present wholesale basis the regular price is about $9.10 per hundred pounds. The retail trade is just as unsettled as any other section of the sugar industry at the present time, and wherever the retailer sees what he thinks is an advantage to himself he should jump at it and jump quickly. The preserving season will soon be here with the increased consumption of sugar.

No. 1 Granulated sugar, cwt.,	$9.00 to $9.10
Honey, lb.	15c
Shelled walnuts	60c

Mixed wood, 2 ft. per cord	$4.75
Ladders, ft.	20c

Live Hogs at $11.25.

There seems to be no let-up to the increasing scale of prices in the hog market. Of course it is felt that the price cannot go much higher, and that prospective larger receipts will relieve the situation, but just for the present the farmers are getting the biggest price in the history of the country. Advances in the quotations on pickled back, cooked hams, etc., illustrates the effect on the retail trade.

This week the local shops are more interested in Easter beef, which is being shown in most appetizing cuts and roasts. One dealer expressed the opinion that the days of cheap meat are over for a long time to come. In fact he saw no hope for any near improvement, and the likelihood was more toward more stringent market conditions.

The prices are as follows:

Meats and Hogs.

Bacon, per lb	30c to 32c
Skinned back bacon	30 to 32c
Ham	25 to 28c
Cooked hams	40c

Round roast	20c
Lamb	18c to 22c
Lard, lb.	20c
Live hogs, cwt.	$11.25

Eggs Very Cheap.

Eggs are selling throughout this district at 18 cents. That is what buyers are paying and in the city stores you can get the freshest of the fresh for 19c and 20c. A year ago the lowest price was 22c, and this figure held for about three months, without an advance or decline. But this week the bottom has fallen out of the egg market and there should be plenty of them for sale on Saturday. There will naturally be a heavy demand, but it should not be sufficient to boost the prices to any extent. The consumer is just now getting a much desired relief from high prices and merchants promise about 20c. if the farmers' market prices are unfavourable. Butter is down to thirty cents and should go lower until the cheese factories recommence operations. The poultry market is rather quiet and chickens are at a premium.

Chickens	23c
Live hens, each	$1.00

The Muskrat Season

There is no change in the price of hides. The rat season is at its height in fact nearing the end.

Local prices range from 50 to 60c. the latter covering No. 1 Spring rats. The season is reported to have been one of the best in years, and many large catches were reported.

Wools and Hides.

Wool (no market).

Sheep skins, each	$1.25 to $1.50
Calf skins, lb.	14c. to 15c.

Tallow, refined	6c. to 7c.
Wool	45c to 47c

Cheap Easter Oranges.

Peterborough never saw finer oranges for the money than are being offered in the local stores this week. Great big naval, sweet oranges at six for 25c., are exceptionally attractive. These are the '80's,' that is 80 to a case; the '100's,' almost as large an orange, sell for 40 cents a dozen, and there should be a large sale for Easter. These are exceptionally fine fruit. Apples are becoming scarcer every week. Toronto reports $7 and $7.50 for some varieties; another of the big prices farmers are receiving, that is if they have the products to sell. Potatoes are weaker all over and were decidedly unsteady around $2 locally, this week.

Fruits and Vegetables.

Apples, per bag	$1.00 to $1.50
Apples, per barrel	$2.25 to $5.00
Potatoes, per bag	$1.80 to $2.00

Alsike	$13 to $14
Timothy	$5.50 to $6.00

HAD A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN COULD NOT SLEEP OR WORK

Is Now Cured and Attributes His Recovery to the Use of Dr. Chase's Medicines

Some splendid results have been reported to us from the combined use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. In complicated cases they work together with great success.

While the Kidney-Liver Pills arouse the action of liver, kidneys, and bowels, and so overcome derangements of these organs, the Nerve Food enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and builds up the system in a general way.

Mr. R. S. Hillman, Purbrook, Muskoka, Ont., writes: "About four years ago I was all run down and could not work, and as to writing a letter, I could not do it on account of my hand shaking so badly. My nerves were unstrung and I was troubled with a nervous breakdown. I could not sleep soundly and would start up suddenly so as almost jump out of bed. My kidneys were bad, too, and I had awful pains in the back all day. I consulted with our family doctor, but he did not seem to know what I needed. I was recommended to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and could sleep well three nights after starting the use of the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I take great pleasure in recommending these medicines as I have proved that they do all that is claimed for them."

When used together the Nerve Food should be used after each meal and at bed-time, and the Kidney-Liver Pills only as often as is necessary to keep the bowels in healthy condition. Dr. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Crushed and faded artificial flowers can be made to look fresh and new again if held over the steam from a boiling kettle for a few minutes.

To save tea, put a lump of sugar in the tea pot when making the tea and then the spoonful usually put in "for the pot" can be dispensed with.

FRENCH CAPTURE GERMAN POSITIONS

Over 100,000 Canadians Enlisted Since January 1st

STRONG GERMAN WORK CAPTURED BY THE FRENCH

French War Office Announces a Success Northwest of Vaux 200 Prisoners and Much Booty Captured---Germany is Not Expected to Yield to United States Demands.

PARIS (French Official Communique), April 20.—The French troops captured a well fortified German work in a violent attack last night northwest of Vaux, the War Office announced, taking 200 prisoners and much booty.

Germany Is Not Expected To Yield

Examiner Special:

LONDON, April 20.—Well informed persons here do not believe that Germany will yield to the United States. The general opinion in London is that a diplomatic break is certain and that war is a strong possibility.

This view is based upon the fact that Germany has emphasized the statement that the submarine is her most effective weapon in fighting Britain. For this reason it is believed Germany cannot afford to concede any essential points, though it is thought possible she will offer certain concessions to obtain some delay.

The United States action is believed here will have salutory effect in favour of the Allies on neutral nations like Greece, Holland, Roumania, Spain and Sweden.

It is difficult to suppose that the German Government elated by submarine success of the past six weeks will accept President Wilson's terms said the Chronicle Diplomatic relations between Berlin and Washington will then be broken and the resulting situation may easily develop into war if Germany perpetuates fresh atrocities in which the victims include Americans.

The Chronicle view was not accepted in all quarters, however. Some diplomats here said they believed that Germany would accept a diplomatic break, not daring to risk popular displeasure by appearing to back down before the United States.

After the breach came they said the German Government would so order its submarine policies that there would be no chance of war with the United States.

RUSSIAN TROOPS LANDED ON THE WESTERN FRONT

Sensational Announcement Was Revealed in An Army Order of the Day---News Electrifies the French Capital

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 20.—General Joffre has issued a proclamation welcoming Russian troops to the occidental front. It is not clear whether this means the Russians have arrived in France to help the Allies or in Greece.

Russian Troops Welcomed By Joffre

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, April 20.—Russian troops were landed at the French port of Marseilles to-day to join the Allied troops in operations against the Germans on the west front.

This sensational announcement was made simultaneous with the publication of an army order of the day issued by General Joffre, sending best wishes to the first detachment of soldiers of the Czar to fight on French soil since the beginning of the war. French newspapers assume that the Russians were landed in large force, and also that they will be rushed into action either at Verdun or on some other sector of the western front where the Allies are contemplating a great offensive.

By what route the Russians reached Marseilles is known only to officials of the War Office and Ministry of Marine.

No news in many weeks has so electrified the French capital as the brief bulletins passed by the censor this afternoon.

United States Note Reaches Berlin

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, April 20.—President Wilson's note to Germany reached the American Embassy at 11 o'clock this morning. Ambassador Gerard expects to deliver the note to Foreign Secretary Von Jaggow this afternoon. Early to-day an important confidential message reached the Embassy from Washington. It enjoined absolute silence on Ambassador Gerard.

GERMANS CLAIM A VICTORY

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, April 20.—The capture of six hundred yards of British trenches between Ypres and Langemarck was claimed by the German War Office this afternoon. The Germans took 109 prisoners and two machine guns.

OTTAWA, April 20.—A further list of twenty-four killed, ten died of wounds, and eighty wounded, among the Canadian troops, was given out by the Militia Department this morning. Most of the killed and died of wounds had next of kin with English, Irish or Scotch addresses. It was the same with the majority of wounded. There were also ten given as missing.

Bernstoff Confers With Secretary Lansing

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Count Von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, went to State Department today for a conference with Secretary Lansing on the submarine warfare situation and also to discuss the arrest in New York of Wolfe Von Igel secretary of the former German military attache. Neither would make a statement after a 20 minute conversation.

This interesting group of pictures should afford some food for thought. Few Peterborough women have been called upon to make a greater sacrifice than Mrs. Stanley, Stewart St. Not only have her three sons joined the Canadian overseas forces, but her husband has donned the khaki as well, and is a sergeant in the 139th at Cobourg. Two sons joined the Mounted Rifles here early in 1915, and are now at the front, while the third is a sergeant in the Peterborough Battalion. Sergeant Stanley, Sr., was assistant caretaker at the Armouries for some time.

THE CRISIS IN BRITISH CABINET NOW AVERTED

All Differences Have Been Settled and an Official Statement Regarding Conscription Is Being Prepared

A COMPROMISE

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, April 20.—The crisis in the British cabinet has been averted and all differences settled, it was announced this afternoon. An official statement is being prepared covering the agreement on conscription. The compromise it is reported, provides only for the postponement of general conscription for a period of not more than two months to give the voluntary system one more chance to produce the number of men demanded by the army heads.

OVER 100,000 HAVE ENLISTED IN CANADA SINCE FIRST OF YEAR

Total For First Three Months Was 88,575 Announced] Premier Borden in the House Yesterday---Canada's Forces Now Over 310,000 Men---No Drill For 93rd Battalion To-morrow--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

OTTAWA, April 19.—There were enlisted in Canada during the first three months of the year for active service overseas 88,575 officers, non-commissioned officers and men, according to the detailed statement given by Sir Robert Borden in the Commons to-day, in reply to a question by Dr. J. W. Edwards, of Frontenac.

During January the total number of enlistments was 29,212 during February 26,659 and during March 32,705. The numbers were distributed as follows, for the three months: From the three military divisional areas of Ontario, 41,725; from two divisions of Quebec, 6,696; from the Maritime Provinces, 7,911; from Manitoba and Saskatchewan, 18,942; from British Columbia and the Yukon, 6,752, and from Alberta 7,147.

The quotas from the divisions of Ontario were as follows:—From No. 1 division with headquarters at London, 9,254; from No. 2 division with headquarters at Toronto, 23,435 and from 3 division, with headquarters at Kingston, 10,039.

The total number of Canadia troops in England and France up to the end of March, 1916 was, according to a reply to a question put by Mr. F. B. Devlin of Wright, 134,638.

"The spirit of Canada" said the Prime Minister, "is as firm and undaunted, and the response of Canada is as ready as it was in the days of August, 1914. We have, up to the present time, enlisted upwards of 310,000 men and between the first of January and April 15, last more than 100,000 Canadians have enlisted to take their part in the great struggle for liberty. The recital is enough to convince us that the spirit of Canada is as firm and its determination as unshaken as it has been since the commencement of the war. The organization of this country was absolutely unfitted to undertake a task such as has been accomplished and I am ready to concede that, but the whole-hearted support of the Canadian people lies for the splendid spirit which has animated them, men and women alike, it would have been impossible for any Government to do what has been accomplished. Though the task manifests itself as a much greater task than we imagined at the outset, still we are ready with the response and in no part of the Empire is there a firmer determination to do our duty to the end.

"We approach the anniversary of the first great test of the Canadians at the front. How can we better honor the achievements of those who fought? What of those who fell? I believe that we shall honor their memory by flying the flag for which they fell from the mast and not at half-mast."

Trent Valley Bill Passed This Morning

Power Measure Affecting Eastern Ontario Rushed Through on Closing Day of Session Despite Protest of Liberals Who Wished to See System Managed By Hydro Commission.

A BIG PROPOSITION

TORONTO, April 20.—The largest single proposition that the province of Ontario has gone into at one time, namely, the acquisition of the Seymour Power Bill, was rushed through at the closing day of the session. The sitting lasted until 3 o'clock this morning, business having been commenced fourteen and a half hours earlier. The house adjourned with the singing of the National Anthem to meet again on Thursday next, when the Legislature will prorogue.

The acquisition of the Trent Valley system involves an expenditure of $3,350,000 and takes in twenty-two concerns in Eastern Ontario, including the Napanee Water and Electric Company and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, Peterborough Radial Railway Company, the Seymour Power and Electric Company, Limited, the Sidney Electric Power Co., Ltd., the Trenton Electric and Water Co., Ltd., the Tweed Electric Light and Power Co., Ltd. The bill was not allowed to go through without strenuous opposition from the Liberals, who not only protested against the most important legislation of the session being left to the last minute, but also objected to the fact that the bill did not provide for the management of the system by the Hydro Commission but by the nominee of the Lieut.-Governor-in-Council. The amendments introduced by Leader Rowell were voted down by a straight party vote of 64 to 18. Allan Studholme, Labour member, voted with the Liberals. In addition to this the McGarry bill and the four bills respecting power and radials introduced by the Attorney General, were given their final reading. The division on the McGarry bill gave Mr. Rowell another opportunity to disown Gustav Evanturel, the member for Prescott.

THE BILL IN HOUSE.

TORONTO, April 21.—The Trent Valley Power Bill, validating the purchasing of the Seymour power interests, and providing for their operation, was introduced in the Legislature yesterday, and despite vigorous opposition from the Liberal members, led by Mr. Rowell, was carried through all its stages. The bill was opposed chiefly on the ground that it did not provide specifically for turning the properties over to the municipalities. Hon. Mr. Ferguson, who was in charge of the bill, stated emphatically that the Government was taking power to turn the properties over to the municipalities at a later date, and that from the outset the properties would be controlled and operated by the Hydro Commission.

The Minister briefly explained its provisions, which give the Government power to go ahead through the Hydro-Electric Commission and operate the power developments and transmission lines and distribution systems taken over. There are twenty-two companies involved in the purchase, and the system would be taken over by the Commission on the first day of May, though the purchase dated from March 1.

"Officials of the Commission are now in the various offices becoming acquainted with the business of the various companies," he said.

Hon. Mr. Ferguson stated that for the time being the Government would own the system and operate through the commission. As was explained with reference to the proposed Niagara development the municipalities later on could take over the works, and the Government, in the bill, was taking power to sell any of the properties to the municipalities.

Mr. Rowell Critical.

Mr. Rowell, in reply, stated that the bill was open to criticism on the same ground as the Niagara scheme, in that it involved a departure from the principle that the municipalities should become the owners of the whole development and distributing system. In fact, he pointed out, it was going further than the Niagara proposal. That only meant Government ownership of power development, while in the Trent Valley district the Government would own both the developments and the distributing system as well.

BENCH AND BAR HONOUR MEMORY OF J. R. STRATTON

His Honour Judge Huycke, Mr. E. A. Peck, Mr. D. O'Connell and Capt. Burnham Give Expression of Regret at His Demise

TRIBUTE TO HIS CHARACTER

The Bench and Bar of Peterborough took advantage of a sitting of the County Court this morning before His Honour Judge Huycke to express its deep regret in the passing of the late Hon. J. R. Stratton, and to testify to his many sterling qualities as a friend, a citizen and a public servant. Among those present were County Magistrate O. A. Langley, Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P., E. A. Peck, Daniel O'Connell, E. H. D. Hall, F. D. Kerr, George J. Sherry, W. F. Johnston, B. D. Hall, V. J. McElderry, Joseph Wearing, J. F. Strickland, B. T. McAvoy. Mr. J. J. Turner, J.P., was also present.

After referring to his death in Hot Springs, Ark., on Wednesday, Judge Huycke said that the late Mr. Stratton had been for many years an outstanding figure in this city, and had occupied a high position in the councils of the Province.

"He was known to all of you. I can speak of him personally. He was very kind to me from my first coming to Peterborough. He was a man of boundless energy, and of great ambition and ability. He achieved great things, and was for many years a Cabinet Minister in the Government of this Province.

"There are many sad hearts over his death to-day. Although he had many political opponents in this county and city, he had no personal enemies. That is the impression I have got from hearing the expressions of regret regarding his death. I can only conclude that a great man in our midst has fallen. He performed his duties according to his own ideas, and while he was opposed my many, he was respected by all."

Judge Huycke said that the heartfelt sympathy of the Bench and Bar was extended to Mrs. Stratton and to the members of the family in their bereavement.

Mr. E. A. Peck said he had first known Mr. Stratton as a boy at school. "From that time on he was very sympathetic and kindly to me on all the occasions I met him. He had a very distinguished career. In this city he built up a very successful business, and after extending his interests to Toronto, became prominent in financial circles in that city. He was under thirty years of age when he entered public life, and from the outset won the confidence of the people. He was re-elected from time to time, and the occasion of each election was marked by the increasing majorities he received. His ability was everywhere recognized, and as an executive of the Crown he won great honour. His success may be to a certain extent attributed to his kindly disposition. He was always ready to assist any person, and as a result no one in this county attained so large a circle of friends as he had. His death will be deeply felt by many in this district and elsewhere."

In mentioning the sympathy felt for Mrs Stratton, Mr Peck spoke of her womanly sympathy and constant and unremitting devotion to her husband during his long illness.

Other Expressions.

Mr. O'Connell also addressed an eloquent eulogy of the late Mr. Stratton, who, he said, had been an intimate friend of all the members of the Peterborough Bar. He had known Mr. Stratton over twenty years, and had an opportunity of observing his many good personal qualities. In his public life he had been broad-minded and free from the narrowness and prejudices that sometimes characterise men in public life to the detriment of their communities. Mr. O'Connell also spoke of the sense of justice and fairness Mr. Stratton had exhibited in his life.

"His quality of heart is known to everyone in the county of Peterborough. He possessed this personal quality to a remarkable extent. From his long political life he knew HANG OUT THE FLAG.

"Hang out the flag upon the outer walls"—"upon every coigne of vantage." Hang out the flag to the wooing of the sweet air of a Canadian spring in honour of the gloriously gallant lads who honoured the flag, the Empire, their Canada and soldierhood and manhood, on the three eventful Langemarck days, April 22nd, 23rd and 24th.

CONGRATULATIONS.

Congratulations are cordially extended to Mr. D. O'Connell upon his having been elected a "bencher" of the "Law Society of Upper Canada." This honour is attained by the good will, good opinion, and recognition of personal and professional qualifications expressed by the votes of the brethren of the lay robe throughout the province. The merit and honour are the greater in this case, because their high opinion of Mr. O'Connell's character and attainments are fully shared by his fellow citizens. He not only stands high in public estimation because of the eminence he has achieved in his profession, but because of his qualities as a public-spirited, sane-minded citizen. He not only always takes an intelligent and active interest in all civic and social movements for the benefit of the community, but especially during the present war crisis, he has ungrudgingly lent his unusual speaking ability to the cause of recruiting—has translated his patriotism and the military enthusiasm derived from his military ancestry into effective action. On every count Mr. O'Connell is worthy of the signal honour his legal brethren of the province have bestowed upon him, as a result of his nomination, in expression of the confidence and esteem of his legal brethren in Peterborough.

GOOD FRIDAY.

To-morrow is Good Friday and our thoughts naturally revert to the first Good Friday and the forerunning facts. We sadly dwell in thought upon the agony of the week of passion that led up to, and culminated in, the supreme agony on the tree, the supreme sacrifice. We think of the agony of Gethsemane amidst the sleeping disciples; of the cruel betrayal; of the desertion of his followers, and the denial by his staunchest disciples; of the buffettings of the insulting multitude, who the day before, acclaimed Him in triumph. We think of all this sacrifice for man; and as we think of that we have before us, or should have before us, pictures of other sacrifices. Without irreverence, we may point to the sacrifices our sons, our brothers, our neighbours are making in the bloody trenches, to sustain and perpetuate to us the blessings and liberties that had their foundation in the great sacrifice made on Calvary the first Good Friday. The day should not only bring us closer to the person and purpose of the great Sacrifice, but should inspire us with a deeper interest in those who are making sacrifice of life to uphold Christianity in the principles of liberty and right it represents. The Divine tragedy of the Cross should not be made in vain to the extent of our withholding our part of whatever service, either militant service or home service we can give to the triumph of the cause of the principles of Christianity at stake in this war.

KEEP IT NON-POLITICAL.

Peterborough has joined its fortunes to the Hydro-Electric, and in common with other municipalities similarly situated, has both material and moral interest in maintaining the highest effectiveness of the system. This effectiveness is threatened by the attitude of the Ontario government towards the Hydro-Electric. At least this is the interpretation put upon the attitude and action of the government by those who are deeply interested in maintaining the integrity of the Hydro-Electric principle for the sake of the municipalities they represent. The Hydro-Electric from the beginning has been non-political and non-partizan; and its success apart from its actual merits, its wide adoption is largely, if not altogether due, to this fact. The Hydro-Electric must be kept out of politics if it is to be kept up to the mark as beneficial public service. It is generally recognized, and particularly at this time, that the highest efficiency is reached by elimination of the party or political—for, in practice, they are convertible terms—element. A party truce was declared in the matter of the principle of providing for Canada's most effective participation in this war. The subjection of party interests made possible, as could not have been done otherwise, the enactment of provincial prohibition. If the government by recent legislation, "hogs" the Hydro-Electric— if the principle of municipal interests involved in municipal control is virtually destroyed Hydro-Electric will have seen its best days.

It is possible that the harm is already done, as is suggested above was possible and inevitable. Since the above was in type, reports state that amendments to the McGarry bill, submitted by Liberal members in the interests of the municipalities, were defeated on a straight party vote. Thus the Hydro gets into politics. The apple of discord is thrown into the midst of the Hydro-Electric love feast.

THE SLEEPING CENSOR.

The receipt yesterday through the mails of a copy of a book entitled "Neutrality; the Crucifixion of Public Opinion," doesn't give us a very high opinion of the efficiency and alertness of the Canadian censor of mail matter coming from the United States. This book is published by the pro-German "neutrality press" of Chicago, financed no doubt by German money, for the purpose of spreading pro-German sentiment, lying and printed outrage, for the purpose of influencing American opinion in favour of the holy cause of the gentle Germans, the new Herods, the baby killers. The book from beginning to end of its more than two hundred pages, is an insult to every Canadian who reads it. It is a prejudiced rehash of all the arguments used by the brutal Germans to justify their brutality. Every atrocity of the Hun during this war is defended and glorified as a virtue. The sinking of the Lusitania, the killing of babies, the murder of Edith Cavell, are all justified, not only per se, but as justified reprisals of travestied historic atrocities committed by the Allies in the past. The book is particularly vicious against England —"England the destroyer of nations and commerce"—and in a way to be insulting, if it were not contemptible to Canadian readers. The book is pro-German through and through. It has pictures of all its heries, "William the Dauntless," Ferdinand, the fox of Bulgaria, and the gentle Sultan, and others of that ilk. While it may be good for the United States, it has no place in Canada. It is addressed to all the newspapers of Canada, and is marked on the wrapper "Censored." The Canadian censors must be asleep or pro-German. Which it is? The censorship that allows such a damnable book to come into Canada for circulation, is a useless expense—an abuse of public money to propagate insult to the public.

THE HON. JAMES R. STRATTON

(The Globe.)

Passing away gradually in a cloud of increasing bodily weakness, the late James Robert Stratton had before his recent death become partially obscured from the view of his contemporaries. After conducting for some years with conspicuous success The Peterborough Examiner, he was elected thirty years ago to represent one of the ridings of his county in the Ontario Legislature. With little previous practice as a public speaker, he wisely refrained for a time from active participation in the debates of the Legislative Assembly, but by industry in cultivating an acquaintance with public affairs and constant platform work during recesses he became a quite effective Parliamentary debater. This acquired power brought its usual reward in the form of an administrative portfolio: that of Provincial Secretary. During his five years of departmental service he displayed rare administrative capacity, while he was remarkable for the tact and effectiveness with which he dealt with matters relating to his department on the floor of Parliament, retaining the support of friends and disarming the hostility of opponents. Even during the most exciting episodes of the Gamey-Stratton affair he had few enemies on the Opposition benches. In his views of Provincial development he was quite advanced and progressive, alive to opportunities and quick at devising ways of utilizing them.

MR W. H. HILL WINS HANDSOME PRIZE

In Manager's Contest Conducted by the Sun Life Co. For First Three Months of Year

Mr. W. H. Hill, superintendent of the Sun Life Assurance Co. of Central Ontario, is to be congratulated on his winning one of three prizes given by the Company in the Managers' contest for the whole Dominion of Canada. The prize, which arrived to-day, is a beautiful silver centrepiece of handsome design.

Mr. Hill's division, that of Central Ontario, was second among the prize winners, Montreal leading, and Western Ontario coming third. Each division was allotted a certain amount of business to secure during the first three months of the year. According to the percentage of increase over the allotment the prizes were awarded. Montreal had an increase of 28 per cent., Peterborough 23.8 per per cent., and Western Ontario, 8.7 per cent.

HYDRO MUST NOT BE GOVERNMENT MACHINE

"We went into this business as a municipal enterprise entirely outside of politics. I myself am a Conservative. We object to having it a Government enterprise and machine."

In this fashion Mr. J. W. Lyon, Guelph, expressed himself when the deputation from the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association and the Hydro-Radial Association saw the Ontario Cabinet yesterday afternoon and asked that certain Hydro legislation be held over for another year. These were not the only plain words which made "the mighty" at Queen's Park turn uneasily in their seats, but more than any other they drew an immediate and emphatic response.

No Machine.

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson in particular could not stand it, and in a trice he was on his feet. "I don't know whether or not I may be too sensitive," he remarked, "but I don't like the suggestion coming from you or anybody else that this Government has any thought of making it a Government machine. You are not warranted in any sense in making such an imputation. There is no warrant in the bills for this."

Mayor Church, Toronto— may not be the intention, but don't the effect be something like this?

Hon. Mr. Ferguson (with vehemence)—Absolutely no.

Machine in Practice.

Mayor Church—That may not be the intention, but in actual practice that is what it will be.

Last-Hour Legislation.

The speakers objected to the various Hydro bills coming up at the last moment, and thought that more consideration should have been allowed. It was thoroughly apparent from the countenances and remarks of several of the Cabinet Ministers that the Government recognized it had "got in wrong," and was battling hard to justify itself.

"No Invasion of Rights."

Dr. Pyne, who is Acting Premier, and Messrs. Ferguson, Lucas, and McGarry all declared themselves staunch supporters of the Hydro enterprise and maintained that they (the deputationists) were under a misapprehension if they considered the rights of the municipalities were being invaded.

Table McGarry Bill.

Mr. T. J. Hannigan presented the memorial to the Government, this being in the following terms: (1) That the McGarry bill be tabled until next year or amended to make the Comptroller an appointee of the Hydro Commission. (2) That the Chippewa Power Development at Niagara Falls be made a municipal project instead of a Provincial enterprise. (3) That the Hydro-Electric Power Commission be appointed hereafter in the following way: One member by the Chief Justice of Ontario, one by the Provincial Government, one by the municipalities purchasing power rom the Hydro. (4) That the Hydro-Electric Power Commission be authorized to at once proceed with the final engineering surveys and purchase the rights-of-way for the railways now authorized by the municipalities.

Means Confiscation.

Mr. J. W. Lyon, Guelph, President of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, said while the McGarry bill seemed to be a want of confidence in the Hydro Commission, it was innocence itself as compared with the other bills handed in at the last moment. The question really at stake appeared to be whether the Hydro in all its branches was a municipal programme or a Government programme, or whether the money invested was municipal money or Government money or partnership money. "We have heard about fights against taxation without representation," said Mr. Lyon, "but ours is not taxation but confiscation from the standpoint of the Government." This came after a reference by Mr. Lyon to the bill regarding power development at Niagara, the speaker advocating that the Chippewa develop ment be made a municipal project instead of a Provincial enterprise.

Hon. Mr. Lucas described Mr. Lyon's view as a total misunderstanding of the bill. He could not possibly, he said, have read the bill and then have made that statement.

Premier's Statement.

Mayor Duffus, Peterborough, was also anxious about the power development legislation, and Hon. Mr. Ferguson asked him if he had read the Premier's statement. Mayor Duffus replied he had, and the Minister, pursuing his cross-examination, asked: "Tell me this—is your understanding of the Prime Minister's statement that the Government will develop and it may hand over to the Hydro, the municipalities or anybody else in the future? Is that what it fairly says?

Mayor Duffus—Possibly.

Hon. Mr. Ferguson—No, positively.

Consult Stockholders.

Mr. Ryan, Guelph, thought the municipalities should have representation on the Commission. He considered the Government should consult the stockholders before it made radical changes.

Mr. Ellis, Berlin, said the municipalities felt something was being put over them.

Hon. Dr. Pyne said they looked upon the Hydro in this Province as the child of Sir James Whitney and his Government and that policy would go on to the end.

A Pro-Hydro Government.

Hon. Howard Ferguson assured the deputation that the Government was strongly pro-Hydro, and said Sir Adam Beck had attained for himself and his Government a position in the Province unprecedented. It had been suggested they were trying to put something over on somebody. That was not so. It was only reasonable to give the Government credit for common-sense. No Government, even from the political standpoint, could afford to do in this Province what was alleged, and this Government had no thought of doing it.

Hon. Mr. Lucas also remarked the Government was doing nothing against Hydro interests, and commented on the importance of the legislation limiting the water power for companies at Niagara, a matter which had not been referred to by the deputationists.

Name is Unpopular.

Hon. T. W. McGarry alluded to the friction which had arisen over Hydro accounts, and said the Hydro Commission was just as anxious for a solution as his department. The Prime Minister and he had asked the auditor to modify the language in which he was writing the report because of his attack upon the Hydro Commission. The name Comptroller did not come from his department, and Mr. McGarry hinted that Mr. Clancy, the Provincial Auditor, did not like the name. Nobody was trying to take away any power from the Hydro, and if after a year's trial it was found a change was desirable he would introduce legislation next year. He was willing that the municipalities have an auditor.

ROYAL COLONIAL INSTITUTE TO RECORD PATRIOTIC WORK

Citizens Can Assist in Compiling Details Regarding Assistance to Soldiers, Red Cross Work and Various Other Details Mentioned in the Appended Letter.

MR. DELA FOSSE ACTING

The Librarian of the Public Library is in receipt of the following letter from the Librarian of the Royal Colonial Institute. The letter speaks for itself. The Librarian will be grateful for any help that can be accorded in the way of obtaining all the information available in order to give the city and county of Peterborough as good a showing as possible in the forthcoming work. It is a well known fact that the city and county have, through various agencies, carried on a splendid work for the soldiers at the front as well as for the soldiers of the Allies, and it will no no harm to make that fact patent to the world. Information of all descriptions will be gladly welcomed and acknowledged.

Royal Colonial Institute,
Northumberland Avenue,
London W.C.,
March 20, 1916.

The Librarian, Public Library,
Peterboro, Ont.:

Dear Sir,—The Royal Colonial Institute is contemplating the publication at the conclusion of hostilities of a standard history of the part taken in the present war, and in former wars, by the British Overseas Dominions, Colonies and India. In conjunction with Mr. Montague Bell, the co-editor of United Empire, I have been deputed to arrange for the preliminary collection of materials.

It has occurred to me that in your official capacity as Librarian of the Peterboro Public Library, you may be in a position to afford us material help by indicating such local sources of information that will enable us to get mediate notice, and I venture to ask, on behalf of my colleague and myself, your kind co-operation in this matter.

We are specially anxious to receive information that will enable us to get into touch with the various philanthropic and other agencies which are engaged in the work of aiding overseas troops, in connection with Red Cross work, in providing comforts, and in every other way, and with such local societies as have been instrumental in helping in the formation of the different regimental units. If you can supply me with a list of such societies—and further, if you would send us copies of their reports, should you possess duplicates—we should be greatly obliged. It is, as you will realize, particularly difficult to get into touch with all these societies and agencies, and your co-operation in this respect would be a most valuable and much appreciated factor in conducing to the success of a series of volumes that is in contemplation.

We should be greatly obliged if you would be good enough to report to us, and if possible, to procure:

(1) Any locally published pamphlets or other material bearing on any aspect of the war.

(2) Any article in the local press of special interest in connection with the Overseas forces, their formation, the part they have taken in the war, etc.

(3) Any personal narratives that have appeared in the local press.

All such material would be carefully preserved here and eventually be placed in the Library of the Royal Colonial Institute, which contains a collection of over one hundred thousand books and pamphlets, and would be of the greatest value to future enquirers about the war. Such a collection, as you will realise, would be of permanent value and interest.

We feel sure that the work in which we are engaged will especially appeal to you and we therefore have little hesitation in asking your aid and co-operation.

Yours sincerely,
EVANS LEWIS,
Librarian.

NERVOUS?

Do You Brood?
Have Morbid Fears?
Toss in Your Sleep?

Your Condition Below Par and Must Be Built Up. Let Ferrozone Do It.

All the vital activities of the body are quickened into new vigour by Ferrozone, which contains all the constituents necessary to make nerve strength.

Its first action is upon digestion.

It stimulates the secretion of gastric juice, ensures perfect digestion and prepares the food so as to be easily assimilated.

Thus everything you eat is converted into nourishment that enriches the blood and lends new strength to the nerves.

By Ferrozone the mind is relieved of those brooding tendencies, of morbid unnatural fears, of unwillingness to concentrate attention on things that should be done.

Won't you try Ferrozone?

Won't you give it a chance to win you back to health; it will do it, just as it did for Mrs. Creighton Zinck of Palm St., Lunenburg, N.S., who says: "I want to give my experience with Ferrozone because I believe it will be of assistance to thousands of women who need it badly. I was very thin, run down in flesh and lacked colour. My nerves were in a dreadful state. If anything fell I would jump and start. At night I would suddenly wake up, heart palpitating and all keyed up. Ferrozone went right to work. It restored my poise and balance, gave me self-control, cured my nervousness. Ferrozone increased my appetite and my weight came up so fast that I simply didn't need to use it any longer. Eight boxes cured me."

Why Won't you use Ferrozone also, it certainly will do you good in many ways—sold by all druggists in 50c. boxes.

Grand Jury Has Report For the Court on April 25

(Havelock Standard)

On Monday afternoon a meeting was held at Havelock of the Grand Jury, appointed at the winter sitting of the Assize Court at Peterborough to look into and report on conditions in the northern townships of the County of Peterborough.

It has been stated that the frequency of crimes of a degenerating and immoral character, said to come out of this district, was on the increase, and that a state of affairs existed that was reprehensible in the most degree.

The matter was referred to in the address of Sir William Mulock, the presiding Judge, to the Grand Jury, and afterwards by the jury in making its presentment. During the interval before the next sitting of the Court, which opens on the 25th inst., considerable evidence and opinion has been collected and prepared for inspection. The Grand Jury met here on Monday, as stated, and reviewed what had been done. During an intelligent discussion suggestions were put forward and these will be crystallized in the form of a report to the Court.

It is hoped that what is offered will prove to be practical and to, at least, point out one way in which the evil complained of, may be lessened, if not entirely eradicated.

If there's room for more hair on your head we recommend Rexall "93" Hair tonic.

CONGRATULATIONS TO MR. D. O'CONNELL ON PROVINCIAL HONOR

Elected Bencher of Upper Canada Law Society and Received Compliments of Local Bar To-day

The election of Mr. Daniel O'Connell as a bencher of the Law Society of Upper Canada, was the subject of a very pleasing interchange of compliment and esteem at the opening of the County Court this morning, when Judge Huycke and members of the bar felicitated Mr. O'Connell upon the distinguished honour he had received in his appointment. In congratulating him, Judge Huycke said that it was not only a pleasure to himself, but he felt that it would be also shared by the people of this city and county. Mr. O'Connell was one of the five new members elected from the entire province. Their duties are to control and direct the affairs of the Law Society, also to deal with questions of education and the examination of and conferring the rights to practice law to those seeking admission to the Bar of Ontario. Mr. O'Connell's election was an honour to the city and to the local Bar as well as to himself.

"All will agree with me that the highest and best interests of the Bar will be conserved by Mr. O'Connell."

Mr. Peck and Capt. Burnham added their tributes to the Bencher-elect.

In replying Mr. O'Connell said he had been very much flattered by the very kind words addressed to him. He deeply appreciated the honour of being elected a bencher, but did not feel able to give adequate expression to his feelings. He had not sought the office, and for that reason the appointment was the more satisfactory. He was deeply indebted to the members of the Peterborough Bar. They had elected him as the representative from Peterborough, and had given him great and assiduous personal attention by canvass and otherwise, in short had done all that was possible to secure his election.

"The great honour and kindness they have done me has forever indebted me to them." Mr. O'Connell made a departure to speak of the effect of the bench in the administration of justice upon the affairs of the community. That the County of Peterborough was free from crime was due to the very prudent and judicious administration of justice on the part of Judge Huycke and the other gentlemen who had preceded him in the very dignified position he now occupies. Mr. O'Connell also spoke of the splendid spirit among the members of the Peterborough Bar. It is never necessary for one member to request of another to put his word in writing. His word is accepted as an absolute guarantee of good faith. The most remarkable trait of character in the local bar is the high sense of honour which Mr. O'Connell scored as a pleasing feature of the local members of the legal profession.

Arrest Follows The Death of Hon. Mr. Stratton

Nourishment Had Been Prohibited For Him For Many Days

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., April 19.—Hon. J. R. Stratton, of Peterborough, Ont., formerly a member of the Dominion Parliament, died here to-day after thirty-six days of fasting. Prof. K. Feige, under whose treatment Mr. Stratton is said to have been prohibited from receiving any nourishment but water, was arrested and held in $1,000 bail for alleged manslaughter.

Feige, it was testified at the Coroner's inquest by Mrs. Stratton and Mr. Stratton's nurse, had been treating Mr. Stratton since the middle of March. They said local physicians were called in last Friday, when Mr. Stratton had been hiccoughing for seventy-four hours. Mrs. Stratton said Feige endeavoured to stop the hiccoughs by tightening a belt around the patient's waist until he suffered so that she eased it to relieve his pain.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs." writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

Land Case Dismissed

Judge Huycke this morning dismissed the case of Harvey Township vs. Gates, Galvin, and deferred the argument regarding a counter claim for costs. The action arising on Mr. Galvin's right to a road through his property. Mr. O'Connell appeared for defendant and Mr. Peck for plaintiff.

RELIEF FUND MAY BE USED TO ASSIST THE BOYS BACK FROM FRONT

Soldiers' Aid Commission Asks For Assistance and It Will Likely Be Granted—Over 600 Families Are Now Being Assisted by the Patriotic Fund

It is possible that some of the funds of the Peterborough Relief Association may be devoted to assisting the work of the Soldiers' Aid Commission. It will be remembered that when the first campaign for the Patriotic Fund was conducted in December, 1914, one fourth of the amount or about $15,000 was set aside for local relief independent of the Patriotic Fund proper. This money has not all been expended, and with the present conditions of affairs no assistance is required.

At the quarterly meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Patriotic Fund on Tuesday night Mr. E. F. Mason was present and made an appeal on behalf of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, suggesting that a portion of the Relief Association be set aside to assist the commission in looking after the returned soldiers. The boys who had come back from the front must be looked after and funds were needed. In many cases a short technical education would be necessary to fit the men for positions, Mr. Mason was sure that the donations to the funds of the Relief Association would favour an appropriation in aid of the returned soldiers.

Ald. Stratton, president of the Soldiers' Aid Association, told of the work of that body who were doing their best to see that proper care was being taken of the boys who were back.

Among others who took part in the discussion were Messrs. G. H. Logie, J. A. Aylmer, R. Harstone, and Adjutant McElheney.

On the suggestion of Mayor Duffus a special meeting will be held next Tuesday night in the Council Chamber to approve of a grant to the Soldiers' Aid Commission.

Representatives of the latter will meet the Relief Association to-night and decide on the amount.

Mayor Duffus presided. After reading of the minutes of the last meeting the report of the executive officer was read.

Executive Officer's Report.

During the interval since the last meeting affairs of the branch have been administered with care and diligence. The onerous duty of making and supervising the collection of the amounts so generously devoted to the purposes of the fund by our citizens, and by the gift from the City Council, has evolved largely, if not entirely on the senior trustee, Mr. J. A. Aylmer. His service has been invaluable, and is given assiduously and freely with marked efficiency. The amount taken in, so far, will be found in his report.

With the fairly rapid enlistment of February and March, many more families have been placed on the fund, with the result that the monthly disbursement has reached between $6,000 and $7,000. This amount does not even fairly represent the call that will presently be made on the fund. Very many of the men recently enlisted are being boarded at their homes, both in the city and at points throughout the country. When these come to go into barracks, or leave the district, the fund will be required to commence paying allowances. In such event we may anticipate a monthly list approaching $8,000.

Late in March came a request from the adult department of the Canadian Patriotic Fund at Ottawa, that the branch should forward as speedily as possible, a statement of the total contributions received by the branch, and forwarded to Ottawa, up to March 31 inclusive. Also a statement of amounts supplied to the branch from Ottawa for distribution and expense purposes. And, as well, a statement of amounts disbursed, month by month, both to families and for expense.

This statement was at once prepared by your trustees, the auditor and executive officer, and forwarded. A copy of this statement is attached to this report.

The affairs of the Peterborough Relief Association are of only trifling significance. With the exception of a few very special cases, no relief at all is being distributed. The state of employment in the city warrants the closing up of this fund, so far as assistance is concerned.

During 1915, anticipating that the unemployment situation might again intervent, and that the relief fund might be called on to dispense fuel, as before, the committee purchased, at a favourable price, a quantity of wood. This has since been disposed of and the money received returned to the fund.

Soldiers' Aid Commission.

It may be noted that in addition to the details of the Patriotic Fund the office has taken over the work of the local branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission. This branch has been regularly organized, with an energetic committee and officers, and the records are being carefully compiled. The records are very full and illuminative, kept thoroughly up to date; and the status and being of the returned men closely watched and recorded. It is anticipated that in the future these particulars will have considerable value, and especially so if readily accessable. Much has already been accomplished in the way of finding places and employment for those able and willing to accept the same. While the duty of looking after the welfare of these men is a duty that as a whole will fall on the people at large, the local branch is assuming the work and endeavouring to have it faithfully performed. From time to time publicity will be made as to what is being done. So far it is gratifying to find that without exception employers are more than wiling to make room for men, and that very much more in the way of places and positions are available, than men can be found to fill.

During the month of March arrangements were completed and the work of the Norwood branch was taken over by Peterborough branch. Details are now being arranged for the taking over of the branch of Havelock, thus consolidating in one branch the interests of the city and county. This will make for greater accuracy in carrying on the work, which grows more complicated as the number increases. The April list will show over 600 families to care for, and with the Havelock branch will reach nearly 700.

While some adverse criticism is offered from time to time as to the work of the distribution committee of the local Patriotic Fund, on the whole it may be said that great good is being accomplished and that the regulation and distribution is satisfactory.—Respectfully.

F. H. Dobbin,
Secretary and Executive Officer.

BOARD OF WORKS WILL MAKE ANNUAL TRIP OF INSPECTION

Local Concern Seeks Permission to Construct Approach Into Newly Established Factory---Thirteen Residents Sign a Petition For Oil on George Street South--Illuminated Refuse Boxes Will Be Placed on the Streets.

The annual excursion of the Board of Works Department of the City Council is slated to take place within the course of the next few days. At a meeting of the Board held last evening a number of items were left over pending the annual trip of inspection in which the Board and City Engineer Parsons will participate.

Alderman McIntyre, chairman of the Board, introduced a small budget of pressing necessities. This included a sidewalk or two in East City, repairs to Park street in the vicinity of the De Laval factory, a plank sidewalk leading into the premises of Mr. Payne at the corner of London and Waterford streets, and also the matter of closing Mill street in return for a right-of-way across the dam controlled by the Peterborough Hydraulic Company. All of these, together with a number of other matters will be included in the annual jaunt.

A Temporary Approach.

Ex-Mayor Buller appeared before the Board with the request that the newly formed local company, whose chief product is a dustless sweeper for use on the paved streets, be given permission to construct a cement approach to the building occupied by them at the southwest corner of Brock and Water streets. This the Board declined when it was learned that the approach would project out on the sidewalk to the extent of three or four feet. Permission will be granted the Company to construct a temporary approach which can be taken in and out as required. The approach is necessary in order to get the three-ton tractors in and out of the building.

Repairs to Road.

According to Mr. W. H. Taylor, Monaghan Road south of Charlotte street is in a very bad condition. Mayor Duffus said that this was a joint proposition between the city and the township adjoining, while City Engineer Parsons reminded the Board that the Street Railway had an interest in the matter. The Engineer was asked to take the matter up with all the parties concerned and report back to the Board.

The Reeve of the township of Douro will be invited to meet the Board with a view of discussing the question of repairs to the boundary road. The City Engineer was also authorized to make repairs to the road leading to the Isolation Hospital.

An Unlucky Number.

A request for oil or water on George street south of Romaine street, was left over for the annual inspection. The petition embodying the request was signed by thirteen persons. Alderman Weir was of the opinion that the streets that were oiled last year would require a smaller amount this year. He thought that the streets should be thoroughly swept before the oil was applied. Alderman Weir quoted Mr. J. C. Sullivan of East City as authority for the statement that one application of oil would be sufficient if the streets were properly swept and cleaned before the oil was applied. So convinced was he of this effect that he was willing to pay for any extra oil that might be needed.

The Great Northwestern Telegraph Company are seeking permission to cut down a number of trees on Bethune street between Wolfe and Townsend streets on the grounds that they interfered with the wires, and also jeopardized the lives of brakemen travelling on the trains; and also passengers, who anxious to catch a glimpse of this fair city, were wont to hang their heads out of the car windows. This matter will figure in the annual inspection.

Refuse Boxes.

Permission has been granted to the National Advertising Company to place two illuminated refuse boxes on the city streets as an experiment. One will be placed on the northeast corner of Brock and George streets, and the other at the northeast corner of George and Charlotte streets.

Arrangements will be made to have the township Council of Smith meet representatives of the Board of Works in respect to an account dealing with the maintenance of boundary roads. The amount demanded by the township for the city's share of the work is one hundred and ninety-seven dollars, while the city has a claim against the township amounting to two hundred and sixty-one dollars. The township authorities dispute one-half of this account. The matter will be threshed out at a later date.

Will Pay Account.

A bill presented by Mr. R. J. G. Sutherland for work done in connection with an obstruction in a sewer at the residence of Mrs. Davidson, 648 Water street will be paid. The cost of the work is eight dollars and ten cents. It is claimed that the obstruction was due to a settling in the main sewer.

E. Gaskins, 485 Rogers street, claims the sum of forty dollars as damages due it is alleged, to the spring floods which swept over the property. The Board will inspect the property.

Will Remove Tree.

Mr. R. Turner was given permission to remove a tre from in front of his residence on Gilmour street providing he replaces it under the supervision of the City Engineer. The present tree will be removed to facilitate the construction of a driveway into his residence.

Similar permission was granted to Mrs. Haywood, corner of Benson and Aberdeen streets.

VETERAN OF THE CRIMEAN WAR WILL BE EIGHTY-ONE ON MONDAY

Mr. Thos. Doman of Lakefield Took Part in the Siege of Sebastapool—Was in British Army Ten Years.

ENJOYING GOOD HEALTH

Mr. Thos. Doman of Lakefield who with his wife, has been spending the winter months with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wheeler, on the Norwood Road, celebrates his eighty-first birthday month, and is still enjoying good health. Mr. and Mrs. Doman returned to their home in Lakefield a few days ago, where they have been residents for many years.

Mr. Doman is a veteran of the Crimean War and served in the regular British army for ten years. He tells some interesting experiences of his life in the Crimea. He was born in Warminster, Wiltshire, England, and at the age of seventeen went to Salisbury where he joined the regulars. A short time after his regiment was sent to the Island of Malta, in November of 1854, they were sent to the Crimea and were there until the war ended. He arrived at the scene of action, three days after the battle of Inkerman, but took part in the long seige of Sebastapool. In an engagement known as the Battle of the Quarries, leading up to the storming of Sebastapool the enemy came out in thousands. It was one of the hottest encounters of the war. The British went in 800 strong but at roll call next day only fifty answered. The last fortifications of the town were taken in September, 1855.

Mr. Doman also observed in Ireland and at Halifax, Nova Scotia. On the occasion of the visit of the late King, Edward VII. to Canada he acted as orderly for him.

TRIED TO LOAD BAD GOODS ON THE GOVERNMENT

OTTAWA, April 18.—Testifying to-day before the Davidson Royal Commission, Col. Mullin gave a detailed description of cases that had come to his notice in the west, where contractors had attempted to unload goods on the Government. He had only had trouble with a few contractors. Beef had been exchanged for liver at Calgary. They had had a lot of trouble with butter. Good butter was now being imported from the east in many cases. In one case short weight coal was delivered. Asked why he had not reported any of these matters to Ottawa, Colonel Mullins said that they were small affairs, and he believed in straightening out troubles himself wherever he could.

One sergeant had reported to him that since the coal was weighed his unit had not burned anything like as much. He himself discovered that jam of an inferior quality had been served out to troops in Victoria. Quite a lot of rough bacon was offered to units, but it had always been turned back. In relation to poor quality hay, a lot of trouble was met with when hay was scarce. Contractors frequently had themselves to combat attempts at passing poor stuff on them. He had found one consignment of meat with the flesh only one inch from the bones instead of four. Bread weighed at Victoria had been found short.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. If the kidneys fail you are poisoned. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

Dandruff Soon Ruins The Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

A new recruiting "stunt" was introduced by the 93rd Battalion last night when Capt. Widdifield, Lieut. Stock and Sergt. Webb of the 93rd addressed a street meeting at the corner of George and Simcoe street. The speakers and the battalion bugle band occupied a bus and after a preliminary tour of George street the meeting was commenced about 8 o'clock. Capt. Widdifield briefly but forcibly discussed the general war situation and the aspects of local recruiting and Sergt. Webb told the crowd some plain facts Sergt. Webb who was at the front with the Princess Pats and who was invalided home has given up a good position to go back to the front. Capt. Widdifield said that it was a shame that a man wh had done his bit nad to go back and fight again and a bigger shame that he should have to get out and beg for recruits.

WILL CELEBRATE.

OTTAWA, April 19.—Flags will fly at the masthead on every public building in Canada on April 22, 23 and 24, and every Canadian is invited to join on those days in commemorating the gallant achievements of the Dominion troops at the second battle of Ypres.

A resolution commending the proposal so to celebrate the historic event of a year ago was introduced in the Commons to-day, supported by eloquent speeches by the Prime Minister and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and passed unanimously. The resolution reads:

"This House desires to place on record its admiration and pride in the valor and heroism displayed by the Canadian Expeditionary Forces at the front, and its profound appreciation of their services to Canada and the Empire. The spirit which animates the Canadian people in this conflict has found its highest expression in the achievements of the Canadians upon the battlefields of France and Belgium, and, as the anniversary draws near to the first great test to which the Canadian troops were subjected, and in which they so splendidly distinguished themselves, it is fitting that there should be a suitable commemoration throughout the Dominion of the service thus rendered to the Empire, to the allied nations, and to the world. This House commends the proposal that on the 22nd, 23rd and 24th of this month flags should be flown at the head of all public buildings throughout the Dominion, and that the Canadian people be invited to commemorate the momentous events of a year ago in token of Canada's determination to do her part until the efforts of our Empire and the allied nations shall have been crowned by an honourable and lasting peace."

The men of the 93rd Battalion are getting their first practice in fixing and unfixing bayonets, these days. A supply of Ross bayonets has been issued to some of the men and yesterday, for the first time, the sentries marched up and down with fixed bayonets.

The number of 93rd men who have gone out to the assistance of the farmers of the district was augmented to-day, when another squad left. They will report back on May 5th, unless sent for sooner.

Lieut.-Col. Johnston, Officer Commanding the 93rd Battalion, opened the bazaar being conducted by the Wives' and Mothers' Club. In the course of a brief address to the ladies, Col. Johnston commended the work of the ladies and said he would always be willing to assist in any work they might undertake on behalf of the boys at the front.

Sergt. Peter Victor of the 2nd Battalion, the first Peterborough man to be wounded in the present war, is expected home shortly. Sergt. Victor arrived at St. Johns on Tuesday night and will likely be here in a day or so.

Sergt. James Hawthorne of the 93rd Battalion, has received word that his son, Pte. Hawthorne of the 18th Battalion, formerly of the 39th Battalion, has been invalided to England and has been admitted to hospital suffering from a slight attack of nephritis.

Clark A. Thackeray, of the Quaker Oats Office, was to-day presented with a wrist watch by his fellow members of the staff, Mr. Denham making the presentation. Mr. Thackeray leaves on Monday to join the Cobourg Heavy Siege Gun Battery.

Premier Borden's figures in the House of Commons yesterday make interesting reading. From Jan. 1st of this year up to last Saturday the total enlistment in Canada was 362,458, or an average of 1,615 for every recruiting day. The total enlistment in Canada from the first of the war until last Saturday was 309,616. The figures for the first three and a half months of this year are as follows:

January—29,312.
February—83,856.
March—32,705.
April (two weeks)—13,880.

Ontario leads in the total enlistment with 128,656, having recruited 46,838 since January 1st. The Eastern Ontario district has enlisted 32,841, or slightly more than the whole of Quebec.

UNION GOOD FRIDAY SERVICES AT TRINITY CHURCH

Where should the Christian people of Peterborough be found on Good Friday at three o'clock? Surely there is only one answer. On that day and at that hour there should be a Union meeting of all Christian people for the purpose of remembering the death of our Lord.

This has been arranged. On Friday all the Protestant churches of this city will be united in a suitable service in the New Trinity Church on Rubidge Street at the head of Simcoe street.

Music of a suitable character will be furnished by a choir representing all the congregations of the city. Two brief addresses will be delivered by ministers of denominations other than that of the Church in which the meeting is held, and the gathering will be dismissed at four o'clock. An appeal is made to the members of all churches to set a good example to others by arranging that this one hour shall be consecrated to this solemn purpose.

Arrangements will be made to increase the seating capacity of Trinity Church if necessary to insure the comfort of all who attend.

M. Pappas Honorably Discharged After Perjury Hearing

The case against M. Pappas, on the charge of perjury, was tried at the County Court Judges' Criminal Court yesterday.

Charles Boukydis, of the City of Toronto, had sued Pappas on a note for $2,700.00, which apparently was dated September 30th, 1914. In the course of the civil proceedings, Pappas was examined under oath in respect of the note, and swore that he had given this note on September 30 1911, and that was the proper date of it, and that the date had been subsequently changed. He further swore that a settlement had been arrived at between him and Boukdis after the note was given and which disposed of it.

Gust Boukydis, a brother of Chas Boukydis, then laid an information against Pappas, charging him with perjury. Gust Boukydis and Charles Boukydis, called as witnesses by the prosecution, swore that Pappas signed the note in Toronto on the 30th day of September, 1914. For the Defence, several lawyers of this city were called who gave evidence that they had business dealings with Pappas at Peterborough on the 30th of September, 1914, and consequently that he could not be in Toronto on that date. Other witnesses were also called for the defence, who stated that Pappas was in Peterborough on the day preceding the 30th of September and several days afterwards. An expert in hand-writing was called for the defence who examined the note under a magnifying glass, and showed to the court that the note had been practically retraced in differently coloured ink from that in which it was originally written, and stated that in his opinion the date had been changed.

A hand-writing expert was also called for the prosecution, who also stated that the note had been retraced, but that he thought it was originally dated 1914.

Mr. Cook was finally called on behalf of the Defence, who swore that he was a clerk at the Dominion Bank here from the 1st of January, 1911 to the month of August, 1912, and that during that time he filled up several promissory notes for Pappas that he filled up the note in question and upon the date which it bore, namely the 30th of September, 1911.

At the conclusion of the evidence, Mr. O'Connell, who represented the defence, and Mr. Peck, who represented the prosecution, summed up the evidence, and addresse the Court at considerable length, the case being concluded, after lasting all day, at eleven o'clock yesterday evening.

At the conclusion of the addresses of the counsel the Judge, in delivering his judgment, said that he would refrain from making any comments on the case, other than were absolutely necessary, as the civil action was still pending. After a review of the evidence he informed Mr. Pappas that he was honourably discharged.

Tobacco Heart
CURED BY
Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Trent Valley Bill Passed

The resolution authorising the issuing of $8,300,000 was taken up at the night session of the House. Hon Mr. Ferguson explained that payment for the system was being made in 10-year bonds, which at the end of that time could be refunded and a new issue for 40 years made. The Government, until such time as it could be fitted into the whole Hydro system, would run the Trent system. The municipalities would be required to pay for the first ten years only enough to meet interest on the investment, in addition to operating charges, etc. Then the system would be dealt with as provided under the general Hydro scheme.

Mr. Rowell found fault with the fact that no information had been presented to the House as to the value of the different properties.

Mr. Ferguson replied that he had had no engineers' reports. He had discussed the whole matter with the Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission and the engineers, and with their approval had relied upon the knowledge and information of the hydro engineers who had some time ago investigated at great length and in great detail every asset the companies had.

Mr. Rowell persisted. If the Minister had relied upon the commissioners' engineers then he should have had Sir Adam Beck in the House to deal with it.

"It is a matter of comment in the press and the province that the man who has been most closely associated with these matters is not in the House when any of these bills is under consideration."

When the resolution had been disposed of the House proceeded with the second reading of the bill. Mr Rowell at once set out upon a lengthy condemnation of the Government's plan to take control of the system.

pare with this system to the municipalities the Government under this bill can control and operate through any person it may name," he said Reading from the bill Mr. Rowell contended that it did not specifically provide for turning the system over to the Hydro-Electric Commission in spite of what the House had been led to believe. The bill allowed the Government to name any officer to administer the system.

Hn. Mr. Ferguson explained that there were complicated matters to be dealt with, and that it was necessary to have the widest possible legislation.

"I cannot conceive how my honourable friend has got it in his mind that we will not turn this over to the commission. hTe purpose and intention of the Government is that the Hydro-Commission should take the whole control and management of this whole proposition," he said.

Mr. Rowell replied that if this was the fact it should be so provided in the bill. The Liberal leader referred to the apparent lack of harmony between the commission. The purpose and in and declared that the House was entitled to a statement of their relations.

"I cannot let that go," retorted the Minister. "My honourable friend has endeavoured to set himself up as the friend of the Hydro against the Government that created the Hydro, that has stood behind Sir Adam Beck, and will stand behind him."

Mr. Ferguson explained that the Hydro and the electrical companies were not able to get together, and that he had been asked to do his best to get control of this power monopoly. "I went in simply as an auxiliary to the Hydro, if you like, to get hold of it and turn it over to the Hydro to manage and control, he said.

Hon. I. B. Lucas followed this up by informing the House that already the Hydro-Commission was at work upon the matter. The full commission has held a two-hour session discussing problems arising out of the purchase.

When the Liberals pressed for details, Hon. Mr. Lucas informed the House that the purchase at the price stated was directly approved by Sir Adam Beck. He said the $8,350,000 represented the actual investment in the properties, and the commission's approval of the purchase was backed up by information gathered by the Hydro engineers at a cost of $15,000.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

LACROSSE

The lacrosse fans of Campbellford at an enthusiastic meeting elected their officers for the ensuing year. Dick Cole has again been elected manager, with L. A. Betts, Secretary and Chas. Davidson, Treasurer. The prospects for lacrosse are so good in Campbellford this year, that they will enter two teams in the O.A.L.A. an intermediate and a juvenile, and they already have visions of championship honors.

The O.A.L.A. annual meeting will be held in Toronto as usual on Good Friday.

The prospects for lacrosse in this section are not nearly as bright as last year. In the east district we do not know of a single town that will be in line this year. In this district Campbellford and Hastings will enter intermediate and juvenile teams. Norwood will again enter their juveniles but Havelock will be out of it altogether.—Havelock Standard.

Meeting of Peterborough Lacrosse Club

A meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club was held last evening in the King George Hotel. Pte. Edward Dillon, of the 93rd Battalion, and a prominent member of the Club, was in the chair. The members discussed the season's prospects, and among other things passed a resolution of condolence respecting the late Harry Gillman, whose death occurred in Toronto. The annual meeting of the Club will be held on Tuesday in the King George Hotel. All those interested in lacrosse are asked to be present.

When pouring hot jelly or fruit into glass jars set the jars first on a damp cloth. This will go a long way towards preventing their breaking.

Ploughing in Peterboro' County

It Will Be a Week or Two Before Seeding Becomes General—The Labour Problem

So far to date very little spring work has been done on the farms in Peterborough county. Except on the high land only a small acreage of land has been ploughed, and it will be a week of ten days before seeding becomes general. While an extra early spring is not looked for, the farmers are hopeful of fine weather after the present unsettled conditions have passed over.

The Labour Problem.

The labour problem has reached an acute stage on the farm, and a large number of farmers are confronted with the prospect of handling the work alone. This will mean less acreage and a consequent decrease in production. The situation has been partly met by the action of the military authorities in permitting enlisted men to go on the farm for short periods during the rush season.

Bench and Bar Honour Memory

almost every one in the county of Peterborough. He possessed that quality which got him on terms of friendship with almost every one he came in contact. He had more warm friends in his community than any other man in Canada had in his."

Mr. O'Connell referred to the honour Mr. Stratton attained in his prominent position in the Cabinet and in his office had proved the most efficient Minister for many years. His successes in business were also referred to, and, in conclusion, Mr. O'Connell said that in Mr. Stratton's death there had passed a sterling friend and one of the most prominent figures the county of Peterborough had ever known.

Captain J. H. Burnham, entering the Court during Mr. O'Connell's address, said he had received notice of the occasion only a few minutes previously, and had hastened to express his appreciation of the good qualities of the late lamented representative of this riding. He had been kindly and sympathetic to everyone, and his good deeds would live after him.

SOME FINE BEEF FOR EASTER TRADE

Some of us fast during Lent—some of us don't, but all will agree that Peterborough homes may enjoy all the primest of meats this Easter. Some of the choicest that will leave a lingering memory of juicy, delicate toothsomeness will come from Alex Gordon's meat market, George Street. Four head of Polled Angus cattle, consisting of two young heifers, not quite two years old, and two others, just turning two years, were purchased from Mr. David Dodds of South Monaghan, for his Easter trade, and weighed 3,200 pounds of dressed meat. These specimens of fine feeding are on the hooks for Easter consumption, and should please the taste of the most Epicurean meat eater.

Ladies Will Again Collect Old Papers and Magazines

The Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham remind the public of another collection to be made of old papers and magazines for Red Cross purposes. Everyone is asked to save them and they will be gathered up early next month.

Fine Meetings For St. Julien Celebration

There will be five meetings at once on Sunday in commemoration of the bravery of the Canadians in the battle of St. Julien. Five platforms will be erected at Central Park, and from each of these there will be three addresses. The speakers will be Jos. Wearing, Dan. O'Connell, Adjutant McElhiney, Lt.-Col. Stevenson, G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., R. R. Hall, Mayor Duffus, Lt.-Col. Miller, and five of the city clergy. The meetings will commence at 4 o'clock, and the Sunday School children of the city will march to the Park. Three bands, the 93rd, the Temple Band and the band of the 57th Regiment will provide music.

When cleaning windows in cold weather add a dessertspoonful of salt to the water. This prevents the glass from freezing and cracking.

The young couple were unattended. Immediately after the ceremony a dainty wedding supper was prepared for a host of friends.

Allied Aeroplanes Drop Bombs on Sofia

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, April 22.—An enemy aeroplane bombarded Sofia yesterday for the first time since the beginning of the war, according to an official despatch. A school and cottage were damaged, but there were no casualties.

The raiding aviator probably flew from the Anglo-French front in northern Greece, a distance of about 110 miles and return.

Field Marshall Von Der Goltz is Dead

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, April 22.—An official wireless from Berlin to-day confirms the story that Field Marshal Von Der Goltz died of spotted typhus on Wednesday at the headquarters of the Turkish army, after an illness of ten days.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which then assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—There is a verse in the 42nd chapter of Isaiah which has caused me some thought lately: "Seeing many things, but thou observest not; opening the ears, but he heareth not." I should like to emphasise the fact that last Good Friday in Toronto, with the saloons closed, only three arrests were made for drunkenness, as against one hundred and fifteen the previous year, when the saloons were open. This is something to observe at this Easter time, and I should like the married men of your readers to observe there is a better way for those who drink suggested than taking your money to the tavern. Start a saloon in your own house. Be the only customer. You will have no license to pay. Go to your wife and give her $2.00 to buy a gallon of whisky, and remember there are sixty-nine drinks in a gallon. Buy your drinks from no one but your wife, and by the time the first gallon is gone she will have $8.00 to put in the bank and two dollars to start business again. Now observe what this will amount to at your own reckoning. One plea recently made against prohibition in Ontario is that it would mean a loss to those engaged in the traffic of some two hundred million dollars. Consider how they make it.

Consider there was one man who said, I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course. I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness. 2nd Timothy, 4th chap., 6th to 8th verses.

Will the liquor business help to make an expression of that kind?

Now consider some great truths given to us by the poet:

How lost was my condition
Till Jesus made me whole.
There is but one physician
Can save a sin-sick soul.

Next door to death he found me,
And snatched me from the grave,
To tell to all around me
His wondrous power to save.

The worst of all diseases
Is light compared to sin;
On every part is seizes,
But rages most within.

'Tis palsy plague and fever
And madness all combined,
And none but a believer
The least relief can find.

Some men great skill professing,
Had thought a cure to gain,
But this proved more distressing,
And added to my pain.

At length this great physician,
How matchless is His grace,
He took away my trouble,
And undertook my case.

First gave me sight to see Him,
For sin my eyes had sealed;
Then bade me look unto Him,
I looked and I was healed.

For there's a balm in Gilead
To make the wounded whole,
There is power enough in Jesus
To heal the sin-sick soul

ANXIETY OVER FATE OF SHACKLETON PARTY

Considerable anxiety has been occasioned by news to the effect that the expedition has met with a mishap. The position is not yet clear owing to conflicting reports, but apparently the "Aurora" broke away from her winter quarters while about ten members of her party were ashore. For over ten weeks it seems the vessel drifted without injury, but eventually she got nipped by the enormous ice pressure, lost her rudder and got her hull badly strained. It was not until she had drifted 1,500 miles that the vessel got free of the ice. She is now proceeding under her own steam to New Zealand, where it is expected she will arrive about the middle of April.

What has happened to Sir Ernest Shackleton is not yet known. In some quarters it is conjectured that he may have encountered bad conditions, and been obliged to abandon his Ross Sea scheme and return to the Weddell Sea base. In other circles, however, it is thought that he may have linked up with the shore parties from the "Aurora." In any case the whole expedition will probably suffer from lack of clothing. It is believed, however, that they will have ample supplies of food, considerable stores having been left at the Scott Expedition Headquarters.

The "Endurance" is due to return to Buenos Ayres immediately, and until she arrives, or it is known that Sir Ernest is returning on her, no definite arrangements can be made to organize any form of relief.

"LASHT BUN" YOU'RE OLD.

Professor Says When "Call of Spree" Quits Youth is Gone.

When you lean up against a post and stutter, "my lasht bun," then you're through. You're an old man. When the desire of going on a spree leaves the manly breast it's an indication the youthful age is over. That's what Dr. Allan Hoben, of Chicago University, said in St. Louis a few days ago.

The professor said there were other sprees besides the alcoholic variety—namely, the little boy's desire to tie a few cans on the family dog's tail, and imbibing a chocolate ice cream soda.

There are but two ages, young and old, Hoben declared, throwing Shakespeare's periods of discretion, injustice, etc., into the discard. There is no second childhood.

When you no longer feel the pangs of thirst or the dog tail, tin cans and chocolate sodas no longer inspire you, then you have reached your limit, be yours age 10 or 90.

American Business Men Are Leaving

Special to the Examiner:

THE HAGUE, Holland, April 22.—Many American business men in Germany have made preparations to wind up their affairs and leave within forty-eight hours' notice, if diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States are broken off.

This was learned to-day from the Holland branches of several American concerns doing business in Germany.

Excitement over the German-American situation has subsided noticeably since the first Dutch newspaper comment on the American note.

The feeling is growing here that Germany either will yield at once, or will manoeuvre matters in such a manner as to prevent an early break.

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription or the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any druggist under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

SHE WED AT GUN'S POINT.

Jersey Woman Asks Divorce From a Porto Rican.

Charging that she married last July under duress, Mrs. Anna May Storch-Rivera, of Paterson, N.J., has started suit here for an absolute divorce from her husband, Pastor Rivera, a Porto Rico tobacco commission merchant. She alleges that Rivera, when she refused his marriage proposal, grasped her arm, drew a revolver, and threatened to kill her unless she accompanied him to the registrar's office to be a marriage license, and also to the home of the Rev. A. J. Harkin, where they were married.

"The petitioner further deposes," says her petition, "that the marriage was never consummated, also charges that the respondent did exercise and exert a hypnotic spell over her when in her presence, during which he could compel her to do as he commanded."

When the silver maples begin to put forth their leaves and the 'catkins' appear on the willows and poplars, nature is indicating that the season is right for the planting of such vegetables as lettuce, onion seeds and onion sets, parsley, the round seeded peas, early Irish potatoes, radishes, spinach and turnips.

A Holstein cow on the Ontario Agricultural College (farm department) on March 8th, completed a new world's record for milk and butter-fat production. From March 9th 1915, to March 8th, 1916, she produced 20,072.2 pounds of milk, containing 819.95 pounds of butter-fat, equivalent to 1024.94 pounds of butter. This constitutes a record for cows milked just twice daily, for both milk and butter-fat.

Eating for Pleasure, Eating for Strength, are two distinct propositions—but both operations are combined in Shredded Wheat Biscuit, the food that is pleasing to the palate, that makes healthy tissue and gives strength to mind and body. It is what you digest, not what you eat, that nourishes the body. Every particle of Shredded Wheat Biscuit is taken up by the digestive organs and converted into muscle, bone and brain. HIS GLASS EYE IN PAIN Peculiar Mishap to it Affects Optic Nerves Intensely.

A very peculiar accident happened to O. R. McCooley of Wolsey, South Dakota. While walking with one of his customers, James L. Bayd, he suddenly threw his hands to one of his eyes which had been replaced with a glass one.

He exclaimed in great pain that something had hit him in the eye. He was nearly frantic for some time, when Dr. Gogswell was summoned, and the patient was removed to his office. After the pain was relieved the eye was removed, and it was discovered the back of the glass eyeball had broken and the vacuum from the hollow inside had drawn the optic nerve through the broken part, which caused intense pain.

The inside part of the eye is badly inflamed and it will necessitate the replacing of a new glass eye as soon as it has healed sufficiently.

ALLIES OUTBID UNCLE SAM.

British and French Agents Buy Horses Wanted by U.S. Govt.

The French and British Governments have outbid Washington for cavalry horses in this section, and American buyers have been forced to go into other fields for mounts, says a Grand Island, Neb., despatch.

Recently the United States army attempted to buy 700 cavalry horses on the market, the price fixed by the Government being $140 a head for all animals which passed inspection. The British and French Governments have been paying $165 for the same grade horses, and the American Government had no offering. The American inspectors withdrew their bid this week and left the Grand Island market in possession of the foreign buyers.

U-BOAT MEN EXPECT DEATH.

Prisoners Captured From German Submarine Look for Execution.

PARIS, France, April 22. — The men on the German submarine which was destroyed recently in French waters were marched through the streets of a French channel port a few days ago. They included two officers and about twenty sailors. Their appearance was one of utter desolation; they evidently knew what the allies think of submarine warfare and fully expected death within twenty-four hours. They walked as if it was to their execution.

The crowds which watched them from the curbs showed anything but sympathy for these German torpedoers, for the people of the channel towns cannot forget the horrors which the submarines continually perpetrate against civilian passengers and sailors.

To People Who Are Under Normal Weight

Good Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women Who Want to Put on Flesh

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs who having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness, and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination of assimilative agents has made fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also unequalled, judging from reports, for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion, and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable preparation is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing assimilative elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this preparation, which is endorsed and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A few weeks systematic use of Sargol should go far to produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying nourishing fats to the blood. If not, every druggist who sells it is authorized to return the purchase price. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are thus provided. All leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you, send $1.00 to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid.

While this new preparation has from reports given splendid results as a nerve tonic and vitaliser, its use is not recommended to nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

The ideal soil for roses should be cool, but well drained, deep and rich and if it is not this naturally, and there is no choice of sites, it should be made as nearly like this as possible.

There is little use in keeping an inferior dairy calf to the age of two or three years because it will generally cost more, especially when grain is very high in price (as it is now) to put meat on this wedge-shaped dairy carcass than it is worth.

MORE REINFORCEMENTS FOR THE PRINCESS PATS

Canadians, of whatever nationality, thrill as they recall the wonderful record made by the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry at Festubert, at Ypres, and many other battlefields in Belgium; how, in the face of overwhelming odds, they held their positions by their courage, steadiness and dogged perseverance.

For nearly a year the P.P.C.L.I. (as the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry is known in military circles) has been reinforced by a steady flow of recruits of the very finest of our Canadian manhood. These recruits, many now veterans, are determined that this fine battalion shall not lose its high record, but with their help shall have added honour and prestige in the future.

The reinforcements have been drawn from all over Canada, and the Universities of Canada have made this battalion their care. Already 1,350 officers and men have gone forward under the title of the Universities Companies and are doing their "bit" at the front or at Shorncliffe. Five Universities Companies have left Canada.

The number of men volunteering from the West has been simply wonderful. So much so, that the authorities of the Western Canadian Universities decided to send overseas a battalion composed of students of the Western Universities and members of the teaching staff. This battalion is now recruiting and is called the 196th Western Universities Battalion, C.E.F.

The object of the Western Universities Battalion and of the Universities Companies is the same in that it provides a means for men to get to the front in congenial company, but though their paths are parallel, they are not identical in this respect. The Western Universities Battalion is for overseas service as a battalion, and the Universities Companies are reinforcing the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

The P.P.C.L.I. is now composed mainly of men from the Universities Companies, and the steady flow of reinforcements for this battalion must not be allowed to stop, and, further, the standard of the recruits must always be the "best that Canada can offer."

There are many men of the University type whose hearts grow warm as they read and hear the name of the Princess Pat's, for they have brothers, relatives and friends in it, and they wish they could have an opportunity of joining it. To these men the news that a Sixth Company is being recruited under Major McGergow, at McGill University in Montreal, will be welcome.

The Sixth Company is in comfortable quarters at McGill University, and has all the advantages of the use of the McGill Campus and the University building, including the McGill Students' Union.

The Universities' Companies have been almost overwhelmed with the hospitality of the residents of Montreal and its suburbs.

The training of the companies has been of an exceptionally efficient character, and has been of a nature to develop specialists, some at musketry, others at signalling, others at tactical exercises, and again others in physical training, bayonet fighting and bombing.

The great advantage of these companies is that men of the same social status go forward together, and join a battalion in which they will find a large number of congenial spirits. Another advantage is the rapidity with which they go forward to the front. The training in Montreal usually takes about three months, and after two months further training in England they take their place in the firing line, without unnecessary delay. The reason for this is the fact that these companies reinforce a battalion already at the front.

A considerable number of the men who have joined the Universities Companies have, upon reaching England, obtained commissions in the British and Canadian units. It is, of course, impossible to make any guarantee as to promotion of this character, but the nature of the training received and the reputation of the Universities Companies make the chances of promotion excellent for the type of men that the Universities Companies accept.

Intending recruits are examined locally by an army medical officer, receive their transportation to Montreal, and immediately obtain their uniform, and start their training without delay. Readers are invited to make known to their friends this opportunity. The Officer Commanding, 6th O.S. Universities Company, McGill University, Montreal, will be glad to supply any further information that may be required.

ALLEGED SON OF WEALTHY BRITON IS A FOUNDLING

LONDON, April 19.—"Teddy" Slingsby, a bright, curly headed chap of 5, is a changeling, like you read of in books, but seldom find in life. So the British Court of Appeals has decided. He is not the son of Mrs. C. Slingsby, wife of a British naval officer, although Mrs. Slingsby, who is supported by her husband, claims he is.

He will not fall heir, upon the death of Commander Slingsby, to estates in the county of Yorkshire which yield $45,000 a year. Instead they will go to Commander Slingsby's brothers, who questioned Teddy's legitimacy.

A lower court made a decision favorable to the child. Now it has been upset by the Court of Appeals. There is one last resort, appeal to the house of lords.

STRANGEST CASE ON RECORD

The history of English courts which is replete with weird cases brought by a race which loves to "go to law" furnishes no case stranger than that of "the Slingsby baby."

To-day Teddy is a national figure, despite the engrossing conflict across the way, and there is much popular sympathy for him. There is even more for his father.

From the finding of the court is shown that not only did Mrs. Slingsby attempt to deceive all others but she actually did deceive her husband who believed Teddy was his own son. Instead the courts find he was a baby adopted by Mrs. Slingsby in San Francisco, whither she had gone from Vancouver, where the Slingsby's then lived.

This was in 1910. Her claims of having given birth to a son were suspected by the family in England and they started an investigation in California to get certain facts and a suit was instituted in the British courts contesting Teddy Slingsby's legitimacy.

SCULPTOR SEES RESEMBLANCE

The most remarkable feature of this remarkable case was the action taken by Justice Bargrave Deane in the Probate court, where the decision was in favor of the child. Conflicting testimony had been given. Justice Deane had listened for days to the complicated case.

There was noticeable a distinct resemblance between the child and both his father and mother. The judge summoned to court Sir George Frampton, one of England's greatest sculptors.

The judge had Sir George study the child and his reputed father and mother. The judge told the sculptor nothing of his own beliefs in the matter.

Sir George made a careful study and found not only a decided physiological resemblance between the lad and Commander Slingsby, but also a "most extraordinary resemblance between the little boy's left ear and Mrs. Slingsby's.

HIGHER COURT REVERSES DECISION.

That had much to do with the favorable decision of the judge. He said that "the facts were sufficiently conclusive, but the other matter (that of the resemblance) was absolutely conclusive."

The higher court did not agree. The three judges who gave a unanimous decision against the child all threw out Sir George Frampton's testimony, principally because Sir George was brought into the case in an irregular way, did not give his testimony on oath, and because resemblances were uncertain things anyway. It was held that this resemblance did not outweigh the evidence in the other direction.

It has been a little more than a year since the decision given in the lower court.

The evidence, most of which was obtained in San Francisco makes a number of huge volumes. The cost of getting it all falls on Commander Slingsby, the deceived husband.

He must pay his own lawyers and also those of his brothers, who brought the case into the court and who have now won it.

DOCTOR GIVES EVIDENCE.

Mrs. Slingsby claims the child was born at Mrs. Blain's flat in McAllister street, San Francisco on September 1, 1910.

The other side declared the child was actually born in the surgery of a Dr. Fraser, in Chinatown and that the mother was not Mrs. Slingsby, but a woman called Anderson.

Dr. Fraser turned on Mrs. Slingsby. He said she had obtained the child from his surgery and also that he had been induced by Mrs. Slingsby to make a false return, substituting the name of Slingsby in the birth certificate for that of Anderson.

Other evidence was given showing that Mrs. Slingsby in October went to the registry office and obtained a copy of the birth certificate, and also induced a woman there to change the address of the birthplace from Chinatown to McAllister street.

ADMITS SEEING BABY BOY

But the thing which has told most against Mrs. Slingsby is an advertisement which appeared in a San Francisco newspaper, first on Aug. 24 and for several days afterwards. It said: "Wanted to adoption, a natural born infant. Must be boy."

It was charged that Mrs. Slingsby inserted this advertisement and that through it she got in touch with Dr. Fraser, who found the child for her. Later she confesses the advertisement was hers. She declared, however, that she was determined to have a child, and that she advertised for one only for the contingency that the one she expected should die.

There is room for one more appeal, the final court in the house of lords. It is doubtful if it would be successful. The success of the Slingsby child's case in the first trial was largely due to the presence of the child in court, and the resemblance he showed to his father and mother.

Neither he nor his mother appeared at the second trial, and it will be impossible for them to be before the house of lords, for there the case will be tried only on points of law with no new evidence permitted.

Commander Slingsby listened to the decision of the judges in the Court of Appeals. The decision meant that he was practically ruined, for the costs he must pay will be enormous.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hins, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

To Get More Light.—Out of respect to the new lighting restrictions in many cases the hour of evening service has been shifted to the afternoon. In a country church near Glasgow a service has been held on Sabbath afternoon at 4:30 instead of, as formerly, at 6.30. The minister of the parish, meeting one of his old parishioners, questioned him as to what he thought about the change of hour. "Oh, I dinna think ye need ha'e fashed yersel' aboot changin' the 'oor. Yer windows are dark enough already," rejoined the old worthy. "I've aye thocht it would ha' been better to tak' thae pictures aff the windows and hing them on the wa's. Ye'd get plenty o' licht then."

Would Wake Up With Smothering Spells.

There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McElwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some years later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"This typewriting gets on my nerves." "Now I'm well and enjoy my work."

Neurasthenia or Exhaustion of the Nervous System.

It is quite possible for the nervous system to be considerably exhausted before you realize the seriousness of your condition. You do not feel up to the mark, are easily tired out, worry over little things, and get cross and irritable, but do not consider yourself sick.

For this reason we shall give an outline of the symptoms so that you may be warned in time and use preventive treatment at a time when it will do the most good.

1. General discomfort—excitement and depression alternating.
2. Headache and sometimes dizziness, and deafness.
3. Disturbed, restless, unrefreshing sleep, interrupted by dreams.
4. Weakness of memory, particularly of recent events.
5. Blurring sight, noises and ringing in the ears.
6. Disturbance of sensibility or feeling, as in hands, or, with women, in the breasts.
7. Coldness of parts of body or flushing and sweats.
8. Lack of tone, easily fatigued, dyspepsia.
9. Fear to be alone, or in a crowd, fear of things falling, fear of travelling, etc.

These symptoms indicate that the nerves are being starved for lack of rich, red blood. Certain elements are lacking which can best be supplied by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This cure is easily available and awaits alone your action in applying it. There is no question of the merits of this food cure. Enquiry among your friends will prove to you that many thousands of women, and men, too, are being restored to health and vigor by use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

LOVE YOUR WIFE.

If you love your wife let her know it now and then by acts and words of praise and kindness. Don't wait until she is sick or dying to bring the fact to her notice. If your wife has an instrument ask her to play for you sometmes, and sit by and turn the leaves and when finished thank her. You were not awkward to confess your love once. You did not think it silly or sensual to do so then. Why should it be so now? Go home some times and press a kiss upon her lips as tenderly as you were wont to do in your lover days ,and see if the telltale blood don't rush to her cheek and happy tears to her eyes. We wonder how many wives there are in our land to-day that have not heard their husbands say for a score of years, "I love you." Oh, we know that there are some who hunger and thirst for love tokens. Husbands, if you have a happy home keep the foundation of your love pure and sweet. She left all to join her destiny with yours, to make your home happy and meet your wishes. So treat your wife with the tenderness you were wont to treat her in the days you sought to win her for your own. You may have forgotten the past, but she has not. Maybe she is wearing out her life to make your home cosy and comfortable and pleasant for you. Let her know sometimes you appreciate her services. Think of the manly tenderness that in youth gained her affections. Her charms may not be so great at then, but remember the thousand acts of kindness that ought to have strengthened your friendship. A true wife wishes to feel sure she is precious to her husband, not useful and convenient, but dear. Your wife will stand by you through storm and sunshine, if you will let her. We say to you, husbands, love your wives as you do yourself; continue through life the same. Take this as your part and do better. Do not wait until it is too late. Give kind words while they are here.

It must be admitted that the home is not a home that is not well kept, but in the zeal of keeping house the ideal home-making must not be lost sight of. It is a sad fact that women are prone to let the petty details engross their whole time and attention, and rather than let the house work go they neglect their children. The men are not altogether blameless in this matter. They do not stop to think that the mother has need of time for self-improvement. They should be taught to think. Thoughtfulness on their part would save many a pain at heart as well as weariness of body.

In life there are two roads, and in a measure of suspense, we exclaim "which will be chosen?" Have you, dear parents, instilled true ideas of right and beauty and good, so that now the broad and glittering counterfeit of that which is worthy of attainment will not dazzle the eye and lead from the straight and narrow way? Glorious the possibilities here; awful the responsibilities. 'Tis an exhibit of the parents' training, and must affix the seal of approval or concondemnation of that which ahs been done. 'Tis a character index which tells us if we may look for that which is good or if another defective thread is worked into the fabric which our race is weaving.

HOUSE CLEANING.

Sing a song of cleaning house!
Pocketful of nails.
Four and twenty dust pans,
Scrubbing brooms and pails!
When the door is open,
Wife begins to sing—

"Just help me move this bureau here,
And hang this picture, won't you dear?
And tack that carpet by the door,
And stretch this one a little more,
And drive this nail and screw this screw,
And here's a job I have for you—
The closet door will never catch,
I think you'll have to fix the latch;
And, oh, while you're about it John,
I wish you'd put the cornice on.
And hang this curtain when you're done
I'll hand you up the other one;
This box has got to have a hinge
Before I can put on the fringe;
And won't you mend this broken chair
I'd like a hook put right on there.
The bureau draw must have a knob;
And here's another little job—
I really hate to ask you dear—
But could you fix a bracket here?"

And on it goes when these are through
With this and that and those to do.
Ad infinitum, and more too.
All in a merry jingle—
And isn't it enough to make
A man wish he was single? Almost.

Choice Recipes

Savory Pie.

Grate half a pound of cheese, add four ounces of breadcrumbs, two ounces of boiled rice, one and a half ounces of dripping, and three-quarters of a pound of cold mashed potatoes; season with salt and pepper. Beat two eggs, and add gradually to the mixture; if too dry, stir in a little milk. Put the mixture into a greased pie-dish, and cover with mashed potato. Score the top with a fork, and dot with bits of dripping. Bake in a quick oven till nicely browned.

Egg Rolls.

Use two eggs, a small cup of milk, a tablespoonful of lard, or of lard and butter, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and enough flour to make a stiff dough. Roll out the dough, cut into tea biscuits, or form into small rolls, and bake in a hot oven.

Rhubarb Fritters.

Peel young rhubarb and cut into three-inch lengths. Make a batter by mixing together six large tablespoons of flour and one pint of milk. Stir until smooth, then add a pinch of salt and two well-beaten eggs; dip each piece of rhubarb into this mixture, and fry in hot fat until a golden brown. Serve piled high on a napkin-covered dish; sift powdered sugar over all, and send to the table while very hot.

Cold Meat Cutlets.

Take the remains of any cold meat, and mince it with two tablespoonfuls of chopped mushrooms, and one tablespoonful of chopped ham. Melt an ounce and a half of butter, and the same quantity of flour and stir over the fire until smooth. Pour into the pan a half pint of stock, and boil for two or three minutes. Then add the meat and the other ingredients, and a seasoning of pepper and salt, with one teaspoonful of lemon juice. Spread the mixture on a plate, to the thickness of half an inch and place on one side until cold. Divide into small pieces and form into the shape of mutton cutlets, with a knife. Insert into the thin end a piece of macaroni, an inch long to represent the bone. Brush over with egg and roll in breadcrumbs; fry to a light brown and garnish with parsley.

FASHION SAYS--- "FEAR NOT!"

A Touch of Oddity Cut and Trimming, Smart This Season

BELTS RETURN TO FAVOUR

NEW YORK, April 22.—Daytime dresses, this season, seem to have reached the height of perfection. There are the simplest of the simple, in designs for morning or street wear, and the daintiest, most airy possible of creations for afternoon and evening purposes. The typical summer dress is more charming than it has been for many a year. It is fashioned of the fascinating voiles, crepes, flouncings, and organdies favoured this season, and trimmed with ribbon, lace, embroidery and beads.

Beads as Trimming—White and Coloured.

China beads are particularly effective for this purpose; these are used for yokes, collars, cuffs, and for girdles. For the taffeta afternoon dress the beads are in colours or white, according to their application. One of the smartest of the imported frocks shown in New York this season, was a dark blue taffeta, trimmed with these white opaque beads arranged in conventional designs on skirt yoke, cuffs and collar. An extremely simple, long-lined dress of Lanvin's, in tan gabardine, was effectively finished by a narrow woven girdle of beads in the vivid Indian colourings; this girdle was weighted with two heavy tassels, and was caught loosely about the normal waistline, knotted and allowed to fall nearly to the skirt hem on left side. The girdle composed the only bit of contrast on the dress and the effect was charming.

A Becoming House Dress.

A white bead girdle on an afternoon or a dance frock of net is most effective too; the China beads may be used, or the glittering crystal beads. These woven girdles give us an excellent opportunity to put into use the knowledge of bead weaving which the majority of us gained when bead embroidery was so popular a form of fancy work, some years ago. One may use her own ideas as to colour combinations, this being another chance for developing personality in dress. The use of colour is undoubtedly the greatest factor in obtaining the desired note of the season, therefore, one should not hesitate to use colour in effective combinations, in ribbon, braids, and embroidery of all kinds; the touch of handwork is introduced on frock, blouse and suit, anywhere and everywhere possible.

The daytime dress of serge, natural linen or taffeta, is rendered doubly becoming by a bit of vivid wool or bead embroidery, and the evening frock, no matter how simple, is a thing of glitter and sparkle. One should not be afraid of oddity, as long as it is harmonious.

The Return of Belts.

As girdles and belts of all descriptions are smart again this year, it will not be a difficult matter to introduce the required bit of colour. Wide and narrow girdles of ribbon are smart; narrow strap belts of coloured suede, soft or vivid, according to the tone of the material, encircle skirt or coat of the sport costume, and these simple serge or linen frock may be girdled as soberly or as gorgeously as Fancy dictates, and Fashion advises Fancy to be gorgeously inclined. Birds, bees, butterflies, and coloured moths are being embroidered on frock and blouse, the bluebird being especially favoured for light-toned linens and cottons.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

Every little girl (and every big girl, too) needs and looks forward to a new dress at proper intervals. If it is the time for you to delight your daughter, you are thinking how easy it is to select a style of dress for any one purpose, but to choose a design suitable for the material you have in mind to use and to have appropriate for more than just practical wear, that means some mental turnover for you. Bought dresses have a sameness about them and they never fit just right, so, of course, you will make the dress. Here is a pattern unlike others you have seen and as neat and becoming a frock as any girl would want can be made from it with no trouble whatever.

No. 7,041.—Turning toward the armhole is a tuck in each front. The waist section is gathered at the lower part to a trim little collar in contrasting goods finishes the neck. The right front laps slightly over to the left and at yoke depth secures the dress with just one button in straight line the fastening is made invisible from yoke to waist. The skirt has plaits of either side turning back so that one plait results for the front. The cuff of the short sleeve and the belt harmonize with the collar in being formed of contrasting goods. If preferred, the long sleeves may be substituted for the three-quarter length shown in the picture.

The pattern is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 years. To make in size 8 years, 3 yards of 36 inch material and only ½ yard of contrasting goods are necessary. To obtain the pattern send only cents to the office of this publication.

Night of Horror in French Trenches Under Shell Fire

Quiet of Day Broken by Terrible Bombardment That Makes Earth Rock Like Ship in Storm and Shatters the Nerves of Men Who Withstand It.

(Special Despatch.)

PARIS, Saturday.

The Paris Journal prints a most graphic account written by a French lieutenant, in simple but vivid language, of his experience during a heavy bombardment of the French lines recently by the Germans.

"The day was quiet," writes this officer. "Not a thing stirred. The enemy's lines were as still as death. Just a few minutes ago my companion, Munier, had climbed out of the trench to get a German helmet which lay beside the dead body of a gray-coat. Not a single shot was fired at him.

"That is very singular," said Lieutenant Bautiez to me. 'Those fellows are up to something.'

Toward evening we received a broadside of rifle fire, which dislodged a few sandbags. Then everything was quiet again.

"At nine o'clock I went below into my dug-out for something to eat. Our little table was already set, and the steaming coffee was just placed before me when suddenly there was an explosion that shook the earth beneath our feet and scattered pieces of rock and clay in our midst.

"'It's no use,' said one of the men. 'I see we are not going to be permitted to eat.'

"I climbed back into the trench, and not a sound was heard.

"'Where was the explosion?'

"'To the right,' answered a voice in the dark. 'Be careful; they are sending us those 150 millimetre shells. There's one coming now.'

"I crouched down against the wall, and in a twinkling fifty metres of the trench were ground to dust. Sparks flew and dark, gaseous fumes eclipsed the blackness of the night. Then came another shell on its murderous mission, tearing up the earth and punctuated by deafening thunder.

"Things began to look serious. Some one shouted:

"'Lieutenant, there is no sense in your standing there and risking your life.'

"The man was right. I returned to the dug-out. The bombardment continued like one continuous roll of thunder. A heavy rain, caused by the detonations, fell at my feet.

"'And yet we have plenty of ammunition,' said two or three of my men.

"I was getting tired of this. We had to appeal to our fellows. I asked the telephone operator to connect me with the commander.

"'The line is out of order,' said the operator. 'The wire has probably been shot away.'

"'Wonder where is always something wrong with the telephone when it is badly needed.'

"I scribbled something on a piece of paper and handed it to one of my young men.

"'The telephone is disconnected. My friend, see that you get this to the commander. Have a safe journey.'

"'If all goes well,' he smiled, saluted, and was off. Fifty metres of it to do with a shell in his neck.

"The bombardment grew more intense. Oh what a night! The trenches seemed to sway to and fro like the deck of a ship in a storm. The air was thick with sulphurous fumes and breathing became difficult. Death surrounded us. I wondered how many of my men were still alive. And would we be able to withstand the foe if he made a charge on our trenches? I nerved myself to remain calm. How I would have liked to lay down and sleep! Strange, that the roaring of shells through the air always produces drowsiness. I fought against this weakness. Courage returned when the bombardment seemed to slacken for a moment. However, we only deluded ourselves, for the shells were coming faster and faster and heavier and thicker. I tried to figure out the calibre of the shells, but was unable to think. Every man was hugging the wall of the trench. If we could only sleep and not wake up again, so as to be out of this hell!

"Just how long we lay at the bottom of the trench I cannot say. Suddenly the bombardment ceased. I was on my feet in a moment.

"'Be careful, my friends. Now that the bombardment has ceased we can expect the enemy. A few of the men arose with an effort. They looked at me bewildered and did not seem to understand. Their faces were like the color of the earth.

"'Ah, what was that? A few meters off, at the entrance of the trench, I saw soldiers like so many ants digging in the earth. They had thrown their guns aside and their only aim now was to save their comrades, who were buried under the earth by the collapse of the walls of the trench. I saw Lieutenant Bautiez there giving orders.

"'Eight poor fellows are lying under there for almost two hours now,' he shouts. 'Only by a miracle was I saved from being there too. It seems impossible for us to reach the men. What a terrible night this has been!'

"And with a sort of tired laugh, he added:—

"'And to think that such an awful experience as this has been is never mentioned in the reports.'

Sniper's Bullet the Soldier's Gravest Peril

(Special Despatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

While the charges, the bursting of shells and the hand-to-hand combats make up to a great extent the picture of war, one of the gravest dangers which the soldiers face in the field is the bullet of the sniper. They are the clever marksmen who select some position where they are almost invisible to their opponents and send a well directed bullet at each target which is exposed for a fraction of a minute.

Remarkable as examples of the ingenuity of these snipers are some of the stories of their methods of disguise which are related by the soldiers who return from the trenches. A number of such stories were recently compiled by an English newspaper and give an indication of this method of warfare—an art which has been raised so high that a moment's forgetfulness, a second's pause in an exposed section of the line spells death to the soldier.

A Tommy, recently returned home, tells an extraordinary story of the ingenuity and death of a German sniper," says the newspaper. "This particular sniper was encountered on Hill seventy. When dawn broke the soldier was chilled to the bone and weakened with the loss of blood, as he had been wounded the night before. Unable to move, he lay flat on his back and tried to get some sleep. The rest and the warmth of the sun revived the soldier and he raised up his head. Another wounded soldier started to walk back to the trenches. A moment later he pitched forward, shot through the temple by a sniper.

Five minutes later another man moved. He started to get to his feet, but seemed startled by something and lay down again quickly. The other wounded man followed his example. A moment later he saw the grass, about twenty yards away, move in a peculiar manner. Instead of moving through it, the grass itself appeared to be coming forward.

"For a minute the movement of the grass stopped and then it began again, this time coming toward the wounded soldier. Suspicion was finally aroused to such an extent that the soldier finally took aim at the moving tuft of grass and fired three bullets in rapid succession. Crawling over to the spot where the mound of grass had suddenly stopped twitching, he found a dead German sniper. Real sods of grass had been bound by cords to a waterproof sheet, which had been strapped to the sniper's back, making a perfect disguise for him."

Continuing its anecdotes of the snipers, the newspaper quotes from a long letter written by a soldier, in which he explains the dangers presented to the men by the snipers.

"Along one stretch of front," he says, "we were much puzzled by the angle at which the sniper's bullets were coming over. On the left was a line of leafless pollard willows, but we could see that there was nobody behind the trunks.

"Several of our officers tried to find a solution, but all to no purpose. At last Captain A—— who happened to be familiar with the ways of old willows, took charge and ordered three men to fire a few shots at each willow. The sniping ceased. Two of the willows were hollow and the Germans had crept inside the trees and were firing through cracks in the stem with automatic revolvers. For two days there was no more sniping, but on the third the fire was resumed as briskly as before and with just as deadly an effect. Fire was opened again on the willows, but this time there was no result.

"Captain A—— was just as suspicious as ever, and he instructed the nearest battery to make short work of the willows. This was done, and the third to go revealed the enemy's cunning. Inside the willow we found not only a German but a steel plate which fitted outside him and inside the willow, making a proof against rifle bullets.

"While that was a clever trick it was little better than the work done with the old door. At one spot where our trenches were not more than 100 yards apart an old door was lying. The top glass panels of it were broken, the wood beneath them was broken and over the woodwork a gaudy paper had been pasted. Its only use was as a test for our sights, which we got by hitting the door knob or breaking off a splinter of glass.

"One day, however, we were surprised to find that when a bullet struck the glass it left a white streak and brought no tinkle. Hitting the woodwork had the same effect; it brought a white smear, but no splinters. We knew something was wrong and that night decided to investigate. We discovered that the old door had been removed and a steel shield put in its place. It was painted to look like the wood, paper and broken glass, with a hole near the knob for the sniper's rifle.

"We fixed a surprise for the artist. He evidently thought he was going to have things his own way. The next day when he began his work we were ready for him. Ourticks certainly was a match for his. We did our wet, for we sent both the artist and his picture flying back into the German trenches, and the picture was the more intact of the two. A well placed bomb accounted for him.

"We caught a burst of a sniper in a curious manner a few months ago. Our regiment was stationed about eight hundred yards from the German trench and, like all others, we suffered much for want of water. Half a mile in the rear ran a small stream and the men used to steal out at night for water. These men were constantly being sniped.

A number of our men had been killed or wounded at this manner and it was agreed that the sniping came from somewhere beyond our lines. A close study of the ground revealed nothing. The C. O. was walking across the fatigue ordinary [illegible] detailed [illegible] of ammunition [illegible] special for the benefit of the [illegible] sniper.

Early one morning the [illegible] that we were to make a great circle and beat inward, not leaving a bit of ground uncovered. Nothing came of it—that is to say, nothing except a shapeless old French farmer whom we found driving his riding plough for potatoes. When we questioned him he flew into a rage because we were trampling his beloved ground and demanded that we clear off at once as there was no 'espion' around.

"We had to do so. In making his report to our chief the subaltern remarked reflectively as he told of how the farmer gnashed his teeth at us, 'Jolly fine teeth, and clean, too.'

"'What?' snapped the brute C. O. 'Mr. X——, you will take a couple of men and go to the old farmer. Engage him in conversation while your men pin him from behind suddenly. I don't want to lose me capturing a dangerous sniper with clean teeth.'

"This was a sharp blow at the subaltern, but it was precisely as our chief suggested. The old farmer fought like a tiger, and the three men were rolling over and over on the ground before he could be safely tied. He was a powerful young man and a search revealed a belt of cartridges and two automatic pistols of German make. Later in the day we found a little dug-out in a ditch with a rifle hidden away in a screen of bushwood. There is only one end for men of this kind and he got it.

"Don't think that the sniping is confined to one side. We have some men who are very clever, particularly the Canadian chaps. One such is a full-blooded Indian in the Canadian Infantry, who is a marvel with his rifle. He has a telescopic sight attached to his rifle and goes about as he likes. He is a most silent man, talking to few persons. He wanders about the trenches and waits for a chance to pick off a German.

"One German sniper recently was giving a lot of trouble. Officers with glasses tried in vain to locate him. The Indian came along and without saying a word to anyone fired at a big tree. Down dropped the sniper. The Indian saw with his naked eye what the officers with their glasses failed to discover. He puts a little nick in the stock of his rifle every time he is sure he has killed a German. 'I saw him and two more nicks to the thirty-eight already on his stock.'"

How the Arabis Was Sunk by a German War Ship

Came Up with Vessel During Retreat from British Squadron Off Dogger Banks and Finished Her With Two Torpedoes, Rescuing Seventeen of Crew, Among Them the Captain.

(Special Despatch.)

BERLIN, Saturday.

An interesting and graphic account of the recent engagement off the Dogger Banks is given by a German who took part in it. The details are taken from a letter which the young man sent to his parents in Alsace, and the following extracts were printed in the Strassburger Burgerzeitung:—

"On February 16 we joined the patrol fleet and in files of three we steamed westward. I was on duty in the engine room. About ten o'clock at night we reached the Dogger Banks. We were about 150 kilometres (one hundred miles) from the English coast when the alarm bell sounded. Every man rushed to his post. The enemy had been sighted. I remained in the engine room and was wondering how strong the enemy force was—whether cruisers or destroyers. However, that did not matter to us. We steamed in closer and kept the enemy in sight in the light of the moon. I quickly ascended to the deck to see what was going on, and about 1,400 metres (1,100 yards) in front of us I saw three English destroyers and behind them a cruiser. The destroyers were not important, so we went after the cruiser.

"The Englishman did not appear to have seen us. Finally came the order to fire a torpedo, which quickly was on its way. The cruiser as yet had not fired a shot, but thick smoke was pouring out of her funnels. We turned and fired another torpedo. The cruiser then fired her big guns, but the aim was wretched. At once our searchlights were turned on the Englishman in order to blind him and then our guns got busy.

"As one of the prisoners told us later, our first shots crippled their wireless and two of the big guns. The destroyers came to the assistance of the cruiser, and then five cruisers hove in sight. We fired twenty-four more shots and then steamed eastward, protecting our retreat by thick volumes of smoke. About one o'clock we sighted the Arabis. I had been relieved from duty in the engine room and took my position on deck to pass the ammunition.

"We let go a torpedo at the Arabis. It struck and she began to careen. A second torpedo struck her amidships and she went clean out of the water and then sunk like a log. Just then a torpedo from the Arabis, which had been fired just before she was struck, rushed by us, missing us barely by a few feet. You can imagine our feelings at this narrow escape. But luck was with us, otherwise we would have been lost.

"Our searchlights illuminated the spot where the Arabis had gone down. The water was dotted with men clinging to the wreckage. There were cries of 'Help! Help!' from all sides. We did all we could, but it was impossible to rescue all. We picked up seventeen men, including the captain of the Arabis. Two of the rescued were wounded and three died despite everything that was done for them. We gave them a seaman's burial. The saved were at once given hot coffee and dry clothing.

"We had to laugh because of the miserable behavior of the captain of the Arabis. He moaned and sobbed dreadfully and was very much afraid of us. He would not take the brandy which we offered him, even after one of us had tasted it to show him that there was nothing wrong with it. Two hours later, however, he and his men were quite comfortable and were smoking cigarettes contentedly. Of course we thought of the Hagalong, but we quickly forget that awful affair and did all we could for the men of the Arabis. And we are 'Barbarians'!

"As we steamed into Wilhelmshaven we were enthusiastically greeted. Our prisoners were taken ashore. We had enjoyed the experience, as everything had progressed so smoothly and nicely, but we were all so tired that we could hardly stand. No doubt there will soon be another opportunity to show what we can do, as these things can be expected now at any moment. Then, too, luck be with us."

GERMANY HELD LIABLE FOR AIR FOE'S HAVOC

(Special Despatch.)

BERLIN, Saturday.

A German court has decided that damages to life or property inflicted by airmen of the enemy are not actionable in a civil court, but that the matter is one for which the Imperial government is liable, and that the plaintiff should have recourse to the Imperial Insurance Court for damages.

Johann Frank, a laborer, while going to work recently in Ludwigshaven, was badly wounded by the splinters from a bomb which was dropped on the city by a French aviator. As a result his right shoulder blade was fractured and he is unable to properly use his right arm. Frank appealed for damages to a building benefit society of which he was a member, but this association refused to pay, on the ground that such cases did not come under its jurisdiction.

A civil action was then brought against the municipality and this was dismissed by the court, which held that the Imperial government alone was responsible for damages done to life or property inflicted by enemy airmen, and the plaintiff should go to appeal.

Told to Speak English, a Boer Tweaks British Official's Nose

(Special Despatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

The Nieuwe Rotterdamske Courant publishes a letter which an aged Boer in South Africa has written to his son, giving an intimation of the sentiment there in regard to the war. The father, who lives in the Orange River State, writes:

"The newspapers here have told us for months that Bulgaria and Roumania would join the Allies and make war upon Germany, and now we read with surprise that Bulgaria is fighting on the side of Germany.

"It looks to us here as if things were not going so well with England. We really do not know what to think, and I suppose we will have to await developments. We are waiting patiently for the outcome, obviously devastated [illegible] of ammunition [illegible] experience in the last hundred years. We are [illegible] I believe, however, that England [illegible] her twenty million soldiers would [illegible] annihilate the Germans. Of course, we do not know what the outcome will be, but it seems to us that either Germany or Russia will be the coming nation.

"Recently there came to our town, where we all speak Dutch, a new official from England. Often there received him at the railway station and naturally addressed him in Dutch. The Englishman, highly insulted, stuck his head out of the car window and shouted, 'Speak English!' Oom Dave replied by seizing his nose and told him that he preferred to address him in the Dutch language. As a result, Oom Dave was fined five pounds ($25) but nevertheless he has a certain pride in the affair.

"While all the Englishmen here are ready for their country, nevertheless very few of them have volunteered to go to the front, and those few were men who were without employment. These men [illegible] positions do not appear very anxious to [illegible]

$10,000 Payment To Dr. Scheele In Bomb Plot Traced

Banking Firm Has No Record o Signer of Check to Missing Man

SIX BANK ACCOUNTS

Papers Indicate Explosives Were Sent to several Ports, Including New Orleans.

NEW YORK, April 18.—That Dr. Walther T. Scheele, who is being sought by the police and investigators of the local bureau of the Department of Justice as one of the nine men whose names have been learned in the plot to destroy steamships with cargoes or the Allies by incendiary bombs, recently went to the banking firm of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, No. 15 William Street, and deposited a cheque for $10,000 was made known by a member of the banking firm who declined to give his name.

It is understood that this cheque was made out to the order of Dr. Scheele. But the firm has no record of who signed it or of the bank on which it was drawn. The account was closed in a short time after Dr. Scheele had drawn against the $10,000 less than twenty cheques.

Christopher L. Meyerdirks, one of the department heads of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, said that he had known Dr. Scheele for several years, and that the man who ran the bomb factory in Hoboken in February, 1915, sold a drug store in Ridgewood, Brooklyn. Mr. Meyerdirks said that Dr. Scheele moved away and that he had not seen him except at the bank.

Had Six Bank Accounts.

Federal officials are investigating the various accounts of the mysterious Dr. Scheele in Hoboken. It is said that he had no less than six in different banks, and according to certain police officials, there is a suspicion that he may have been interested in more than one so-called chemical factory.

Lieutenant George Busby and investigators of the Department of Justice found some smokeless powder in the plant of what was known as the New Jersey Agricultural Chemical Company—the place where the incendiary bombs are declared to have been made. There is a certain mystery about this discovery, together with the information that large quantities of lead were discovered to have been ordered from time to time. Trunks and suitcases are said to have been shipped from the factory quite often.

It was further learned from William Young, cashier of the First National Bank in Hoboken, that some of the cheques he had cashed for Dr. Scheele were on the Essex County Bank of Newark. Whether they bore the signature of Captain Franz von Papen, the recalled German Military Attache, he could not say. The amount was close to $20,000 in all.

The second quartette of prisoners, all officers of the North German Lloyd steamship Friedrich der Grosse, was arraigned before Clarence S. Houghton, United States Commissioner. Carl Schmidt, chief engineer of the steamship, was held in $15,000 bail, and Frederick Praedel, Wilhelm Paradies and Charles Garbade, fourth engineers, in $5,000 bail.

Not only did the last three men give valuable information to the police and the federal agents, but even Schmidt is said to have volunteered a statement. As in the case of Ernest Becker and Captain E. W. C. von Kleist, who also told the police a good deal, they were left to look after themselves. They could not get bail and were committed to the Tombs Prison.

Bombs Sent Elsewhere.

The only two of the eight men who are free on bail are those who have declined to utter a word. They are Captain Enno Bode, assistant superintendent of the Hamburg-American line piers at Hoboken, and Captain Otto Wolpert, superintendent of the Atlas lin pier. They were released on bail immediately following arraignment.

Through certain papers found in the home of Dr. Scheele in Hoboken it is susported that bombs were sent to New Orleans and Savannah, Ga., as well as many other ports. The police also found other papers and five bank books of New York City institutions. The janitor said that Scheele had left his home there without saying a word and owing him one dollar.

John C. Knox, Assistant United States Attorney, had a long talk with the men arrested aboard the Friedrich der Grosse, the engineers of that vessel. It is understood that the three petty officers received $14 extra every week for their work on the bomb casings.

GIRL FOUND DYING WITH SHOT IN HEAD

MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY OCCURS ON A FARM NEAR ST. JACOBS.

ST. JACOBS, ONT., April 19.—A tragedy shrouded in mystery occurred near here some time on Saturday afternoon when Viette, the 17 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Schiedele, met her death. The parents were away from home at the time and the gruesome find was made by Henry Scherer, the hired man, whose only story is that of finding the body on the kitchen floor.

Scherer states that it was on going in the second time from doing his chores at the barn he entered by the back kitchen door and found the girl prostrate on the floor near the wood box, a gun close beside her. The shot had entered her forehead. She was still breathing and he rushed on his wheel to the village to notify the parents and Dr. Robinson, who arrived at 5 o'clock and found that life was extinct. Dr. Robinson thereupon notified Coroner Dr. W. W. Goikie, of Elmira, who decided for the present not to hold an inquest.

The gun was a short .32 calibre and was kept unloaded in the wood box, although cartridges were stored in the same room. The bullet entered the forehead obliquely.

The family does not hold out the theory of foul play but believes it to be the result of an accident.

The time may come when airships will be as common as sewin' machines, but they will never be as safe.

CHASE BIG BARGE DRIFTING TO SEA

STRONG NORTH WEST WIND DRIVES THE BALLOON THRO' NARROWS—IS MENACE TO NAVIGATION.

New York, April 18.—A wireless message sent from the battleship Arkansas, anchored off Tomkinsville, gave the first news that the Balloon, a barge of 327 gross tons, was drifting to seaward. The drifting of the big barge was considered to be a great danger to navigation. The Balloon, which had no crew, was being blown out through the Narrows by a strong northwest wind.

The message from the Arkansas, signed by the "Commanding Officer," read: "Barge Balloon drifting rapidly to seaward. Passed Gowanus Flats, gas and bell buoy, No. 12, at 3.15 p.m."

Upon receiving the message the Herald communicated immediately with the United Coast Guard Office, and Capt. Bowen requested that the message be repeated by wireless to the coast guard cutter Mohawk, anchored in the Hudson River off 70th street. Soon afterwards the Mohawk was on her way in a race to catch the Balloon.

It is not known from what point the Balloon started.

171,474 Treatments of Soldiers' Teeth By Canadian Dental Corps

Some of the Detail Connected With the Operation of This Department—Many Teeth Pulled and Fillings Put In.

OTTAWA, April 18.—An insight into the growth and work of the Canadian Army Dental Corps, under the direction of Lt.-Colonel J. Alexandor Armstrong, which body began operations in England in July 15 last, is contained in a communication brought by the last English mail and received by Dr. Stuart Evans, MacLaren St., who is a close friend of Colonel Armstrong's.

A report of the work done by the dental clinic, covering the period from the time the corps began operations in July with 15 officers up to December 31st, when it had 38 officers, accompanied the letter to Dr. Evans, and by it it is shown that up to the end of February, 1916, around 171,474 treatments of teeth had been attended to by the Canadian Dental Corps.

Over 4,000 fillings were put in, over 31,000 teeth (including one of Sir Sam Hughes') were extracted, and some six and a half thousand "nerves" were "killed in action."

The Canadian Dental Corps now not only operates in England, but has extended its branches to France and the Mediterranean district, in the latter there being seven officers of the corps and in the former an even two score officers at the time of writing.

SIR SAM WAS TREATED.

Sir Sam Hughes returned to Ottawa on Sunday in connection with the Kyte fuse charges, had occasion to be treated in London by the Canadian Army Dental Corps. Lt.-Colonel Armalising, 1,546.

strong himself attended the Minister of Militia and the communication states that Sir Sam had an extraction made and had been suffering from an abscess.

Up to the end of last year the report of the Canadian Army Dental Corps shows that a total of 101,474 treatments were made, and Dr. Armstrong estimates that during January and February of this year that another 60,000 treatments to teeth were made.

525 OPERATIONS EACH.

Fillings head the individual list of treatments up to the end of the year, numbering 44,367, with extractions next, 31,078. The average number of operations performed per month by each officer is 595, according to the report, or an average of seventeen and one-half per day of the month having thirty days.

According to the letter, the dental staff last month totalled eighty, and an addition of fifteen more officers was expected shortly. "I am enclosing a report of the work done up to December 31st, and I estimate that there has been performed over 60,000 operations during January and February," reads the letter in part.

THE BUSIEST MONTH.

The statement deals with the treatments under six headings known to dentistry as follows: Fillings, treatments (evidently of abscesses), denture (plate work,) prophylatics, (cleaning the teeth), extractions, and devitalising killing nerves, roots, etc.)

November when there were 42 officers on the staff is shown by the report to have been the busiest month for the corps, when a total of 24,338 treatments were administered, made up as follows: Fillings, 10,759; treatments, 2,621; dents, 1,351; prophylatics, 1,000; extractions, 6,995, devit-

WOMAN GIVEN TWO DAYS

To Make Up Her Mind for Surgical Operation. She Refused; Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"One year ago I was very sick and I suffered with pains in my side and back until I nearly went crazy. I went to different doctors and they all said I had female trouble and would not get any relief until I would be operated on. I had suffered for four years before this time, but I kept getting worse the more medicine I took. Every month since I was a young girl I had suffered with cramps in my sides at periods and was never regular. I saw your advertisement in the newspaper and the picture of a woman who had been saved from an operation and this picture was impressed on my mind. The doctor had given me only two more days to make up my mind so I sent my husband to the drug store at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and believe me, I only took four doses before I felt a change and when I had finished the third bottle I was cured and never felt better. I grant you the privilege to publish my letter and am only too glad to let other women know of my cure."—Mrs. Thos. McGonigal, 3432 Hartville Street, Phila., Pa.

WOMAN IS ARRESTED ACCUSED OF GETTING $1200 WORTH OF GOODS AT STORE IN FRIEND'S NAME.

New York, April 18.—Accused of grand larceny in that she is alleged to have used the name of a wealthy woman who had befriended her to obtain large quantities of goods from a department store, Miss Anna Rainless, 34 years old of No. 594 West 160th St., was locked up last night in the West Thirtieth street police station.

The woman whose name Miss Rainless is alleged to have used in getting the articles, is Mrs. M. E. Coggins, who lives at the Great Northern Hotel. Mrs. Coggins whose home is in the west, became acquainted with Miss Rainless through meeting her in a millinery store owned by the mother of Miss Rainless.

Mrs. Coggins has a charge account at a department store in Fifth Avenue. She went on a trip to Florida recently. While she was away, it is said, Miss Rainless went to the store at various times and bought goods valued at $1200. Those purchases, it is alleged, were charged to the account of Mrs. Coggins and were delivered to the home of Miss Rainless.

On her return from Florida, Mrs. Coggins discovered the discrepancies in her account. The store detectives got a description of the woman who had made the purchases and after a watch of several days decided that Miss Rainless was the woman. She was arrested yesterday afternoon as she left a telephone booth in a hotel. The detective says that she wore a bracelet and a ring that were part of her purchases at the store. It is alleged that some of the other articles so purchased were found at her home.

MAIL ORDER HOUSES BESIEGED FOR CATALOGUES IN WILY SCHEME OF TOWN MERCHANTS.

ARCOLA, ILL., April 18.—One of the most barren industries in this thriving region since the Arcola Retail Merchants' Booster Club began its deadly campaign, is the mail order business. By offering an automobile to the woman who would turn in the most catalogues from the mail order houses the Arcola merchants have collected the finest and most complete mail order library on everything from encyclopedias to player pianos ever seen in one township.

At the present price of paper it is estimated that the automobile to be presented will be more than paid for from the sale of the catalogues. Women are arriving with waggonloads of them daily and the post office receipts from catalogues alone, promise to boost the post office into another class and increase the salary of the postmaster.

One citizen, heretofore prominent, wrote to the mail order houses that the run on their business was not due to a desire to trade but to an automobile contest. His rapid decline in popularity has never been equalled in the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

DR. WALKLY SUFFOCATED; BLOOD CLOT IN THROAT

CORONER'S JURY CONCLUDES INQUEST IN WINGHAM TOWN HALL.

WINGHAM, April 18.—That death was due to suffocation caused by a blood clot reaching the throat from the nasal regions, was the finding of Coroner Kennedy's jury inquiring into the death of Dr. Walkly, who died suddenly at the home of his brother-in-law, Dr. J. A. Fox, D.C., this town, on April 4.

The inquest was held in the town hall and the witnesses were examined by Crown Attorney Sager. Barrister Dancey appeared in the interests of Dr. Fox and the relatives of Dr. Walkly.

The witnesses were Dr. Margaret Calder, Dr. Fox, Dr. Redmond and Dr. Silverton, of Toronto. The latter assisted in the autopsy.

The verdict was reached in a few minutes.

The body had been prepared for shipment to Michigan for burial on Friday when the order for the inquest was made to clearly establish the cause of death.

It is getting so the public kiss get used to anything. Only once in a while now anybody mentions the war.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Bereaved

A Drama of Mexico

By P. A. MITCHEL

Ever since the revolution in Mexico that deposed Porfirio Diaz that country has been in a state of ferment and has kept the people of the United States in a fever of anxiety. During the rule of President Huerta I, being of an inquiring disposition, concluded to go down there and see for myself what kind of people the Mexicans are.

Passing over the border line of Texas, I entered rural Mexico and moved on southward, intending to visit the capital. There were then the Huerta, the Carranza and the Villa factions, all struggling for the upper hand. The frightful condition of the country did not prevent the people from enjoying such amusements as they could get. I stopped one evening for the night in a little cluster of houses—it could not be dignified by the name of town—and, hearing that a dance was to be given in the dining room of the tavern where I put up, I was curious to see how people could make merry while their country was in a state of anarchy.

When the dancing began I took a chair on the veranda where I could look through an open window upon the dancers. The effect was heightened by the picturesque costumes of both the men and the women. The merrymakers came from the country round about, being made up of all sorts of persons, from the hacendado, or farmer, to the soldier, who made his living by fighting for some one of the factions struggling for the supremacy. Not only was the soldier present, but his wife and his daughters, for an army in Mexico is accompanied by the families of the soldiers.

I was much interested in watching these people. Among the better grade I noticed a young couple who, it was evident, were lovers. The man was a handsome fellow dressed in the costume of a hacendado, composed of tight trousers with a row of buttons on each leg, where a soldier's stripe is usually placed; a fancy waistcoat and a short jacket, also having a profusion of buttons. The girl wore the Mexican skirt of many colors, the Mexican bodice and the jacket decorated with gold braid.

I could not help contrasting the happiness beaming in the faces of these two young people with the cloud that hung over their country. They danced every dance together. While I was watching them a man came up behind me, and I felt that he was looking over my shoulder. I moved aside not to obstruct his view and at the same time turned my head to have a look at him.

I judged that he was connected with one of the various armies or bands which were sucking the lifeblood of Mexico. A more villainous face I never saw on a man. His eyes were following the couple that interested me, and as he watched his frown deepened. He stood only a few minutes looking at them, then went away.

At the end of each dance a number of the dancers came out on to the veranda to be refreshed by the cooler air outside. During one of these intervals a sharp report suddenly sounded at the other end of the veranda. I saw those who were inside start for the exit nearest to the point from which the sound came, and those on the veranda turned and hurried in the direction. I, too, arose and went to see what had happened.

A crowd had gathered about something or some one, but I could not see beyond the onlookers. When finally I succeeded in doing so I saw lying on the floor the young man I had been observing within, while the girl with whom he had danced was kneeling beside him moaning piteously. He had been shot and was dying.

Within half an hour the dance had been resumed, and, judging by the gayety, one would not have suspected that the life of one of the company had been just snuffed out. I turned away from the scene, went as far from it as I could and waited for the house to become quiet that I might go to bed.

I did not get away from the place the next day. I had come to Mexico from curiosity, and I did not like to move on without learning more of the tragedy a part of which I had witnessed. I inquired who had done the shooting and was informed that a man who belonged to a Villa force in the neighborhood was the culprit. The young farmer who was killed was an advocate of Huerta. This is all the information I could elicit, but I inferred much more. I believed that the murderer coveted the girl who had given her heart to the farmer.

I lounged at the tavern during the day, uncertain as to just when I would move on southward. During the afternoon, while strolling among the houses that composed the place, I met the man who had looked in at the window at the dancers. I knew him to be the murderer and was surprised to see him still near the scene of his cowardly act. But I was destined to still further surprise. I saw him approach a house and walk up and down under a window.

They have a custom in Mexico called "playing the bear." When a man wishes to court a girl he takes position under her window and walks back and forth till either he gets a sign from her or gives up his attempt to win her. If he receives encouragement he proceeds step by step till he forms her acquaintance and makes formal application for her hand.

I had read of this custom, but had never seen an instance of it. I surmised that the man might be wooing according to the Mexican custom. I could see him from the tavern veranda, and, going there, I took a seat in order to observe what would follow. While doing so the landlord came out on to the veranda, and, pointing to the walking man, I asked him what he was doing.

"He is the man who shot the hacendado last night. The girl who was robbed of her sweetheart lives there. The man is probably trying to see her and ask her forgiveness."

An hour had passed from the time I had first seen the man walking under the window when a figure of a woman appeared within the house. The walker stopped, and I saw that he was speaking. The woman came to the window, and, the sunlight falling upon her, I recognized the young girl who had been robbed of her lover. I wondered if the murderer could obtain forgiveness so soon after the tragedy.

The two talked together for some time; then the man held his hand up to the window. After some delay the girl took it, but I fancied I could see her shudder. A few more words between them and the man went away. He passed the veranda near where I sat, and I saw an unmistakable look of triumph on his face.

Interested in the drama which was being enacted before me, I determined to remain where I was till the last act had been played. I wondered if the girl, actuated by religious motives, had felt constrained to forgive the slayer of her lover. Had it not been for the triumphant look on the man's face as he passed me I would not have dreamed of anything more than this. But I had discovered that the Mexicans are a strange people, and one cannot in any event tell what a woman is going to do. Was it possible that this man, like King Richard III., would win her whose lover he had slain?

I had seen no sign of a burial of the first love and did not think it possible that the girl could take another until the body had been laid away. What, then, was my surprise when just before dark I saw the murderer approach the house where the bereaved girl lived and stand under her window! Presently she came out of the door, joined him, and they walked away together.

I confess that, though by this time I was prepared for almost anything in Mexico, I could not believe what my eyes revealed to me. I wished that I might follow the couple and see what occurred between them, though I shrank from witnessing a girl throwing herself into the arms of a man who had only the night before shot down in cold blood the man she loved.

I lit a cigar and sat smoking on the veranda. The twilight faded; the stars came out. All about me was so peaceful that I could not realize I was in a country torn with anarchy and a great part of it in the hands of robber bands; that within twenty-four hours I had witnessed an instance of the desperate condition of the country. But my mind was ever on the couple I had seen go out into the darkness. I thought of the lover of the evening before, a smile on his handsome lips returned by one on those of the girl he loved, now lying cold in death in one of the houses within the range of my vision, while the girl he loved had gone with his murderer.

It was quite dark, 9 o'clock perhaps, when, tired of sitting, I arose to stretch my legs. I walked down a roadway on which the two persons I had been watching had disappeared. Suddenly a figure, a woman's figure, flitted by me. She was moving rapidly, and I got a glimpse only of something white. And yet I was impressed with the idea that it was the girl who had lost her lover. If so, where was the man with whom she had set out?

Believing that nothing more of the drama which was unfolding would be revealed to me that night, I returned to the tavern and went to bed.

In the morning everything about me was still peaceful. The inhabitants of the place went about their daily vocations as usual. If there was war in the neighborhood it was too far distant to be heard. Still I refrained from leaving the place without more information as to what interested me. I determined to remain where I was until the climax.

In the afternoon occurred a simple funeral of the murdered man. The chief mourner was the girl who had been bereaved. The murderer was not in evidence at any time during the day. The poor girl was supported by her mother and attended by a few friends. I went into the tavern and asked the landlord what had become of the soldier.

"He was found this morning, not far from here, stabbed to the heart," was the reply.

"Who killed him?" I asked.

The landlord shrugged his shoulders and said that this was not known.

The climax to my drama had been played. Whether any one knew who had killed the soldier I do not know to this day. One thing I know. I saw him go out into the darkness with the girl whose life he had blighted, and I saw her come back without him.

The curtain had fallen; the audience—myself—had seen the play. There was nothing more for me but to move on. The death of a man shot down in the interval between two dances had not ruffled the tranquillity of the hamlet, nor had the finding of the body of his murderer twenty-four hours later any noticeable effect. What were these two lives in a land where bloodshed is the order of the day?

My curiosity as to Mexico had been satisfied. Instead of going on down to the capital I turned about and journeyed back toward home.

NEGLECTED COLDS VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be but a slight cold. Your head becomes stuffed up; you start to cough; an irritation in the throat follows; it gets lower down; settles on the lungs; you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color sometimes streaked with blood, and you cough persistently.

You think perhaps you are strong enough to fight off this trouble, but colds are not easily fought off in this northern climate. Colds if not attended to will sooner or later develop into some serious lung trouble.

Mrs. Willis H. Monk, Lower Ship Harbor, N.S., writes: "Last winter I took a severe cold on my lungs, and I would cough and spit up phlegm and blood. I had the cough for nearly a month, and I got medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good. I thought I had consumption. My friends advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief. I am the mother of ten children, and I always keep a bottle of 'Dr. Wood's' in the house. I will highly recommend it to all, especially to all who have little ones to care for."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the best cure for coughs and colds. It has been on the market for the past twenty-five years. It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

R. H. DAVIS' FUNERAL IN PHILADELPHIA

Body is Cremated and Ashes will be Buried in the Family Plot in Roxborough.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 17.—The body of Richard Harding Davis was brought to this city on Friday and cremated. To-day the ashes were buried with unostentatious ceremonies in the plot of Mr. Davis' family, in the Leverington cemetery, Roxborough.

Simplicity marked the arrival of the body in this city and its removal to the crematory. There were no flowers and no service.

Almost time for the college fellers to come home and show their folks correct language and table manners.

LIQUOR BY MAIL ORDER IS FEATURE OF ONTARIO'S ACT

TORONTO, April 19.—The soliciting through salesmen of orders for liquors, also newspaper and billboard advertising of liquor within the Province, will be forbidden when prohibition comes into effect in Ontario next September. A clause which has been added to the Ontario Temperance Act makes these indictable offences.

This legislation means that liquor merchants in the Province of Quebec who will supply the bulk of the individual trade in Ontario when this Province goes "dry," will be obliged to depend upon mail orders, as no salesmen will be allowed to canvass for them within the Province. Through the mails the outside firms may forward price lists to prospective customers in Ontario and invite their orders, but they can go no further.

When a customer does order, money to pay for the liquor must accompany the order. The package is then made up and shipped to the individual placing the order, his name and address plainly written upon the package. There must be no concealment about the contents of the package.

Where, in the case of a large city like Toronto, a Quebec dealer may receive a sufficient number of individual orders to make up a carload, he may ship in carlots to his authorized agent in Toronto, who will be responsible for its distribution to the proper parties. When liquor is shipped in carlots, each package must be separately addressed before being placed in car for shipment, so that there can be no deception.

CANADA'S NURSING SYSTEM THE BEST

Physician Home on Short Leave Expects Conscription

OTTAWA, April 19. — "The Canadian nursing system is the finest in the world," said Major F. McKelvey Bell, Deputy Assistant Director of Medical Services at Bramshott, England, who has returned in charge of a draft of 138 wounded and unfit men, after being about 18 months in England and France on active service.

When he arrived in France his was the first unit there, as it preceded the Princess Patricias with the First Canadian Contingent. He stated that every available man in Canada would be required, and he said he believed that conscription would come in Canada in a few months as Canadians would realize the necessity of it.

Speaking of the Canadian hospitals in England, he said that in Canada an hospital of 200 beds was considered to be a large institution, but the average military hospitals in England had 1,000 beds, and No. 8 Canadian General Hospital of 1,500 beds, could be enlarged by 500 within 24 hours in times of stress. He stated that the equipment was equal to the best hospitals in the world. He states that Lt.-Colonel J. F. Kidd of Ottawa, is doing excellent work at Bramshott.

BROKE IT GENTLY.

He Didn't Know Exactly What to Do. So They Came to His Rescue.

A young author and critic, who has come to be an authority upon a certain modern phase of education, went a few days ago to deliver his first lecture at a girls' school. He had lectured before, but never at a young ladies' seminary, and as two white frocked, curly haired ushers led him out to the platform and he sat down beside the matronly principal among the women who made up the faculty and faced a sea of girls' faces he was young enough to feel a bit of embarrassment himself. It was rather difficult at first, but once the lecture was started things went all right.

He finished what he had to say and sat down. The audience and the matronly principal and the women who made up the faculty clapped their hands enthusiastically. Then the applause died down and silence settled upon the lecture hall. The young man sat on waiting for some one to say something, dimly conscious that a move of one kind or another was expected of him. But his lecture was finished. He had said all he had to say. There were no questions from faculty or students. A few of the girls began to fidget, but no one spoke.

The young man became unpleasantly aware that he was expected to do something and to do it at once, but he did not know what to do. He reflected miserably that he did not know the etiquette of a girls' school anyhow. And then there was a signal from the principal and a move in the audience, and the prettier of the two girl ushers approached him, a little embarrassed, a little shy, determined to do her duty.

"I'm so sorry, Mr B.," she murmured, "but I'm afraid you'll have to—you'll have to start right this minute if you want to make your train!"—New York Times.

FARM LABOUR SCARCE IN MANY SECTIONS

Enlistment of So Many Men From the Farms and the High Wages Paid by Factories Have Caused a Shortage—The April Crop Bulletin

The following information regarding agricultural conditions in this Province is contained in a bulletin prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, based upon information furnished by a large staff of correspondents under date of April 12th.

WINTERING CROPS.

Fall Wheat: Fall wheat so far gives excellent promise. The top is not so heavy as usual, as much of the crop was sown late owing to wet ground, but the fields were well protected by snow during the winter, and now have a healthy and vigorous appearance. So far there has been but little injury from spring "heaving" and there are very few complaints of injury from injury from insects.

Clover: This crop like fall wheat has come through the winter in good shape, except on very low places or on poorly drained land. There has been but little injury from heaving, and at present the promise is for one of the best hay seasons for years. Alfalfa is also promising well.

ORCHARDS AND SMALL FRUITS

The winter was not trying to fruit trees, the greatest damage to orchards resulting from the girdling of young trees by mice and rabbits driven to hunger by the deep snow lying so long. In instances grape vines and raspberry canes have been frozen back more or less owing to tenderness from the late fall growth, but the injury will not likely affect the general yield. Strawberries and other small fruits are about normal. The San Jose scale is still complained of in the Lake Erie counties, where it has got a hold in many old orchards, but elsewhere this pest is being combatted in its earlier stages, and is being kept more under check. The general outlook at present for all classes of fruit is favorable, apple buds giving better promise than for years.

LIVE STOCK.

The wintering of live stock was comparatively easy matter, owing to there being a large quantity of grain on hand which had been more or less sprouted by the wet harvesting. Corn and straw were also in abundance, although not of such good quality as in more recent years, and there was a good acreage of roots, but hay was scarce and high in price.

Horses: The demand for horses, notwithstanding war conditions, has not been encouraging. The animals as a rule are in good working condition, although many have suffered from a mild form of distemper.

Cattle: On the whole cattle have wintered well. No serious disease has been complained of, but there have been a few cases of abortion, and a more frequent complaint of a form of indigestion, said to be resulting from eating musty grain, straw, or other fodder. Dairy cattle are said to be rather thin in flesh owing to the heaving drain upon their milking power during the rich pastures of the midsummer and fall of last year. Beef Cattle are not plentiful as usual, as prices of fat stock have been most enticing. Store cattle are also rather scarce, but are up to the average in quality, although there are complaints that some are rather of the dairy type. Calves are being better cared for than formerly.

Sheep: Sheep have wintered well, and lambs are said to be coming on nicely. As with other live stock, much depends upon the handling.

Swine: A correspondent describes the hog as the farm "mortgage lifter" at present prices. The heavy demand for bacon hogs has made a shortage in the number on hand. There are even less complaints than usual of sickness among swine.

Fodder Supplies: Owing to there being a good supply of fodder corn and of straw on hand, and also a considerable quantity of sprouted grain for feed, other fodders have held out well, although hay has been fed more sparingly than usual. Live Stock will be carried over nicely to the grass.

FARM LABOR AND PRODUCTION

The enlistment of so many men from the farms, and the enticing prices paid by factories making munitions and other military supplies, have caused a shortage of labor that is much felt in rural districts. Several correspondents state that in many cases there is only one man on each 100 acre farm; others say that on such farms there is only about one out of five that has a hired man left on it. In many instances women have to assist in the field work. Much less fall wheat was sown in 1915, and a larger area than ever will be devoted to grass for hay and pasturing. About the usual acreage of spring grains will be grown; likely more oats. Corn and beans will also have a slightly increased area, prices for the latter having attracted attention. Canning crops will not be popular, as they usually require more attention. Wages are higher than ever, men asking and getting from $30 to $40 with board, and in some cases more. While some farmers are not optimistic over present conditions others are full of confidence, especially where they can interchange help work with their neighbors.

His Disease.

When Lord Chancellor Campbell then plain Campbell, married Miss Scarlett and departed on his wedding trip, Justice Abbott observed when a cause was called on in the bench:

"I thought Mr. Brougham that Mr Campbell was in this case."

"Yes, my lord," replied Brougham "but I understand he is suffering from Scarlett fever."—Chicago Record Herald.

Would Be Terrible.

"The doctors are going to operate on her."

"What's wrong?"

"Something about the coat of her stomach, I understand."

"I hope they don't find it out of style. She'd never get over that."—Kansas City Journal.

Dispatch is the soul of business and nothing contributes more to dispatch than method.—Lord Chesterfield.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys feel and act like lumps of lead, and you have stingy pains in the back, or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, sold stomach, or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning, and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

If you want fine weather look for fine weather signs. Here, writes Adelia B. Beard, in the St. Nicholas, are some of the most reliable for they are based upon scientific facts:

When the sun sets in a sea of glory—that is when the sunset sky is red, you may expect clear weather on the following day.

At night when the moon is clear and shows clean edges with no halo or ring of mist surrounding it, there is little danger of rain.

When the wind blows steadily from the west, the weather will continue fair, it very rarely rains in our Eastern States with the wind in the west.

Watch the smoke from a chimney or from your camp fire—it is a good barometer. If the smoke rises high it means clear weather. The smoke also will show you from which direction the wind is blowing, so will a flag on an upright flagstaff.

A gray early morning, not a heavy, cloudy one, promises a fair day.

A heavy dew at night is seldom followed by rain the next day. Think of it this way and you will remember, wet feet, dry head.

If there are no clouds at the western horizon you need not worry about others.

WHY ARE LONDON'S PASTORS SLIGHTED? ASKS MR. RIDDIFORD

Chaplain for 142nd Chosen From Outside City---Will Interview Lieut.-Col. Graham and Ask Reasons for Appointment

ALLIANCE TAKES ACTION

LONDON, April 19.—"I rise to ask a question," said Rev. W. C. Riddiford, towards the close of an unusually long meeting of the Ministerial Alliance. "Going down the street the other day, I saw a bulletin announcing that an Ottawa minister had been appointed chaplain to London's Own Battalion. Now, I do not know whether this is true or not, or anything about the minister in question, but don't you think that it is rather a slight on the Ministerial Alliance, a reflection on our London ministers, that no one was regarded as fit to be the chaplain of the London Battalion?"

"We have thrown open our churches and done everything in our power to help to recruit the battalion. Forty of the men of my own church are in it and probably some of you have more."

THE COLONEL'S NAME.

"I am personally interested in this from the fact that I volunteered to go, and passed the medical examination. Other London ministers did the same, and I'm sure anyone of forty would gladly have donned khaki and gone if asked to do so. Other cities have as many as five or six ministers chaplains of battalions. We haven't one in the whole Dominion, and when it comes to our own city battalion an outsider is appointed."

"As far as I was concerned, I was told everything was O.K., and all that was required was to get the recommendation of the colonel. On advice from headquarters some ten days ago I wrote the colonel, but to the present have received no answer.

"On my application, everything was filled in, I noticed, but a little square for the colonel's signature. He evidently did not fill it in, and this may have been true of the other cases. It is just possible no recommendation was made and that is why an outsider was appointed. But it won't look well outside when it is learned."

WILL TAKE UP QUESTION.

Rev Mr. Hosie of London Junction entirely agreed with Mr. Riddiford's view and moved that a protest from the Alliance be registered.

This was modified to the appointment of the executive to interview Lt. Colonel Graham and make inquiries regarding the reasons an outsider had been named for the appointment instead of a London man.

With reference to the reminder that Captain Graham of the 135 th Batt., is a Londoner. Mr. Riddliford replied that Mr. Graham had only been in the city a short time when appointed to the county battalion, and that the objection was especially to the appointment of an outsider as chaplain of the 142nd.

The motion re the appointment of the executive to wait on Lieut.-Col. Garham, also provided for the calling of a special meeting of the Alliance to deal with the question if considered advisable by the deputation.

MAMMA! DON'T YOU SEE YOU CHILD IS SICK, CONSTIPATED

Look at Tongue! Move Poisons From Liver and Bowels at Once

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Co."

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear, our figure "give us away."

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orlene in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orlene taken at meal times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissues from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of almost a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1900, Montreal, Can.

GIANT TREES OF JAMAICA.

They Shed Masses of Beautiful Silk Cotton Every Year.

The silk cotton trees of Jamaica are one of the most striking natural features of this beautiful island, and visitors express much curiosity concerning them. The fiber of the cotton is too short for textile uses, but its quality is delicate and fine.

The trees are most interesting in structure. They reach a height of 200 or 300 feet. It is the largest tree on the island, and the branches often overhang more than an acre of ground. Some of them are centuries old, dating back to the landing of the Spaniards. They have withstood the tropical winds of the region through the adaptation of their structure. The leaves are very few, and there are heavy masses of roots.

This giant tree flowers once a year. It bears a number of pods much the size and shape of a cucumber. These pods dry and burst, and out floats the beautiful cream colored silk cotton, covering the ground and sailing in the air for some distance. The seeds, of course, are borne on the silky filaments. This cotton is used at present only for pillows. Its use as guncotton has been spoken of.

The trees are often felled by the native Jamaicans and hewn into canoes, which last for generations.—Christian Science Monitor.

How Many Fathers Do This?

By Daniel Boone.
(President of Midland Life.)

I know a man who has five sons. He believes in Life Insurance, and this is what he did for the boys. When each of the boys reached the age of seventeen, he insured his life for $5,000 on the 20 PAYMENT LIFE PLAN in favor of the mother, and said to them: "My son, I am going to pay the premium on your policy and keep it in force until you go to work and are earning enough to pay the premium yourself, and then I am going to give the policy to you. You can continue your mother as beneficiary, or if you should marry, you can change it and make your wife the beneficiary. IT WILL BE A NEST EGG FOR YOU IN LATER YEARS, AND WILL BE AN INCENTIVE FOR YOU TO SAVE."

All of the sons are STILL LIVING. All of them are IN BUSINESS FOR THEMSELVES, and all of them are paying the premiums on their policies. Two of these policies will soon mature.

It was a wise thing for the father to do. IT GAVE THESE BOYS A START IN LIFE, and was the easiest and best possible method to assist them, and create a desire in their mind to save money.

This is a true story. I know it to be true because I am the man who wrote their applications.

If your Boy is not already insured, why not give him a start in Life by placing a policy for him in the Sun Life Assurance Company, Canada's Leading Life Assurance Company.

GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS

Regulate Kidneys AND Relieve Constipation

Gin Pills are acknowledged to have the largest sale of any proprietary medicine in Canada—an achievement solely due to their remarkable virtue as a Kidney and Bladder remedy.

But users of Gin Pills have discovered that this invaluable remedy also acts as a mild cathartic. The evidence of hundreds of letters we have received establishes the very logical fact that in compounding a medicine to heal and tone up the Kidneys and Bladder certain of the ingredients have a stimulating effect upon the other organs, especially the bowels.

It is important to know, in the case of constipated patients, that Gin Pills do not act harshly on the bowels; there is no griping, but a gradual and gentle restoration of the function. Try Gin Pills for constipation. In thus relieving the bowels, you safeguard yourself against possible Kidney trouble.

Gin Pills are 50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50 at your dealer's. A trial treatment will be sent upon request, to

GUARDING THE KING.

Old English Method's When the Monarch Was Taken Sick.

The law raises peculiar safeguards round the person of the English sovereign in case of sickness. They are mere survivals in the present settled order of government, but at one time the opportunity which the king's incapacity afforded aspirants to the throne or treason makers to shorten his days at a minimum of risk of detection made the precautions reasonable.

"If the king be taken sick," says Coke in his "Institutes," "there ought to be a warrant issue from the privy council, addressed to certain physicians and surgeons, authorizing them to administer to the royal patient potiones, syrupos, laxitavas, medicinas, etc. Still, none of these should be given except by consent and advice of the council, and they ought to set down in writing everything done and administered, and they should compound all drugs themselves and not intrust their preparation to any apothecary."

Coke wrote thus of precedent in the year 1610, and today the law is practically as he found it, although at the present time in practice the privy council simply hears reports of the progress of the king's malady and leaves actual treatment entirely to the physicians in direct charge of the case.—Exchange.

The wing seen in the picture is mounted on a wagon so as to facilitate the shifting from one position to another. DE LAVAL Cream Separators

Buying a Cream Separator is a good deal like hiring a man to work on your farm. A hired man that does poor work, and is lazy, is an expensive proposition, no matter how little you pay him. A cream separator that is hard to turn, hard to keep clean, and doesn't skim close would be expensive, even if you got it as a gift.

CREAMERYMEN AND DAIRYMEN ALL OVER THE WORLD RECOGNIZE THE SUPERIORITY OF THE DE LAVAL

About the only reason why any one ever buys any other cream separator is because they can get it a little cheaper. Then they soon find out they have lost ten times as much from separator inconvenience, poor skimming, and a machine that quickly wears out, as they saved in the beginning.
